Indo-American Charity Ball

Annual Ball
puts charity first

Giving back is the foundation of any healthy, thriving community, and Indo-Americans for Better Community (IndoABC) was founded for this purpose. Since 2000, the Fremont-based non-profit organization has been working to better society through volunteer work and raising funds to support local charities and service agencies, while showcasing Indian culture and values.

IndoABC Founder and President Dr. Rakesh Sharma believes that charity begins at home, and while it is wonderful to aid those in other communities and abroad, there are needs to be met in our own cities. IndoABC provides Indian-American residents with the knowledge and opportunities to help those in need and make a difference right where they live.

Sci-fi invades Sun Gallery

SUBMITTED BY CHRISTINE BENDER

Science/Fiction is an exhibition exploring the intersection of scientific inquiry, instrument manufacture, aesthetics and the fictional narratives that surround the real world and the extra-terrestrial. From Space exploration to Roswell, NM, both artists and scientists are obsessed with locating meaning in the beauty and the mystery of unknown worlds. Scientific instruments are expertly crafted sculptures whose function is to reveal the working mechanisms of the world around us. Cells seen at microscopic level are miniature landscapes that reference the geometry of our larger environment and are detailed with exquisite, gem-like beauty.

Don't Let Severe Infection Take Over Your Body!

According to the National Institutes of Health (NIH), severe sepsis strikes about 750,000 Americans every year, and the estimated death rate among those stricken with severe sepsis is greater than the number of annual deaths from prostate cancer, breast cancer and AIDS combined. Yet most Americans don't even know what sepsis is.

“Sepsis is a potentially life-threatening condition which occurs when the body has a severe infection coupled with an overly robust or ‘dysregulated’ immune response to that infection,” says Dr. Daniel Sweeney, a specialist in critical care medicine and infectious disease on the medical staff at Washington Hospital.

"The immune system releases molecules into the blood to combat infections," he explains. "It is believed that an overload of those molecules can cause widespread inflammation and impaired blood flow that damages the body's organs. There are basically three degrees of the condition, starting with sepsis and progressing through severe sepsis to septic shock."

Sepsis can progress rapidly. If the condition becomes severe, the patient can experience failure of one or more organs. The body's blood pressure can drop dramatically, sending the patient into septic shock, at which point multiple organs may fail and the patient can die.

"Anyone can get sepsis, but it is important to understand who is more likely to get it, and which patients are more likely to die," says Dr. Sweeney. "The elderly, infants and people who have weak immune systems or are undergoing chemotherapy are most vulnerable. People with diabetes or cancer or chronic illnesses such as kidney, lung or liver disease also are at increased risk.”

Any type of infection can lead to sepsis. Pneumonia and urinary tract infections are the most common causes of sepsis. Other common sources of sepsis are infections of the gastrointestinal tract and central nervous system infections such as meningitis. Even a person with an infected wound can develop sepsis, which is a special concern with patients who have diabetes because they may have poor blood circulation and an increased risk of non-healing wounds.

“Early diagnosis and treatment is as important in saving lives for people with sepsis as it is for victims of heart attacks and strokes,” Dr. Sweeney asserts. “That’s why it’s important for people to be aware of the causes, risk factors and symptoms of sepsis.”

To help people in the community learn more about sepsis, Washington Hospital is sponsoring a free seminar on the topic on Tuesday, May 13 from 1 to 3 p.m. The seminar will feature presentations by Dr. Sweeney and Dr. Kadeer Halimi, an emergency medicine specialist on staff in the Emergency Department at Washington Hospital. The seminar will be held in the Conrad E. Anderson, M.D. Auditorium at the Washington West Building, 2500 Mowry Avenue in Fremont.

101.3° F or, conversely, a body temperature below 95° F; chills and shaking; rapid or difficult breathing; a fast heart rate higher than 90 beats per minute; confusion or disorientation; low blood pressure, and a probable or confirmed infection.

"Some symptoms of sepsis can be a sign of other conditions, which can make it difficult to diagnose sepsis in the early stages," notes Dr. Sweeney, who has conducted preclinical research in sepsis.

"If a patient is having severe chest pain, it's fairly obvious that it could be a heart attack," he observes. "Or, if a patient is experiencing sudden arm or leg weakness and/or slurred speech, it's highly likely the patient is having a stroke. But with sepsis, we have to evaluate a combination of more vague or nonspecific symptoms, and they can vary from case to case. For example, many—if not most – patients with sepsis will have a fever, but this not always the case. In fact, some patients with sepsis actually can have an abnormally low body temperature. The symptoms also can vary depending on the original source of infection.”

Many sepsis cases are first encountered in hospital emergency rooms.

“When a patient in the ER shows signs of sepsis, and we know the person has a chronic condition, we are very vigilant,” Dr. Halimi says. “Sometimes, though, we are surprised to see sepsis in people who are generally quite healthy. Recently, for example, we saw a 34-year-old patient with symptoms of a respiratory infection that turned out to be a serious case of influenza.

Washington Hospital Celebrates National Nurses Week

When you're a patient in a hospital, many different individuals provide specific expertise for your care and recovery. But the individual a patient sees most often is a nurse. Nurses are there 24 hours a day, tending to patients, administering medications, overseeing monitoring systems, working with physicians, supporting families of patients and generally making sure the patient's medical needs are met.

May 6 – 12 is National Nurses Week, dedicated to honoring and celebrating contributions nurses make to patient care. At Washington Hospital, nurses will be honored and thanked on May 9 during a series of teas with the hospital's senior executives.

The theme of this year's National Nurses Week is "Nurses Leading the Way..." which recognizes the growing leadership role nurses take in providing healthcare services to a community.

"Washington Hospital is proud of its nursing staff," Santos said. She noted that most Washington Hospital nurses have bachelor's degrees in nursing and have specialized certifications in their field of study. Many also have master's degrees and some are PhDs. Most of the hospital's nurses are affiliated with national professional nursing organizations and participate in continuing education programs to keep current with developments in nursing and medicine.

In keeping with this year's theme, Santos noted that nurses "lead the way" in many ways. Nurses provide leadership at the patient care level, helping to direct patient care, taking on evidence-based projects to improve patient outcomes, providing leadership in hospitals to improve the physical environment of care.

At the bedside, nurses provide expert knowledge of disease treatment and patient care and, in the community, nurses work to educate patients, families and the general public on ways to improve health conditions and how to prevent health deterioration from chronic diseases. Nationally, nurses have been CEOs of hospital facilities, researchers and members of state and federal legislatures and administrations, Santos added.

Because of the outstanding work by the hospital's nurses, Washington Hospital has been recognized as a "Magnet Hospital" by the American Nurses Credentialing Center. Being named a "Magnet Hospital" is the highest of awards and one few hospitals achieve.

Santos said magnet hospitals are different than the typical hospital and focus on five distinct attributes:

- Transformational Leadership — effective

- and "transformational" style of nursing management
- Structural Empowerment — having the structure in place for nurses to perform at the highest level
- Exemplary Professional Practice — this is a place where nurses take ownership of their practice and provide care at an advanced level
- New Knowledge, Innovation and Improvements — nurses never stop trying to make their practice better and use evidence-based knowledge to improve satisfaction and outcomes
- Empirical Quality Results — outcomes are measured in a scientific way

While National Nurses Week puts a specific spotlight on nurses, Santos said, Washington Hospital invites all members of the community to recognize and honor nurses as important leaders every day throughout the year in meeting the nation's health care needs.

Washington Hospital nurses work as a team to provide the highest quality of care to patients. Together, these men and women are helping make our community healthier and stronger, one patient at a time.

Learn about Painful Knee Arthritis—One of Our Most Disabling Conditions

May 14 class on treatment options is free and open to the public

Knee arthritis is one of the top five most disabling conditions for American adults, according to the U.S. Centers for Disease Control (CDC). A 2010 study by the CDC found that nearly half, or 46 percent, of all Americans are likely to develop symptoms of knee arthritis some time during their life. The study also reported that nearly two in three obese adults may develop knee arthritis.

CPR 7 Training held at Newark Jr. High

SUBMITTED BY KERRY KNIGHT

Cardiac arrest is the leading cause of death in the United States, killing more than 300,000 people annually. In Alameda County only 28 percent of the victims that sustain cardiac arrest receive CPR in the critical minutes before professional help arrives. Without CPR, a person's chance of survival decreases by 7-10 percent every minute.
Over 2,500 Newark residents were trained in CPR this year through the Alameda County sponsored CPR7 program. Newark Junior High School teachers trained 444 seventh graders in CPR during their science classes. Each student was given their own personal CPR kit, which included a manikin and a training DVD, to keep and practice with. In turn, the students went home and trained 2,080 friends and relatives. Last year the junior high trained 1,678 Newark residents through the CPR7 program. Karina Gallo set a new school record training 69 people this year.

Newark business partners Tom and Kelly Thomas, owners of the "Love at First Slice Pizza Parlor," donated large pizzas to each of the 7th grade teachers to award the top CPR7 trainers in each of their classes.

This project is funded by SB 12, which are funds generated by speeding tickets on California Highways and no public school funds are used for this project. The CPR7 kits cost $35 each.

Don't Let Severe Infection Take Over Your Body!

He had no other risk factors for developing sepsis, yet he quickly went into full-blown sepsis.”

If sepsis is suspected, blood tests can be used to evaluate a number of factors that are common with sepsis:

- A high white blood cell count indicating infection.
- A low red blood cell count (anemia).
- Various chemicals in the blood that may be evidence of poor liver or kidney function caused by organ failure.
- An abnormally high blood level of lactate, an acid that is produced when oxygen levels in the body drop.
- Blood clots.

“We also use blood tests to figure out what types of bacteria are growing in the body and which antibiotics are appropriate to treat the specific underlying infections,” Halimi says.

Other tests might include urine analysis for urinary tract infections, mucus sample testing for respiratory infections or sampling of wound secretions in infected wounds. If the original site of infection is not obvious, the doctor may order diagnostic imaging tests such as X-rays, computerized tomography (CT) scans, ultrasound or magnetic resonance imaging (MRI).

Early Treatment Is Key
“In patients with suspected sepsis, we may start treatment right away with intravenous fluids to raise the patient’s blood pressure and broad-spectrum antibiotics that kill many types of bacteria,” says Dr. Halimi. “Timing is of upmost importance, and we generally have to initiate therapy as soon as possible, administering fluids and antibiotics within three hours.”

After initial treatment in the ER, sepsis patients generally are admitted to the Intensive Care Unit (ICU) or to medical wards or for continued care. After learning the results of blood testing, the physician may switch the patient from a broad-spectrum antibiotic to one that is specifically effective against the particular bacteria causing the infection.

If the patient’s blood pressure remains too low, even after receiving IV fluids, the doctor may order a vasopressor medication to constrict the blood vessels and help increase blood pressure. Other medications to treat sepsis patients might include corticosteroids to control inflammation, insulin to maintain stable blood sugar levels, and drugs that modify the immune system’s responses.

Some patients with severe sepsis-related problems may require additional treatment such as a ventilator to help them breathe or dialysis for kidney failure. Surgery may be needed to remove abscesses (collections of pus) or other local sites of infection. Patients also may require ongoing treatment for underlying conditions such as diabetes.

Working to Reduce Sepsis Mortality
Washington Hospital has taken an aggressive approach to reducing the number of deaths due to sepsis, focusing especially on efforts in the ER and ICU, developing protocols and instructing staff to recognize the signs of sepsis and treat it aggressively.

“We have a standard protocol of screening for sepsis in every patient who is admitted to the hospital,” says Dr. Halimi. “That even includes patients who are admitted for a surgical procedure, whether or not they show any signs of infection.”

The hospital also works in partnership with other organizations to promote better management of patients with severe sepsis.

“Most recently, we just completed a study in collaboration with Highland Hospital to evaluate how we can teach paramedics to assess patients for sepsis while they are on the way to the ER,” Dr. Halimi says. “We want to train paramedics to begin treating patients who may have sepsis right away with fluids to stabilize their blood pressure and cooling measures to reduce fevers. We also want to establish a ‘code sepsis’ warning for paramedics to promptly alert the receiving hospital that the incoming patient may have sepsis.”

Dr. Halimi says that not all people who think they might have early sepsis need to rush to the ER, however.

“Most primary care physicians should be aware of the symptoms of sepsis, and they usually know their patients well, including their medications and any chronic conditions,” he says. “If you have any reason to suspect sepsis, you might want to call your primary care provider or advice nurse first before rushing to the hospital. It really is important to catch sepsis early, though. I tell patients that they know their own bodies better than anyone else. If you get a cough or cold, and it continues to get worse instead of better, see your doctor. And people with chronic conditions or other risk factors for sepsis need to be even more aware.”

What is a 21st Century Education?

OPINION

LAUREL SKURKO

March was an important month for educators and students across the country: this is the time when elementary- and high school decision letters come back to the students and families who had submitted their applications. Many learn which schools accepted them, and then, over the course of a one-week period, make a final decision about the school they/their children will be attending. What is on many people’s minds is “the future of our education.” We ask ourselves, “Will the school that these students attend provide them with the skills and qualities they will need for college (four years from now) and life after college (10-60 years out)?

The term that educators and policy makers use to define the concept of an education that is relevant into the future is “a 21st Century Education.”

When our family started the high school application process last year, I started to hear this term for the first time. As a member of the business community, I had not been exposed to it. It was my hunch that this was an industry-specific term. To test this assumption, I asked my business colleagues what the term meant to them: most replied that they had never heard it before, nor had the educational professionals in other countries to whom I had posed the same question.

I decided to learn more about the concept in two ways: (1) by looking at online educational resources; and (2) by surveying business and education professionals across several industries and cultures to see what they thought what skills would be needed by those in the work force into the future.

I found when looking at educational resources, the results were fairly straightforward: it seems that educators had supplemented the “3R’s” (Reading, Writing and Arithmetic) with three additional zones. These included the “4C’s” (Creativity, Collaboration, Communication and Critical thinking), along with other points that seemed logical to the uninitiated. These included “Life and career skills,” in addition to another category called “Information, media and technology skills.”

While this sounds comprehensive, one has to wonder if there may be shifts in priorities as we continue to travel through the 21st Century (we still have over 85 years to go). There will be inevitable changes in what we consider crucial to a 21st century education because of natural developments in the world around us. It is for this reason that I believe that monitoring the market for our educational system over time is essential.

With this in mind, I took a simple, second approach. This method involved surveying people in various industries – those making decisions about how students are educated and who will be hired. I asked these decision-makers how they defined a 21st Century Education.

Over the last couple of weeks, when, in the normal course of doing business, I ran into one of these individuals, I asked the following questions:

“How do you define a ‘21st Century Education’?”

“When you are hiring people to work with your teams, what skills and qualities are most relevant? What kind of training do you hope is available for students in schools in our community?”

The first question, unless I had asked an educator, was met with a puzzled look. This is the reason I asked the question the second way. It opened up a wealth of impassioned responses.

Here, I am sharing a small sampling of some of those an-

On April 7, 2014, at about 3:35 p.m., a robbery occurred in the parking lot of the shopping complex located at 1650 Decoto Road in Union City. The victim was walking towards a bank located in the area and was approached by the suspect who demanded money from the victim. The suspect told the victim that he had a gun and that he would shoot the victim if he did not comply. The victim, in fear for his safety, gave the suspect his property. The suspect then sprayed the victim in the face with pepper spray and fled on foot.

The suspect is described as a Hispanic male adult, 25 - 30 years of age, 5 feet 10 inches tall, with a medium build and a goatee. The suspect was wearing a black hooded sweatshirt and black jeans.

Anyone with information relating to this crime is asked to contact the Union City Police Department Investigations Unit at 510-471-1365.

Thursday, April 17

At 7:23 p.m., Officer responded to Drigon Park to investigate an assault with a deadly weapon call. Dispatch received multiple calls of a male suspect holding a knife and threatening to kill people at the park. Apparently the suspect and another male got into an argument after the suspect's dog attempted to attack dogs at the park. Arriving officers located and arrested Ronald Epps (Hayward resident) for threatening to kill people at the dog park.

Friday, April 18

Officers conducted a probation search at an address on Holt Street at 1:01 p.m. Officers were attempting to locate a registered sex offender that failed to comply with the conditions of his probation. Officers found Truman Jefferson (Union City resident) hiding in the attic of the residence. Initially, Mr. Jefferson refused to come down out of the attic. Mr. Jefferson had a change of heart when he learned that a Police K-9 would be sent in to retrieve him if he failed to come out. Officers were then able to arrest Mr. Jefferson without further incident.

Saturday, April 19

At 7:16 a.m., Officers were dispatched to the area of Meteor Drive to investigate a vehicle fire. The vehicle was fully engulfed in fire as Officers arrived at the scene. The fire appears to be the result of a mechanical issue. The vehicle was towed from the scene for being a hazard.

Monday, April 21

At 7:52 a.m., the victim

started his vehicle and left it running in the driveway. The victim removed some items from his vehicle and took the property inside of his home. The victim returned a few moments later to see his vehicle being driven away by an Asian male suspect. The stolen vehicle is a grey 2012 Toyota Camry (license # 6YHN626).

Thursday, April 24

At 4:18 p.m., Officer Mangan and Officer Seto contacted a male near 1990 Decoto Road. The Officers contacted John Ellstrom (San Rafael resident) for drinking alcohol in public. Officers found two morphine pills on the thirsty San Rafael resident. Mr. Ellstrom learned that you should not drink in public if you have illegal drugs on your person. Officers ultimately gave Mr. Ellstrom a ride to jail.

Friday, April 25

Officers responded to investigate a robbery in the area of Ellen Way at 10:10 p.m. The suspect simulated having a firearm in his waistband as he took the victim's cell phone, wallet, and keys. Officers canvassed the area and were unable to locate the suspect on Friday. On Saturday (04/26/14) at 5 p.m., Officers were dispatched to the area of Alice Way to investigate a suspicious vehicle. Arriving Officers contacted two juveniles sitting inside of a vehicle. Officers noticed that one of the juveniles matched the suspect description from the prior robbery. The victim responded and positively identified the suspect from the original incident. The victim's stolen property was also recovered inside the suspect's vehicle. This incident is a great example of how something as simple as reporting a suspicious vehicle can result in a significant arrest.

Monday, April 28

At 12:29 a.m., Sergeant Derting noticed a vehicle parked illegally in the area of E Street and 10th Street. A check of the license plate revealed the vehicle had been flagged in police databases as a felony "Armed and Dangerous" vehicle. Hayward Police Department listed the vehicle in our automated systems after it was involved in an armed robbery in the City of Hayward. Sergeant Derting ultimately detained Jason Guzman (Union City resident) inside the vehicle. A replica semi-automatic handgun was located inside of the glove box of the vehicle. Hayward Police Department responded and took over the investigation.

Tuesday, April 29

Officers responded to Union Landing Shopping Center to investigate an attempted carjacking at 10:14 p.m. The victim was getting out of his vehicle near TGI Friday's when he was confronted by a male suspect. The suspect threatened to kill the victim if he did not turn over his car keys. The victim was able to close the door on his vehicle and drive away from the suspect. The victim then called Union City Police Department as he kept an eye on the suspect in the parking lot. The victim used his cellular telephone to direct responding Officers over to the suspect. The suspect was arrested and identified as Javiejon Rodriguez (Union City resident).

Anyone with information on local crime or any of the listed incidents should contact the Investigations Division at 510-675-5247. Those wishing to remain anonymous can contact the tips line by calling 510-675-5207 or email tips@unioncity.org.

Learn about Painful Knee Arthritis—One of Our Most Disabling Conditions

Knee osteoarthritis is a common form of arthritis that involves degenerative changes of the knee joint, wearing away the cartilage that cushions the joint. The study also found that “arthritis prevalence increased with age and was higher among women than men in every age group,” the CDC states on its web site. Of those who have disabling knee osteoarthritis, about 80 percent experience some limitation of movement, such as difficulty climbing a flight of stairs or walking three city blocks.

“Many people who suffer from knee arthritis are unaware of the multiple non-surgical treatment options available that can significantly improve their quality of life,” said Michael Goldin, M.D., a sports medicine fellowship-trained physiatrist with Washington Township Medical Foundation. Dr. Goldin specializes in the diagnosis and non-surgical treatment of musculoskeletal conditions.

On Wednesday, May 14 at 7 p.m., Dr. Goldin will lead a free class on Knee Arthritis sponsored by the Washington Women's Center. The forum is open to the public and will be held in the Women's Center Conference Room in the Washington West building next to Washington Hospital, 2500 Mowry Ave., Suite 145, in Fremont. To reserve your spot, go online to www.whhs.com/event/class-registration or call (800) 963-7070.

“The purpose of the class is to explain the various treatment options for knee osteoarthritis, from the most conservative to more aggressive approaches,” explained Dr. Goldin. “The American College of Sports Medicine promotes the platform ‘Exercise is Medicine.’ The development of a personalized treatment plan can help increase a patient's physical activity and gain all the benefits associated with being more active.”

People who attend the class will learn what knee arthritis is and how the condition is diagnosed. Effective treatment starts with the right diagnosis, according to Dr. Goldin.

“Whenever I see a patient with possible knee arthritis, I spend a significant amount of time explaining the condition and reviewing treatment options,” he said. “In addition to taking imaging studies, it's critical to do a thorough history and physical exam to rule out alternative pathology and correlate the clinical presentation with diagnostic studies.”

Dr. Goldin emphasized that one of the most important treatment options is exercise. Regular exercise strengthens the muscles around the knee, which helps to take stress off the joint. It also helps to keep the muscles around the knee joint flexible, which decreases the passive stress and force across the joint.

“Studies have shown that people with knee arthritis who follow a prescribed regimen of exercise can do very well,” he remarked. “However, it can be challenging to get people to adhere to this regimen.”

Physical therapy can also be helpful. This may include modalities such as soft tissue mobilization, cold and hot packs, electrical stimulation, ice and ultrasound.

“When I prescribe physical therapy, I frequently recommend minimal to no modalities,” Dr. Goldin cautioned. “The reason I prescribe physical therapy is to help a patient develop a therapeutic exercise plan. Muscles are designed to be used. If we do not use them, they get weaker. Furthermore, as we get older, muscles tend to weaken more easily. It's not fair, but it is a reality of aging.”

At the seminar, he will also discuss numerous other treatment options for knee arthritis. One is to do nothing and put up with the symptoms.

“One option is to perform no intervention, although most patients prefer to start some sort of treatment by the time they see a specialist,” Dr. Goldin advised.

Other treatment approaches include:

- Oral or topical medication: Dr. Goldin will talk about the associated risks and benefits for each.
- Foot inserts or various types of knee braces.
- Injections: Two of the more common injectable medications are cortisone and hyaluronic acid.

The literature has shown that cortisone injections can bring pain relief and functional improvement for about up to about 3 weeks. However, this functional improvement and pain has not been shown to last for more than a few weeks, according to Dr. Goldin. Hyaluronic acid, which has a mechanism of action that is not completely understood, has been shown to reduce pain and improve function for a longer duration than cortisone.

“However, with this type of injection, there is a potential for joint capsule irritation,” pointed out Dr. Goldin. “I often add a small amount of a steroid to help reduce the risk of this complication.”

At the seminar, Dr. Goldin will also talk about some of the newer treatments for knee arthritis. This includes concentrating growth factors in the blood and then injecting these directly into the affected joint capsule. The key to all procedures is selection of the appropriate candidate, and Dr. Goldin always reviews the positive and negative prognostic factors of each patient.

When the symptoms are not sufficiently controlled with these options, he will often recommend seeing an orthopedic surgeon.

“I am not an orthopedic surgeon, and therefore do not like to make surgical recommendations. I will often explain to patients that a surgical consultation does not necessarily mean a definite operation. However, it is a good opportunity to talk with a surgical specialist and find out the various surgical treatment options.”

“The upcoming class on Knee Arthritis will be helpful, especially for people who would like to learn about non-surgical treatment options for knee osteoarthritis,” concluded Dr. Goldin.

PROBLEM WITH YOUR AIR-CONDITIONING?

Problems with A/C systems often stem from low refrigerant levels caused by leaks. This potential culprit can be detected with a refrigerant recharge and dye injection (to locate leaks). If pressures at full charge are either too low or too high, it may be indicative of an internal restriction (of expansion valves and receiver driers, due to water vapor in the system that freezes and blocks refrigerant flow). With a full charge at 70 degrees F. ambient temperature, pressures should be about 35-40 psi on the low side and 145-160 psi on the high side. For every 5 degrees F. that the ambient temperature is warmer, pressures should be 5 psi higher, and vice versa.

Summer is coming. If your AC needs a little help, you're better off getting it fixed now than in August. Bring your car into BAY STAR AUTO CARE right away. We will make sure your car is in great shape for the summer driving season, including a check of the air conditioner. Regular maintenance now can save you from big repair bills later. It can also prevent getting par-boiled in a traffic jam on a hot summer day. Give us a call at today for an appointment.

HINT: If an A/C system is not fully charged, the compressor will often shut down automatically.

You Like I

BY STEVE SCHAEFER

Pickup trucks are a big profit center for General Motors, so when they redesigned the GMC Sierra, they were careful not to change too much. The 2014 is all-new, but you will recognize it at the job site and in your neighbor's driveway.

The Sierra stands more than six feet tall and weighs nearly three tons. It's a real challenge driving one around town, maneu-and 17 Combined. I averaged 13.7 miles per gallon, making it one of my least efficient commuter vehicles. But that's not what it's made to do. The EPA gives the truck a 6 for Smog and just a 3 for Greenhouse Gas.

Driving a GMC Sierra such as my Iridium Metallic test Crew Cab is a lot like being a 7-foot-2 NBA basketball player. You have to be careful, but you also get the best view. In town, the world is not designed for you, but on the open vering through parking lots and fitting it into increasingly slim parking spaces.

Choose from Standard, Double or Crew Cab. The Double Cab, a compromise between the single front row and the capacious Crew Cab, now uses front-hinged doors, which aid entry and exit in the inevitable tight parking situations. The spacious Crew Cab is the choice of more than 60 percent of buyers, and now offers a standard 5-foot-8-inch and a new 6-foot-6-inch bed.

Upgrading to the Denali level brings a unique grille, 20-inch chrome wheels, chrome exhaust tip and body-color mirrors outside, and projector-style headlamps. Inside, you enjoy leather seating, bright door sills, and real aluminum trim. "Denali" is embossed into the front seats and appears on the steering wheel as well. You also get a customizable driver display, where you can decide what you want shown on your instrument panel.

You can pick from the standard 4.3-liter V6 or two mighty V8s; all are members of the redesigned Ecotec 3 family. The 4.3-liter V6 provides 285 horsepower and 305 lb.-ft. of torque, the latter number a segment high, per GM. Step up to the 5.3-liter V8, with 355 horsepower and 383 lb.-ft. of torque available. For $1,995, you can upgrade to the mighty 6.2-liter V8 with 420 horsepower and 460 lb.-ft. of torque. Set up with the trailering Equipment Package, a Sierra with the 6.2-liter engine can tow up to 12,000 pounds.

The fuel economy numbers for the big V8 with four-wheel drive are 14 City, 20 Highway, road, it's the best seat in the house.

Freeway cruising is fine, especially with the quietness in the cabin. That comes from special efforts at aerodynamics, including new mirror shapes and extra care with the gaps between the cab and the bed. The doors are triple sealed.

The Sierra Denali is a truck, with an upright, straightforward dashboard and large rubber-over-mold knobs that are easy to grip, even with gloves on. But, details and materials are more car-like and exude a more luxurious feeling. Customers can take their Sierra Denali on a Saturday night date or to the lumber yard during the week.

You can order two- or four-wheel drive. My tester had the latter, controlled by a small knob on the left of the dash. I had no opportunity to use the all-wheel traction, but the system has a two-speed transfer case and automatically locking rear differential.

Cars today are full of safety devices to prevent collisions, but the Sierra Denali offered something I had never seen (or felt)

Over the past 21 years, Steve Schaefer has tested more than 1,000 cars and published a weekly story on every one. As a teenager, he visited car dealers' back lots to catch a glimpse of the new models as they first rolled off the transporter. He is a founding member of the Western Automotive Journalists. before. It's called Driver Alert Seat, and it actually vibrates the lower cushion of the driver's seat to warn of impending danger. Paired up with Forward Collision Alert and the Lane Departure Warning systems, you can get a real massage if you're in tight quarters or the guy in front stops suddenly. GM's research found that drivers might respond more quickly to this kind of feedback. It certainly gets your attention!

The Standard cab with the base 4.3-liter engine and two-wheel drive starts at $28,265. The Crew Cab model begins at $36,690. My Sierra Denali 1500 4WD Crew Cab, with the 6.2-liter V8, power sunroof, off-road suspension package, trailer brake control, all-terrain tires, and the cushion-buzzing Driver Alert Package, came to $55,185. All prices include nearly $1,100 in shipping costs.

Big pickups are about as American as you can get, but in this case, the Sierra is built in Silao, Mexico. However, 40 percent of its parts come from north of the border.

The new GMC trucks are impressive, even if they look a lot like the old ones. The sheer number of possible configurations, entertainment options, and safety features is mind boggling. With Ford and Chrysler in their sights, this Sierra, along with its Chevrolet cousin, is GM's finest entry.

'SlotZilla' zip line opens in downtown Las Vegas

BY MICHELLE RINDELS

LAS VEGAS (AP), A zip line that swoops riders past the vintage casinos of downtown Las Vegas and under the giant video canopy of the Fremont Street Experience is now open for business.

The lower zip lines on the $12 million SlotZilla attraction opened to the public Sunday after 14 months of construction, while a set of higher lines is expected to open a little later this spring.

"People are really enjoying it," said Fremont Street Experience spokesman Thomas Bruny, who pointed out more typical zip lines take tourists over forests and lakes. "This one is unique because nowhere else are you flying over people and under the largest video canopy in the world."

The high-flying rides start from a 12-story tower designed to look like a giant slot machine. Riders can now take the 77-foot-high zip lines, in which visitors are harnessed in a sitting position and glide 850 lateral feet to a platform near The D and 4 Queens casinos.

A "zoom line" opening later this spring launches riders from 114 feet up and sends them soaring in a horizontal "Superman" position 1,700 feet across the entire pedestrian mall. That attraction uses a power boost to ensure riders make it the full distance of the wire.

Zip line rides cost $20, while zoom line rides will cost $30.

The attraction is an expansion of a much smaller, temporary zip line that has for two years scooted families, newlyweds and Elvis impersonators beneath a long metal canopy that displays an hourly light show.

That ride was intended to be a 30-day novelty, but it proved such a crowd pleaser the business community began working to make it permanent.

One-Day Giving Spree

HERS Breast Cancer Fdn.

Kidango, Inc.

Math Science Nucleus

Hayward:

Community Child Care Coordinating Council of Alameda County

Family Emergency Shelter Coalition (FESCO)

"As part of our role as a leader broadening and deepening charitable giving in the East Bay and changing the lives of disadvantaged and underserved people, we aim to support important causes and needs these organizations are addressing," said Janet Y. Spears, the Foundation's interim President & Chief Executive Officer.

From the stroke of midnight on May 5th through the stroke of midnight on May 6th, anyone can go to www.eastbaygives.org and contribute to one or more participating nonprofit organizations doing outstanding work in education, economic development, youth causes, the environment, health, the arts, and more.

The site contains everything you need to know about how to donate, background on participating nonprofits, and how East Bay Gives works, said Spears.

The East Bay Community Foundation, one of the oldest charitable institutions in northern California, and one of largest sources of philanthropic support for the East Bay, was established in 1928.

"Many people wrongly believe that you have to be wealthy to give back and have an impact, but the truth is, the combination of many smaller donations can make a huge difference," Spears added.

Library launches Tots Touch!

SUBMITTED BY DESIREE SELLATI

Thanks to tablet technology, toddlers at the Fremont Main and Newark Libraries are tapping, touching and swiping as part of Alameda County Library's new early literacy pilot project. There among the picture books, parents and children now have one more option – pre-loaded iPads with educational apps for the very young – to interact and build pre-reading skills at their local library.

Research shows that children need positive ways to engage with parents and caregivers – by reading, talking and playing – to learn about their environment. For babies and toddlers, Alameda County Library's Tots Touch! Project extends the learning experience with enhanced (animated and narrated) picture books and educational games recommended by the American Library Association, Common Sense Media and youth services librarians.

Over the next six months, the Tots Touch! Tablets will be available for families to use in the Library. After the trial period, Library administrators will assess the project and evaluate whether to use it as a model in other Alameda County libraries. For more information, call (510) 745-1504.

10 Things to Know for the California primary

By The Associated Press

Your look at the top issues in California's June 3 primary election.

1. PRIMARY PROVIDES FIRST TOP-TWO GOVERNOR'S CONTEST

The June 3 primary will be the first in which the governor's race and the seven other statewide constitutional offices, including attorney general and secretary of state, fall under California's new primary system. The top two vote-getters, regardless of party affiliation, will move on to the November general election.

2. BALLOT WILL BE DEVOID OF CITIZEN INITIATIVES

This year's primary also is notable because it is the first in decades with no statewide citizen initiatives on the ballot. The Legislature's Democratic majority passed legislation in 2011 that requires all citizen initiatives and referendums to go on the November general election ballot, where they can be decided by a far larger number of voters. The two measures on this year's primary ballot were placed there by the Legislature.

3. MORE RACES WILL BE COMPETITIVE

The independent process to draw political boundaries approved by California voters has made many of the races highly competitive, with about a half dozen congressional seats and an equal number of legislative seats identified as essentially up for grabs this year.

4. PARTIES BATTLE OVER SUPERMAJORITY CONTROL

Democrats hold a two-thirds supermajority in the state Assembly but are two seats shy of that in the Senate after three Democrats ran into serious legal trouble and were suspended. Republicans are pushing hard in a handful of legislative races to prevent Democrats from holding a supermajority in at least one of the chambers.

5. RACE FOR SCHOOLS CHIEF A CONTEST OF COMPETING VISIONS

Democratic state schools Superintendent Tom Torlakson, a former teacher with strong union backing, is being challenged by a fellow Democrat, Marshall Tuck, who wants schools and parents to have more freedom and wants to tie teacher evaluations to student performance.

6. SECRETARY OF STATE RACE DRAWS CROWDED FIELD

The usually quiet race for the office overseeing elections and campaign finance has turned into a flashpoint for political reform and government transparency after numerous lawmakers found themselves in serious legal trouble this year. Top candidates include a Republican, two Democrats and an independent.

7. REPUBLICANS Ponder COURSE CHANGE IN GOVERNOR'S RACE

California Republicans are trying for a reboot after years of sliding voter registration and election losses, and this year's governor's race provides the biggest chance yet to show how far the change message has played with the party faithful. Will they choose tea party favorite and ardent gun-rights advocate Tim Donnelly or former U.S. Treasury official Neel Kashkari, and Indian-American who is moderate on social issues?

8. STATE WANTS LOCAL GOVERNMENTS TO PAY FOR PUBLIC ACCESS

Proposition 42 would amend the state constitution to require cities, counties, school districts and other local agencies to comply with state laws to make documents available and open their meetings to the public. They also would be required to cover the costs for doing so, a provision that has raised concerns among some local government representatives.

9. DEMOCRATS CONTINUE TO DOMINATE

Voter registration continues to lean heavily Democratic in California. As of April, 43.5 percent of voters were registered as Democrats and 28.6 were registered as Republicans, while 21.1 percent have chosen no party preference.

10. VOTER TURNOUT EXPECTED TO BE LOW

The Public Policy Institute of California says the state's primary election turnout has averaged about 10 points higher than in the rest of country over the past 30 years, but that could change with all citizen initiatives switched to the November ballot. Turnout was the second lowest on record in 2012, and the absence of initiatives in the future could cause it to drop as much as 7 percentage points.

Brown: Little state could have done to keep Toyota

By JULIET WILLIAMS ASSOCIATED PRESS

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AGov. Jerry Brown said Friday that it appears there was little California could have done to keep Toyota, the world's largest automaker, from moving its U.S. headquarters and about 3,000 jobs to Texas.

"Change is inevitable," he told reporters after addressing the Los Angeles Area Chamber of Commerce.

Brown cited comments from senior Toyota officials who said the decision to consolidate operations in Plano, a suburb of Dallas, was based partly on its proximity to company manufacturing plants in Texas, Kentucky, Mississippi and Indiana. Texas Gov. Rick Perry said the state offered Toyota $40 million in incentives, and the mayor of Plano said the city aggressively courted Toyota.

"So, you know, this is a company decision, whether – why and how – I think they explained it," Brown said. "But now, if you don't want to believe them, they gave their reasons – and their reasons were consolidation."

Republicans have said Toyota's move is another sign of California's inhospitable business climate and failure to aggressively court companies, even as Texas and New York target California businesses with what they say are more favorable tax and regulatory environments.

The two leading Republicans who are campaigning for governor in hopes of challenging Brown in November criticized him for failing to enact policies that retain major companies such as Toyota.

Neel Kashkari, a former U.S. Treasury official, called Brown's comments "unbelievable. It's so dismissive, and it's disrespectful to the millions of Californians who are looking for jobs."

"That's the next question: Why aren't we manufacturing Toyota vehicles in California? It's this benign resignation that the destruction of the middle-class is inevitable and there's no role for the governor to play in turning it around," Kashkari said Friday.

Assemblyman Tim Donnelly, R-Twin Peaks, said earlier this week that California is "watching job after job after job leave without a fight."

Brown pointed Friday to other signs that he said indicate a robust economy and strong investment in California.

"We're getting 60 percent of the venture capital. We're the number one place for direct foreign investment in the United States. Do we have everything in all respects? No. But we have an abundance that constitutes a $2 trillion economy," he said. "Is that any reason for complacency? No. That's why we have GO-Biz, that's why the legislature meets every year. And I'm certainly always on the look-out for things that can improve California."

Palo Alto, California-based electric car-maker Tesla Motors Inc. recently announced it is considering four states as sites for two new battery-making facilities: Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and Nevada.

Toyota will maintain about 2,300 jobs in California after the company settles into its new corporate campus in late 2016 or early 2017.

School chief race tests reach of unions, reformers

LISA LEFF ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO (AP), Tom Torlakson, the veteran lawmaker seeking a second term as California's elected superintendent of schools, and Marshall Tuck, a former charter school executive hoping to unseat him, are both Democrats.

The two agree the state spends too little on education, favor giving local districts more discretion about how to use their funding and share support for the Common Core State Standards, the national learning benchmarks that have generated a backlash over whether they undermine states' rights.

As they prepare to compete along with a Republican candidate in the June primary, however, Tuck and Torlakson's backgrounds and perspectives on a handful of hot-button issues are making the non-partisan race a referendum on whether change is coming quickly enough in a state where the traditional might of labor unions is being challenged by increasingly restive education reformers.

Tuck, 40, who has never held elected office, counts himself among the latter. A graduate of Harvard's business school, he spent five years leading Green Dot Public Schools, a Los Angeles charter school operator, and six years as CEO of a nonprofit founded by former Los Angeles Mayor Antonio Villaraigosa that took control of 17 poorly performing public schools.

He says his experience running schools that were staffed with unionized teachers but given flexibility in terms of recruiting, setting curriculum and measuring results persuaded him that state government stifles innovation in education more than promotes it.

"Is Sacramento creating the conditions for superintendents, principals and teachers locally to be most successful? The reality is they are not right now, and I don't think the current people leading are capable of leading in that area," he said.

Unlike Torlakson, who has been endorsed by California's two main teachers unions and the state Democratic Party, Tuck opposes California's generous teacher tenure system, has challenged the law that bases teacher layoffs on seniority and believes strongly that student's standardized test scores should be a factor in teacher evaluations.

He also supports California's pioneering "parent trigger" law, which Torlakson voted against when he was a member of the state Assembly. The 2010 law allows parents at low-performing schools to petition for a takeover that can include installing new leadership, closure or conversion to a charter school.

These positions don't make him anti-union, just impatient with the status quo, Tuck said. He has secured endorsements from the Los Angeles Times and San Francisco Chronicle.

"A lot of people are like, 'Hey, why wouldn't you just wait until 2018 versus going up against an incumbent?'" he said. "I'm like, 'Are you kidding? We have 2.5 million kids who can't read or write at grade level.'"

Torlakson, 64, spent eight years as a high school science teacher in the San Francisco Bay Area before entering politics full-time in 1980. He said he has earned the chance to follow through on the major policy shifts upon which California has embarked since he was elected as superintendent of public instruction in 2010.

During a second term, Torlakson said he would prioritize additional funding for implementing Common Core, ensure an effective transition to the new school funding formula that directs more money to schools with the most disadvantaged students, and continue championing programs that meld academics with career preparation.

Torlakson also touts his productive relationships with the unions, with Gov. Jerry Brown, with the Brown-appointed state Board of Education and with former colleagues in the Legislature, where he served for 14 years. All played a role in securing passage of Proposition 30, the temporary tax increases that helped restore school funding cuts made during the recession, he said.

"I'm a great advocate for kids. People believe me, they trust me because I'm a teacher, and as a coach I know all about creating teams," he said. "So I have the experience, we are living up to all of the promises we made when I ran and more, and we are continuing the momentum."

He said he is open to revising the law that grants teachers tenure after two years and including student test scores as ``a tool in the toolbox of teacher evaluation." But such changes should be made as part of a comprehensive teacher preparation initiative that seeks to cultivate good teachers as well as get rid of bad ones and only with "buy-in from everyone involved," he said.

Silicon Valley Education Foundation Chief Executive Officer Muhammed Chaudry agrees with Torlakson that California already has adopted an ambitious agenda for reforming its public schools and said he thinks Tuck's candidacy is premature.

"Changing courses right now would be disastrous," Chaudry said. "It's no longer about policy. It's about execution now."

Former state. Sen. Gloria Romero, who sponsored the parent-trigger law and ran for state schools chief four years ago, said that while she disapproves of Torlakson's allegiance to the California Teachers Association, she has more faith in him at this point than the untested Tuck.

"Unless I'm willing to vote against Brown and (Attorney General) Kamala Harris, which I'm not, I can't vote against Torlakson. They are all part of the same sauce," said Romero, who does not plan to endorse either candidate in the primary.

A third candidate seeking the superintendent's post is Long Beach educator Lydia Gutierrez, a Republican who also ran four years ago and has expressed doubts about California's embrace of Common Core. Under California's new primary system, the top two vote-getters in the June 3 primary advance to the November general election, regardless of party affiliation.

While Gutierrez does not have the money her two opponents do, it would be a mistake to count her out because "opponents of Common Core, who are not numerous in California, are highly mobilized and motivated," said Stanford University professor David Plank, who directs the nonpartisan Policy Analysis for California Education research center.

"Tuck will have financial support from the reform community, the people who are frustrated with the current regime. Torlakson will have support from the education establishment and the unions. Gutierrez is a wild card," Plank said. "So it's really anyone's guess how this is going to go."

Common Resume Problems and How to Fix Them (Part I)

By ANNE CHAN, PhD, MFT

Resumes are one of the most difficult documents to write – not only do you need to be thoughtful and confident about your work experience, you also need to have the requisite skills and abilities to highlight for the potential employer. Even if you had a perfect job history, it is still a feat to put together a great resume. If you do not have a perfect work history, resume writing can be a tough and painful exercise. But, fear not! First, take comfort in the fact that you are not alone – many, if not most, people have something in their work history that they are embarrassed, nervous, or concerned about. In this article, I will discuss the most common resume problems/questions that I've encountered as a career counselor.

Question: How many pages should my resume be?

I recommend that resumes be no more than two pages. A crisp, well-targeted one-page resume is far more effective than a rambling, unfocused two-page resume. (There are a few rare exceptions to the two-page recommendation, such as federal resumes and curriculum vitae for academic positions).

When you write your resume, bear in mind that the employer will likely spend mere minutes (perhaps even seconds) to glance at your resume. So whatever you put on your resume should be information that targets what the employer needs. Do NOT put information that is completely irrelevant, unless you're sure that the information will interest the employer. Yes, it is painful to cut out your significant accomplishments, but it is critical that you show concisely that you are a great fit for the job. Worse, putting irrelevant information in your resume will distract the employer from seeing you as a viable candidate. For instance, if you are proficient in an obscure software program that your prospective employer will likely not need or care about, then leave it out. Or if you have a job in your work history that is completely different from the job you are applying for, give a brief description of it or leave it out altogether (unless it leaves a gaping hole in your work history).

Many people make the mistake of including everything in their resumes, thinking or hoping that something will stick with the employer. This is a risky strategy to take because employers do not have the time to sift through your work history. Worse, they might reject you outright because you have not demonstrated that you understand their job requirements. Here's an analogy that will hopefully make this clear – say you're the prospective employer and you want a cheese pizza with tomatoes and olives. Instead of serving you a cheese pizza with tomatoes and olives, the job-seeker decides to "impress" you by throwing in extras like salami, anchovies, and pineapple. Not only do they serve you stuff you don't need or want, they also decide to deliver the pizza with a wrench (since they've done plumbing in the past), a scuba diving tank (since they know how to do deep-sea diving), and a forklift (since they've done warehousing as well). If all you wanted was a cheese pizza with two vegetarian toppings, would you welcome a pizza with meat toppings you didn't want, together with implements that won't help you eat the pizza?

Problem: What should I do with a gap in my work history?

Gaps in work histories are fairly common since people often take a break from the workforce for a variety of reasons, such as being laid off, getting fired, having a child, or going to school. How to address this resume dilemma depends on the reason for the gap. If you were laid off or decided to further your education, you can explain this in your cover letter or email. Remember that whatever you write on your resume and cover letter is fair game for the interviewer to ask about during the interview – so think carefully before putting anything in your resume or cover letter that you'd rather not talk about. For instance, if you took time off work to raise your child but do not want prospective employers to ask you about this, then do not mention this in your cover letter. If you'd prefer not to discuss the gap, you can make it less obvious by putting a part-time job or volunteer position that you held during that time period.

These are two of the most common dilemmas that I'm often asked about. Next column, I will write about more common dilemmas and how to fix them. If you have any questions about your resume, email me at the link below and I will try to address them in my next column.

On a final note, know that almost everyone has something in their resume that they are concerned about. You are certainly not alone if you have something that concerns you about your resume – the good news is that there are ways to fix these concerns!

Voter statistics, trends ahead of June primary

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Voter dynamics and registration ahead of California's June 3 primary election:

— As of April, California had 17.6 million registered voters, about 73 percent of those eligible to vote.

— Registration is 43.5 percent Democratic, 28.6 percent Republican and 21.1 percent no party preference.

— San Francisco County has the highest percentage of voters registered Democratic (56.3 percent) and no party preference (30.7 percent).

— Modoc County has the highest Republican Party registration (49.2 percent).

— While Democrats dominate in registration, Republicans dominate geographically, at least according to county. Of California's 58 counties, 31 are majority Republican and 27 are majority Democratic.

— The electorate for the June primary is expected to be overwhelmingly conservative, older and whiter than California's overall voter registration base.

Get ready to spring into motion May is Bike Month!

SUBMITTED BY ALAMEDA CTC

Winter is behind us, and it's time to spring into motion. Bicycling and walking are essential components of Alameda County's transportation system. Alameda CTC and Measure B have been supporting active transportation (biking and walking) in a variety of strategic ways, and data collected through the Alameda CTC bicycle and pedestrian count program suggest that levels of cycling and walking are growing, and that the diversity of cyclists is increasing. From 2010 to 2013, bicycling in the county increased 17 percent. Efforts to make our communities more walkable and bikeable include targeted grant programs and funds to each city for bicycle and pedestrian improvements. We also require all local jurisdictions that receive transportation sales tax funding to adopt a "complete streets policy" to ensure that our streets are safe, convenient and inviting for all users.

To continue and expand this investment in active transportation, the 2014 Transportation Expenditure Plan includes $651 million for bicycle and pedestrian paths, safety projects and educational programs - more than doubling the existing investment. In addition, 15 percent of the $2.3 billion in funding for city and county streets will support bicycle and pedestrian investments.

Thursday, May 8 is Bike to Work Day and Bike to School Day.

Alameda CTC supports the innovative BikeMobile, which is part of the Safe Routes to Schools program. The BikeMobile, along with its bicycle mechanic staff, visits schools and community organizations and events to deliver no-cost hands-on bicycle repair and bicycle safety training to promote riding bikes to school.

As you prepare to bike to work on Thursday, May 8, or bike to school during one of the many Bike to School days in May, consider taking one of the many free bicycle safety and education classes in cities throughout Alameda County. Family cycling workshops, free adult "Urban Cycling" and "Learn to Ride" classes and safety seminars are listed at BikeEastBay.org.

"Artists Take Flight" at Logan:

Students studying several disciplines will display their work when Logan High's Art Department and the school's Regional Occupational Program photography class put on "Artists Take Flight," the school's first invitational mixed media student art show. The event will be "showcasing the best of our student artists" in studio art, ceramics, digital art, drawing, multicultural art, two-dimensional animation and photography, teacher Elba Rios reports.

A free opening reception is scheduled from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. on Thursday, May 8, in the lobby of the school's Center for the Performing Arts, 1800 H Street, Union City. The works also will be on display for ticket holders to the school's Performing Arts Gala on Friday, May 9.

Bike to School Day:

Hundreds of students at Alvarado, Eastin, Kitayama, Pioneer and Searles elementary schools and Cesar Chavez Middle School — along with a few teachers, classified employees and administrators — will be taking part Thursday, May 8, in "Bike to Work and School Day."

"It's time to dust off your bike, pump up the tires, and check the brakes," reports site coordinator Carrie Harvilla of Alameda County's Safe Routes to School program. "Join your friends, reach out to your neighbors, form a bike train — hop on and pedal. Each year more and more schools join the celebration and fun of using pedal power to get to and from school. Bike commuting is good for our health, the community, and the planet. Be part of the solution!" More information is available online at www.ebbc.org/btwd or by e-mail: charvilla@transformca.org.

Waste Management unveils recycling facility expansion

SUBMITTED BY JOE CAMERO

The unveiling of an $10 million expansion of a high diversion material recovery facility (MRF) on May 6, 2014 celebrates the "marriage" of public policy and engineering design to meet CalRecycle's CalGreen Construction & Demolition (C&D) and Alameda County's commercial diversion goals. It is the only MRF in the region that meets both requirements.

Construction on the expanded MRF began in early January and was completed in late April. It includes upgraded technologies, which increases sorting capacity from 700,000 lbs. per day to 1.6 million lbs. per day, and two separate lines for sorting construction/demolition and dry commercial volumes. Materials less than 8 inches are screened to 2 inches and again to 3/4-inch fractions. Magnets recover ferrous metal, while optical-sorting technology separates wood and aluminum. Vibratory air separators recover rock and other inert materials. Recovered commodities are then sent to markets and used in WM EarthCare™ landscape products.

The Davis Street Resource Recovery Complex is located at 2615 Davis Street in San Leandro. For more information about Waste Management, visit www.wm.com

Sankata Mochana Hanuman Temple Celebrates its first year

New Hanuman Ji Murti Shapana will be held on May 9-11.

SUBMITTED BY RAJESH OBEROI

On the weekend of April 11 to April 13, the Sankata Mochana Hanuman Temple held its 1st anniversary celebrations which turned out to be a phenomenal success. The three day event attracted devotees and their families from all over the Bay Area to partake in the religious ceremonies and seek the blessings of Lord Hanuman.

The celebrations commenced on Friday evening with the "Sri Suktham Homam," followed by Lakshmi Abhishekam, Alankaram, and Aarati. On Saturday, the temple echoed with the voices of the devotees chanting the "Hanuman Chalisa," 108 times, without stopping for 8 hours. This was followed by the "Ramakoti Patram Samarpan" and "Homam". Watching the young children enthusiastically complete the written "Ramakoti Patram" was an absolute delight.

Prominent Bay Area singers, musicians, and their students hosted a cultural program on Sunday afternoon. Melodious performances filled the air as children and young adults showcased acts of music, dance, and the veena.

City of Newark Mayor, Mr. Alan Nagy, graced the event and presented a commendation to the temple. Mayor Nagy acknowledged that the temple has been a positive addition to the city of Newark by providing services to community members, the homeless, students of all ages, and young artists as well. On the evening of April 13, the temple was packed and buzzing with devotees decked in beautiful finery, joyously enjoying the wedding of "Rama and Sita." By the Grace of Lord Hanuman and the dedication of Pandit Govind Srinivasan and his team, the community is blessed with an opportunity to witness the wedding of the Divine.

Sankata Mochana Hanuman Temple, located at 35463, Dumbarton Court, Newark, (next to Ardenwood Challenger School) has just received a new (5 feet 8 inches) Hanuman Ji Murti made of marble from Jaipur, India. Laghu Prana Pratishtha (Sthapana) of this new Murti will be held on the weekend of Friday, May 9 through Sunday, May 11. Additional information may be obtained from www.bayareahanumantemple.org or by calling Pandit Govind Srinivasan Ji at (510) 378-1770.

Students prepare for upcoming Tech Innovation Challenge

SUBMITTED BY LAUREL SKURKO

At the end of March, Network for Teaching Entrepreneurship (NFTE) students from across the Bay Area gathered in San Jose for a one-on-one workshop with Silicon Valley technology experts from Success Factors and Ariba. Working with these technology volunteers, Bay Area students learned to design mobile apps and create websites for their own original business ideas. At the workshop, students worked directly with local technology experts to hone their website/web app-building skills with the hope of ultimately getting to compete for prizes in the NFTE SAP Tech Innovation Challenge and even the NFTE National Youth Entrepreneurship Challenge (October 9), where the top prize is $25,000.

Participating students from Hayward High School, San Leandro High School, as well as Andrew Hill High School in San Jose have been enrolled in a semester or year-long entrepreneurship class provided by their teachers with the support of NFTE.

A youth education program, NFTE trains students in entrepreneurship. It is provided to high school students, serving those in at-risk communities throughout the Bay Area. The program was founded in New York in 1987, and now operates in 18 states, Washington D.C., and 10 countries. The goal is to help youth from low-income communities stay in school, learn how to recognize business opportunities and plan for successful futures.

May is Water Awareness Month!

Millions of people around the world walk several miles each day to obtain water. They have learned firsthand that water must be used wisely. Although water flows freely from our taps, the current drought reminds us that it is a resource too precious to waste.

Exciting New One-Act Plays

SUBMITTED BY OHLONE COLLEGE

Student actors and directors present a series of edgy, energetic one-act plays performed in repertory exploring the ins and outs, sideways looks and backwards glances at modern relationships through comedy, drama, emotion and mayhem. May 8 through the 15 five contemporary one-act plays, selected and presented by the Student Repertory Company, will be presented in two performance bills over the course of six nights at the Smith Center at Ohlone College.

"These new plays, never performed at a college, are produced by incredibly passionate and skilled directors and equally talented actors," says Ryan Weible, faculty advisor for Student Rep, "All five of the plays are exciting, entertaining and fully produced. You don't want to miss this opportunity to see intense young talent performing the latest in modern theatre."

Performance Bill One includes Impromptu, a comedy written by Tad Mosel, which brings a fresh approach to the question of finding the balance between truth vs. illusion in life; Heights by Amy Fox focuses on three young New Yorkers facing relationship conflicts on an apartment rooftop at 2 a.m.; and, The Great War by Neil Labute, a comedic look at a divorcing couple trying to reach an end to their hostility.

Performance Bill Two includes Thread Count by

Lisa Soland, a comedy where fast-paced, witty lines mix modernism with old-fashioned romance; and a two-character dark comedy set in another New York apartment, where Ivan Foley returning home from a long day of job-hunting, finds a different kind of "job" waiting for him in his living room in Come Again, Another Day, by Cary Pepper.

Thursday, April 24

Between April 24 and April 25, our staff responded to two separate sexual batteries in the downtown area. The two adult female victims stated that a teenage male had approached them and inappropriately touched them and fled. The victims did not know who the suspect was prior to these incidents. On April 25th, approximately 5 p.m., officers were investigating the second incident which occurred in the 300 block of Estudillo Ave. One of the officers observed a possible suspect walking by and he was detained. The suspect was positively identified and he was arrested for committing both sexual assaults.

Monday, April 28

At approximately 12:20 p.m., one of our patrol officers was driving a vehicle equipped with a license plate reader. (LPR) He was driving through the area of E. 14th Street and 136th Avenue when the LPR unit alerted him to a stolen vehicle. The officer located the stolen vehicle in a nearby parking lot and arrested the driver for possessing it. The suspect, Amber Augustyn of Livermore, was booked for the incident.

At approximately 1 p.m., three San Leandro teenagers committed a strong arm robbery in the 700 block of Marina Blvd. They approached a 22 year old male and started to punch and kick him. The suspects forcibly removed the victim's backpack and fled with it heading E/B on Marina Blvd. Officers responded and located the three suspects nearby. The suspects were arrested for the incident and the backpack was recovered. The victim was treated for some minor injuries from the incident.

Please contact the San Leandro Police Department's Criminal Investigations Division with any information regarding this case at 510-577-3230 or contact the Anonymous Tip Line at 510-577-3278.

Citizens can also send an anonymous tip to San Leandro Police Department by texting the word SLPD and their tip to 847411. Anonymous web tips can be submitted from the Police Department's website at <http://www.sanleandro.org/depts/pd/at.asp>

Fremont man arrested for auto burglaries

SUBMITTED BY GENEVA BOSQUES, FREMONT PD

On April 23, 2014 the Fremont Police Department's Street Crimes Unit (SCU) arrested auto burglary suspect Kris Sylvester, a Fremont resident, for a felony warrant at the intersection of Stevenson Blvd. and Davis St. During the arrest, SCU Officers uncovered numerous pieces of stolen property, including items taken from an auto burglary that had been reported at the Little Flowers Montessori School earlier in the day. Ironically officers were able to return property to the victim during the arrest, because it was occurring directly across the street from the Montessori School.

Officers retrieved a high volume of evidence believed to have been taken during the commission of auto burglaries throughout the City. The investigation remains ongoing as officers continue their efforts to identify additional auto burglary victims and return several stolen credit cards and personal property related to the crimes committed by Sylvester.

Sylvester was booked at the Fremont Police Detention Facility on charges of: auto burglary, commercial burglary, possession of stolen property, and unauthorized use of credit card.

Tri-City Stargazer MAY 6 – MAY 13 2014 BY VIVIAN CAROL

For All Signs: This is a week that may provoke confrontations and battles. If the energies are acted upon favorably, everyone would put their cards on the table and opposing parties would be brought to a point of cooperation. There are two sets of opposing planetary energies. The first is Venus opposite Mars, a combination that can make or break relationships. The second opposition is between the Sun and Saturn. This brings emphasis to political or corporate parties. Many individuals and relationships are undergoing tests at this time. It is a time in which those who have prepared well and can maintain relationships in tough circumstances will win the prize. It requires that opposing parties must cooperate rather than banging their heads together until the situation cracks.

Aries the Ram (March 21-April 20): Within relationships of intensity, there is often a strong sexual attraction, whether or not your personalities are compatible. If the sexual component is not recognized, it may be transmuted into a competition. Avoid commitment to any new relationship on your radar. You need to know more about the individual.

Taurus the Bull (April 21-May 20): Make note of the lead paragraph because both oppositions pertain to you at this time. You are being tested or you are judging in more than one situation. If you back out, you have definitely lost. If you face the truth head on, you will grow in stature and maturity.

Gemini the Twins (May 21-June 20): Mercury travels rapidly through your sign between May 7 and May 30. During this period there likely will be greater emphasis on communications, errands, and other short distance travels. Your mind will be quick and your attitude persuasive. You are loaded with ideas, so remember not to monopolize conversations.

Cancer the Crab (June 21-July 21): You have a desire to reach outward to others. You want to share ideas and express yourself in a larger framework. It seems everyone is interested in what you think. Circumstances on the home front are favorable with one who shares intellectual interests. Activities involving legal interests, teaching or learning are positive.

Leo the Lion (July 22-Aug 22): This is a week of scrutiny. It is possible that you are being tested now. You will get what you deserve. If you have prepared well, you will win the prize or the honor. You may have begun a challenging project during the previous fall which is now ready for unveiling and evaluation.

Virgo the Virgin (August 23-September 22): Your attention turns toward your life direction at this time. For many this is reflected by the career path. You may be researching needed information or talking with others about where you are headed. Your work is on display or otherwise noticed during this period. The outlook is favorable.

Libra the Scales (September 23-October 22): You may be backpedaling your way out of one or more relationships right now. What you fear is being smothered or overwhelmed. Your ruling planet, Mars, is retrograde. Be aware that the war is really internal. Perhaps you let yourself become closer than you really wanted.

Scorpio the Scorpion (October 23-November 21): You may have an experience in which you feel a figurative sniper at your back. Defend yourself if you absolutely must, but life will be easier if you ignore it. Your sniper will not recognize it, even if you point it out and the confrontation may become embarrassing.

Sagittarius the Archer (November 22-December 21): You have a desire to celebrate. The temptation to overspend is strong. Consider what would be fun and interesting that doesn't require a big expenditure. Activities concerning education, publishing, the law, and travel have positive aspects. You are talkative and in an inquisitive frame of mind.

Capricorn the Goat (December 22-January 19): During this period the fruits of your labors become apparent. People will be offering messages to you about your character and how you have progressed over the years. You may observe your relationship to your children at this point. That is one place you can clearly see outcomes.

Aquarius the Water Bearer (January 20-February 18): Last fall you began a new project in relation to your work in the world. You knew it would take some time to develop, but you felt it was worth the effort. During this period you will have feedback from the world on the value of that idea. Don't listen to self-criticism, which is almost always unfair to you.

Pisces the Fish (February 19-March 20): A misunderstanding could develop between you and a close friend or family member. The blame game is useless. Do your best to unwind the thread to the point that it began and start fresh. It is possible that you will have a minor case of laryngitis. Pipes, whether in your body or your house, may need clearing.

OPINION

WILLIAM MARSHAK

Excerpt from the May 6 agenda for Fremont City Council:

"The City Council has established uniform regulations for its boards, commissions and committees, including term limits for those bodies. With a few exceptions, members of boards, commissions and committees are limited to two terms (primarily two to four years)."

"Art Review Board members are currently permitted to serve two four-year terms. It has become increasingly difficult to find new people willing to serve on the Art Review Board. At the same time, existing Art Review Board members who are termed out are willing to continue to serve. In order to allow those members to continue to provide meaningful service to the City, staff believes it would be appropriate to increase the term limit from two to three terms so that Board members would be allowed to serve for three full four-year terms."

Public agencies, at all levels, use advisory boards and commissions to engage constituents and increase and expand input. These groups can be formed using community members, elected officials or a combination. The concept is to develop a participatory system that values outside comment and suggestion. In many cases, especially at the local level, citizens who participate in these bodies receive either minimal or no compensation for their time and effort. And, with the exception of highly visible and politically significant commissions such as the Planning Commission, many of these groups are guided solely by information from appointed Staff. Depending on the form of government and staff members involved, input and comment from such bodies may be functional and valid or have little direct impact on government operations. If impact is minimal, such groups add little to the governmental process, becoming a waste of time and energy by those who volunteer to serve.

A variety of issues face governmental bodies and use of advisory groups to City Councils and government administration can be invaluable - if their purpose is honored. Cities that employ a strong mayor as chief executive, overseeing day-to-day operations, use the advice and opinions of appointed boards and commission members as a direct pipeline to constituents. Cities managed by a City Manager may not have a direct connection to voters. While commissions typically are directed toward specific tasks and goals, advisory boards may not receive such explicit directives. Instead, they may be a liaison between governmental organizations, a sounding board for staff or convene when a relevant issue arises. The precise role and function of advisory bodies can be modified over time depending on the dictates of the authority that forms them. Whether this is an adjustment to remain relevant and significant or simply decay and entropy is a question that should be asked and answered on a regular basis.

Quite a few boards and commissions function in relative obscurity. I have visited a few of these meetings and am often surprised by the lack of attendance by the public and, at times, board/commission members. The question that comes to mind at some meetings is what functions or direction is given and whether anyone in attendance really understands their significance or simply goes through the motions. Lack of public attendance is understandable since some meetings are held during work hours. However, just as most City Council meetings are subject to scrutiny through agendas prior, minutes following and audio/visual recordings on the internet, so should all advisory groups include with agendas and minutes, an upload of at least an audio recording of meeting attendance, participation and business transacted.

As a valuable community resource, boards and commissions should advise elected representatives and their staff; a precious commodity that should hold a special place in our system of government. When left to decline in obscurity and anonymity, they can fade and lose their usefulness. Mayors and City Councils should take care that they encourage reports and input from these groups of concerned citizens. Functional bodies that bring helpful information and advice should be reasonable expectations by both elected and appointed officials. Instead of simply soliciting members for boards and commissions, city councilmembers should be asking what these groups do and actively solicit their opinions.

Alameda County judged as most 'Electric Vehicle (EV)' ready

SUBMITTED BY GUY ASHLEY

Alameda County has been selected as the Bay Area's Most "EV Ready" Large Community as part of the 2014 Ready, Set, Charge! Bay Area Electric Vehicle Readiness Awards, sponsored by the Bay Area Climate Collaborative (BACC) and Silicon Valley Leadership Group.

The Awards Committee selected Alameda County for incorporating electric vehicles (EVs) substantially into its Climate Action Plan and General Plans, its impressive EV infrastructure of 80 public and fee-free charging ports, and its expansion of EVs in its fleets - currently at 23 EVs and with 26 more to be deployed this year. Alameda County has also provided region-wide leadership heading a collaborative procurement of 90 electric vehicles and charging stations for 10 municipal agencies.

"We are thrilled to be recognized for the leadership Alameda County provides by adopting environmentally friendly policies that are transforming the way the County delivers services to residents," said Susan S. Muranishi, Alameda County Administrator.

Alameda County was one of four winners in the Bay Area competition announced April 25 at the 2014 Silicon Valley Driving Charged & Connected Symposium in Palo Alto. The "EV Ready" award is the latest in a string of accolades Alameda County has received for its environmental stewardship. In 2013, Alameda County's vehicle fleet was named for the fifth time as one of the Greenest in America in an annual review done by Green Fleet Magazine. In 2012, the County also won a Green California Leadership Award, earning top honors in the category of "Pioneer" for its program of Comprehensive Climate Action for Government Operations and Services.

Keith Carson, President of the Alameda County Board of Supervisors, says honors such as the "EV Ready" award help to validate the board's decision in 2008 to adopt a long-term Strategic Vision in which Environment and Sustainability are among the core principles for preserving and enhancing the County's reputation as a leading place to live, work and do business.

Letter to the Editor

Water Conservation and Emergency Drought Relief Legislation

SUBMITTED BY
SENATE MAJORITY LEADER
ELLEN M. CORBETT
(D-EAST BAY)

Although precious rain recently fell on our local communities, I have had scores of conversations over the last few weeks and months with local residents at farmers’ markets, town halls and community events about a topic that remains at the forefront of our minds: California’s drought.

Unfortunately, the recent rainfall has only minimally impacted our depleting water supply. Further aggravated by a low snow pack, California’s severe water crisis has prompted Governor Jerry Brown to declare a Drought State of Emergency. California State Senate leadership accepted the Governor’s call to action by developing a proposal allocating over half a billion dollars to implement shovel-ready water projects in communities throughout the state, assist agricultural communities and prevent drinking water shortages. Fortunately, the legislation passed quickly through the Legislature and the Governor promptly signed it so we can deliver much needed relief to local communities. The Tri-Valley water agency, Zone 7, is receiving only 5% of its normal water allocation from the state, for example.

As a longtime advocate for our environment and local communities, I will continue working closely with my colleagues in Sacramento to address pertinent water issues to help secure California’s water future. It is crucial that we recognize local water districts that have responded quickly and appropriately to address water reliability and conservation.

The Governor has instructed state agencies to begin water conservation efforts and has recommended—though not yet mandated—that state residents reduce their water use by 20%. State water agencies must work collaboratively with stakeholders and residents to manage California’s water supply, while simultaneously assist farmers and communities that are most impacted by the drought. As a result of the ongoing dry conditions, the state has begun a statewide public awareness campaign called “Save our H2O.”

As Californians, we can conserve water by implementing some of the daily tips offered by “Save our Water” at SaveOurH2O.org, such as:

- Take shorter showers, use a low-flow shower head and turn off water whenever possible.
- Place mulch around plants and combine with a drip system to conserve gallons of water each time you water outdoors.
- Plant drought-resistant trees and plants that are most appropriate for your climate.

Please also consult my Senate website at <http://sd10.senate.ca.gov/> where I have posted additional important information—both in English and Spanish—regarding water conservation and drought measures.

Kakela caps off career with Player of the Week award

SUBMITTED BY SCOTT CHISHOLM

Cal State East Bay's Chelsie Kakela has been named the California Collegiate Athletic Association (CCAA) Softball Player of the Week for the week of Apr. 21-27. Kakela led the Pioneers to a 3-1 mark on the weekend of April 26-27, over Chico State to wrap up 2014 season in fifth place, the best finish since joining the CCAA. Over the final three at bats of her collegiate career the senior slugger hit a 3-run homer, double, and solo homer in leading Cal State East Bay to its first .500 season record in CCAA play. All six of her base hits in the series went for extra bases including a pair of two homer contests to bookend the series with the Wildcats.

Kakela posted a slash line of .600/.714/2.000 and reached base safely in 10 of her 14 trips to the plate. Her final swing vaulted her into a tie for the league lead with 11 homers and was enough to make her the CCAA regular season slugging champion with a .833 slugging percentage. On average she hit a home run once every 8.2 at bats against league pitchers in 2014. She finished conference play with CCAA top 10 marks of 24 runs scored (5th), 31 RBI (5th), 75 total bases (4th), 15 walks (7th), seven times hit by a pitch (3rd), 11 homers (1st), a .491 on base percentage (5th) and slugging percentage (1st). Her .367 batting average was 11th best among CCAA qualifiers.

Cal State East Bay (27-26, 18-18 CCAA) earned its highest finish taking fifth place in the final league standings. Kakela was one of four seniors to finish her collegiate career this past weekend along with Meli Sanchez, Mandy Dale, and Shaunna Purkey.

Vikings show power at the plate

Baseball

The Irvington Vikings baseball team put on a great hitting display against the American Eagles on April 30th as they scored seven runs on 10 well-timed hits. Final score: Vikings 7, Eagles 0. They opened up the game in the third inning as they scored their first three runs of the game and never looked back, adding another run in the fourth inning, closing the door in the fifth when they tacked on an additional three runs.

A team effort, six of the starting Vikings reached base with a hit; Catcher Jake Doty and Cameron Cabigas with two hits each. At the end of the day, the Viking team batting average was a hefty .370. Viking pitcher Michael Newman added a standout performance on the mound as well as his fast ball and change up were working; he only give up one hit to Eagle David Shan.

As Mission Valley Athletic League baseball winds down to its final weeks, this type of powerful performance could elevate the Vikings in close league competition.

Trio named to All-CCAA Squad

Softball

SUBMITTED BY SCOTT CHISHOLM

Senior Chelsie Kakela, junior Kelsey LaVaute, and freshman Ali Cerminara were named to the 2014 All-California Collegiate Athletic Association (CCAA) Softball Team, announced on Friday, May 2, 2014. Kakela is the third player in Pioneer history to earn first team All-CCAA honors and the first since 2012.

“They all turned in solid seasons and are deserving of the recognition. I am excited for what it means for our program and future,” said Cal State East Bay Head Coach Barbara Pierce.

Kakela, a native of Bainbridge Island, Wash., earned an at-large selection after starting in 52-of-53 games as the Pioneer designated player. Over the final 23 games of the season she hit .422 (27-for-64) with six home runs and 22 RBI. In conference play she tied for the league lead with 11 homers and posted a CCAA best .833 slugging percentage.

LaVaute, a newcomer to the Pioneers from Missoula, Mont., was named to the second team as an at-large selection. In conference play she led the league with 35 runs batted in, tied for third with 10 long balls, and ranked fifth with a .699 slugging percentage. The Cal State East Bay first baseman played in all 53 games and led the team with 45 RBI and seven stolen bases in 2014.

Cerminara, hailing from Phoenix, Ariz., earned a second team selection at catcher after appearing in 48-of-53 games this season. In CCAA play she ranked in the top 12 overall with seven home runs and a .554 slugging percentage. Cerminara led the league throwing out 11 base runners attempting to steal on her.

The only three players originally from outside the state of California to be named to the All-CCAA were Kakela, LaVaute and Cerminara. It is the third straight year the Pioneers have placed multiple players on the All-CCAA squad.

Cal State East Bay went 27-26, 18-18 CCAA and finished fifth in the final regular season league standings. The Pioneers posted their best result in league play and finished with a .500 record in CCAA for the first time since joining the CCAA in 2010.

The American Eagles won a close one as they beat The Mission Warriors 4-3 in a game that could have gone either way on May 2, 2014. The Eagles started the game off right in the first inning with a nicely timed series of hits that drove in the first two runs of the game, taking an early lead, 2-0. But the Mission San Jose Warriors stayed in the fight as they started an offensive attack of their own in the fourth inning, closing the gap with a run, followed by two more in the fifth. Score: Eagles 4, Warriors 3. A game filled with exciting plays from both teams as both hit the ball deep into the outfield, setting up an unusual amount of action around home plate and some exciting plays. position, made some heads up plays to keep the game close but the Eagle offense just seemed to get the hits at the right times.

A team effort, Dave Shan, Naeem Knox and Arric Bischofberger posted RBIs for the day and Knox had another stand out day behind the plate with 2 hits for 2 at bats with an RBI as well. This was an important game in the Mission Valley Athletic League competition; with the victory, the Eagles put themselves into a four-way tie for third place with Kennedy Moreau Catholic and Irvington at 5-5. With just two weeks remaining in league play, all games will be important in the standings and North Coast Section play.

Finding jobs

SUBMITTED BY
SEVERN WILLIAMS

Finding solutions for persistent unemployment among East Bay residents is the subject of a new report by the East Bay Community Foundation. The report spotlights practical ways in which employers, government job-training programs and jobs-focused nonprofit organizations can all work together to increase employment among individuals in the shadows of unemployment.

The report is a follow-up to the Foundation's 2009 study, Putting the East Bay to Work. The 2009 research and the new report are aimed at reducing poverty in the East Bay — specifically among the 325,000 residents of Alameda and Contra Costa counties, 12 percent of the total population, living below the Federal Poverty Level.

Both the full current report and executive summary are available on the Foundation's website at www.ebcf.org.

Williams selected as Deputy County Executive

SUBMITTED BY
GWENDOLYN MITCHELL/LAUREL ANDERSON

County Executive Jeffrey V. Smith recently announced that James R. Williams will assume new responsibilities as Deputy County Executive. Thirty-year-old Williams played a substantial role in advancing the County's position on the dissolution of redevelopment agencies.

Williams delivered oral argument before the California Supreme Court in California Redevelopment Association v. Matosantos, where the County's successful argument resulted in the dissolution of the state's 400+ redevelopment agencies on February 1, 2012.

In June of 2012, Smith appointed Williams to serve as Special Assistant to the County Executive with a primary role in the dissolution of the redevelopment agencies. He has worked on every aspect of this unprecedented effort, including oversight boards, legislation, audits, and tax distribution. In January 2013, he was promoted to the post of Deputy County Executive, focused on dissolution and other special projects in Finance, Valley Health Plan, and public safety.

Williams will coordinate, on behalf of the County Executive, Procurement, Countywide Contracting, County Communications (9-1-1), Office of Emergency Services, Fire Department, housing issues, and work with the Board of Supervisors' Finance and Government Operations Committee.

Williams began his career with the County of Santa Clara in 2010 as a Social Justice & Impact Litigation Fellow in the Office of the County Counsel. His impressive work landed him a role as Deputy County Counsel where, among other duties, he advised the County's Finance Agency and its Auditor-Controller, Treasurer, and Tax Collector functions.

Williams graduated from Stanford Law School in June 2010. In 2006, he graduated summa cum laude from Princeton University, where he received the Pyne Prize, Princeton's highest undergraduate distinction. He is a Harry S. Truman Scholar and Paul & Daisy Soros Fellow. In Spring 2012, Williams was named a “Lawyer on the Fast Track” by The Recorder, recognizing California attorneys in their first 10 years of practice “whose early accomplishments indicate they will be tomorrow's top lawyers and leaders.”

Williams and his wife, Mary Anne, live in San Jose with their three children: Jesse, age 4; Boman, age 2; and Susanna, age 6 months. His salary is $182,000.

What is a 21st Century Education?

swers, as I believe they provide a snapshot of the skills and qualities that educators and those interested in expanding their careers need to focus on today. If we continue to survey those around us in this way, we will all understand where our educational system needs to be headed for the next 85 years, and beyond.

“Running a startup in San Francisco, you quickly realize that success is gated by the availability of software engineers. Marketing (as Facebook proves) has become a technical skill. Hailing a cab (as Uber proves) is a technology business. Even caring for a parent (as CareZone proves), is made easier via software. Those are the skills that will continue to transform industries everywhere.” (Jonathan Schwartz, CEO CareZone, formerly CEO Sun Microsystems)

“Rather than ‘brilliant’ lecturers, our educators need to find ways of deeply understanding the context of the students whom they serve. If they have an appreciation of their lives, their neighborhoods and their communities, they can provide them with the skills and tools their students will need into the future.” (Kevin K. Kumashiro, PhD, Dean, USF School of Education)

“We need problem solvers. Rather than people who can follow along a dotted line, we need those who will ask critical questions to get to the most effective solution. Designers are specifically trained to do this. In the high tech industry, design-thinking and creative-thinking are highly relevant skills that are needed to solve the types of challenges posed by our clients.” (Francisco Delgadillo, Creative Director, Oracle)

“As we look at shaping the future of medical school education, we are focusing on both ‘blended’ and ‘adaptive’ learning. ‘Blended learning’ is the integration of on-line learning opportunities to compliment classroom experiences. This provides the opportunity for students to progress based on individual learning styles and preferences (‘adaptive learning’) and makes education much more effective and targeted.” (Clay Johnston, MD, Inaugural Dean, Dell Medical School, The University of Texas at Austin)

“The most successful people in our organization are those who can be creative solution providers. They are able to think and work in an interdisciplinary environment. Many come with a background in the arts. This way of thinking is essential, as they are trained in finding different approaches, improvising and thinking on their feet. Ultimately, we need those who can react to a changing situation, and yet have a creative vision that keeps them grounded in their approach.” (Jim Nadel, Executive Director, Stanford Summer Jazz Festival)

“It is an entrepreneurial mindset that will give our youth the skills they need for success in the 21st century. Specific skills include being able to recognize and create opportunity, think critically, delay gratification, to take risks and to assume ownership for outcomes.” Krista Katsantonis Bloome, Executive Director, The Network for Teaching Entrepreneurship)

“We are looking for the nimble – those who can turn on a dime and are able to re-prioritize—many times just adding more work to the priority list. Things move fast in a start-up and the more, well-rounded, “can do” anything types who are also happy to work in a fast, kinetic and always-changing environment, the better.” (Elissa Hambrecht, COO, NewCo)

“Our company has a very small staff-to-sales volume ratio. This means that we have no time or resources for training. We look for those who have both industry-experience and a high degree of maturity. This means that they are able to take in new information and act on it efficiently. For myself, I found that my education enabled me to see the world around me from a broader vantage point. This was of enormous value in my work today.” (Sarah

Garcia, President and Ower, Pacific Produce)

“We need employees who are both excellent communicators and problem solvers. If you have a great idea, it needs to make sense to others, even to a client who does not have the time or interest in understanding it. It is a given that all job applicants are technically proficient, but insuring that they are of the most value to the organization means that they will be able to translate their knowledge to our clients.” (Francisco Delgadillo, Creative Director, Oracle)

“I look for people who have both broad perspective on the marketplace, as well as a detailed, technical understanding of the product itself. That is to say that our staff needs to understand our customers and competitors and general trends in the market place, on the one hand. On the other hand, we rely on everyone in the chain of distribution (from manufacturer to vendor to salesperson) so have a true, technical mastery of the product itself. If any one person in the chain is not a product specialist, the entire system breaks down.” (Xiao Yan Zhu, CEO, Pinnacle Interior Elements LLC)

“It is my hope that educators and policy-makers continue to tap the market to unearth new areas of demand, as they arise. Using various methods to insure that our educational institutions match the real-life needs presented across industries is critical. For those who are concerned with issues surrounding future productivity and the relevance of our educational system, perhaps the insights from professionals shared in this piece will provide a means of opening up the dialogue and will motivate continual improvement.” (Laurel Skurko, Principal, Linc Marketing)

Background on Laurel Skurko:

TAKES FROM SILICON VALLEY EAST Wheels and Walls:The Food Truck Trend and Why We Like It

By KELLY KLINE,
ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT DIRECTOR

Last Friday was the seasonal debut of Street Eats, a food truck event sponsored by the Fremont Chamber of Commerce. Over the next few months, a rotating list of trucks selling everything from Korean barbecue to cupcakes to ceviche will descend on Capitol Avenue, Fremont’s future Main Street, every Friday from 4:30 p.m. – 9 p.m. We’ve blogged before about the important role this event plays in creating community. However, in spite of the growing popularity of food trucks, there are still lingering concerns about competition with “brick and mortar” establishments. We recognize the sensitivity, but having given this much thought, we’d like to present a case for the food truck.

1. Food trucks function as retail incubators.

Let’s face it. Starting a restaurant is expensive, and survival statistics are grim. We’ve watched many family restaurants (and large chains as well) succumb, based on high costs, small margins, and changing customer desires. We believe that food concepts should be able to incubate in a manner that doesn’t jeopardize the owner’s home mortgage. Food trucks offer a lower-risk method of testing menu items, and help establish a reputation and customer base. One local success story is Curry Up Now – a thriving restaurant with three Bay Area locations that started on the road.

2. If you can’t bear ’em, join ’em!

Increasingly, food establishments are taking a “multi-modal” approach to their real estate needs, especially when testing or penetrating new markets. One example is San Francisco-based The Melt – a grilled cheese phenomenon with a strategy of “wheels and walls.” You can actually “book the bus” from

About Takes From Silicon Valley East
TheDailyBeast called Fremont the 2nd best U.S. city for innovation. Whether it's manufacturing, clean tech, Fremont or the Silicon Valley scene itself, we're telling the stories that are advancing business here.

the website, which brings a whole new dimension to catering (often the life-blood of a successful restaurant). Just ask Whole Foods. The market chain has successfully integrated food trucks into its business model, which allows it to take advantage of serving events such as “South by Southwest.”

3. The food truck model has changed to be more compatible with dining districts.

It used to be that food trucks scoured city streets looking for a place to do business for a few hours at a time. While that still occurs on a limited basis, food truck operations have shifted to an event model organized by professional planners such as Fremont-based Food Truck Mafia, and Off the Grid. For example, Food Truck Mafia works in collaboration with Chamber organizations and shares profits to support business districts. There is also a growing list of best practices from cities like New York, Portland, and Milwaukee that have successfully integrated food trucks. RHI is a Santa Cruz-based organization that collects these best practices and helps cities walk the fine line between encouraging vibrancy and limiting unfair competition.

4. Food trucks drive unique traffic to a district.

Food trucks can fill customer dead zones by driving traffic to particular places at particular times. How do they accomplish this feat? Two words: social media. Food trucks have distinguished themselves by effectively employing social media to mobilize their fan base. They tweet out locations, specials, customer selfies, and generally create excitement around their “community.” It is safe to argue that customers would not have otherwise visited a particular district without the invitation. Districts can benefit through spill-over traffic, and more importantly, by planting seeds with new customers who will come back later and explore.

Food trucks are here to stay. And it’s not just food that we’re talking about. I’ve seen trucks for vintage clothing, haircuts, and bike repair. As creative entrepreneurs find new avenues to grow commerce, cities need to respond in kind.

Alameda CTC recognized for financial reporting

SUBMITTED BY TESS LENGYEL

The Alameda County Transportation Commission (Alameda CTC) has been awarded a Certificate of Achievement for Excellence in Financial Reporting by the Government Finance Officers Association of the United States and Canada (GFOA) for its Comprehensive Annual Financial Report (CAFR) for the year ended June 30, 2013. The Certificate of Achievement is the highest form of recognition in the area of governmental accounting and financial reporting.

“This award represents a significant accomplishment by our agency thanks to the diligent work and leadership of Patricia Reavey, Alameda CTC’s director of finance,” says Alameda CTC Executive Director Arthur Dao. “In addition to the agency’s award, Ms. Reavey received an Award of Financial Reporting Achievement for the preparation of our award-winning CAFR.”

“This award comes on the heels of the Alameda County Transportation Commission Sales Tax Revenue Bonds (Limited Tax Bonds), Series 2014 being rated AAA by both Fitch Ratings and Standard and Poor’s ratings services, and their successful sale,” says Alameda CTC Chair Supervisor Scott Haggerty. “This is a banner year for Alameda CTC, demonstrating to voters that the agency continues to be an excellent steward of public funds.”

Earlier this year, Alameda CTC sold $137,145,000 (par value) of the Alameda County Transportation Commission Sales Tax Revenue Bonds (Limited Tax Bonds), Series 2014 through a syndicate led by Citigroup Global Markets Inc. Strengthened by their AAA rating, the bonds sold quickly at an all-in true interest cost of 1.587 percent.

The proceeds of the sale will finance certain transportation improvements and projects outlined in Alameda CTC’s 2000 Measure B Transportation Expenditure Plan, including BART extensions, key freight corridor improvements and other projects that support economic vitality, reduce traffic and serve the spectrum of transportation needs in Alameda County.

Assembly Committee approves electric charging stations bill

SUBMITTED BY JEFF BARBOSA

Seeking to expand the number of charging stations available to drivers of electric vehicles, on April 28 the state Assembly Transportation Committee approved AB 1696 by Assemblymember Bob Wieckowski (D-Fremont) to make increasing the stations a priority at park-and-ride lots and parking facilities. The bill passed on an 11-5 vote.

“California is where 40 percent of all electric vehicles are sold in the United States and they are the most widespread type of zero-emission vehicles on our roads,” Wieckowski said. “If we can reduce the worries people have that they won’t be able to find a charging station, we can reassure drivers and potential buyers. By putting more electric vehicles on the road we can reduce our emissions and improve our environment.”

In 2012, Governor Jerry Brown issued an executive order calling for the state to be prepared to support 1.5 million zero emission vehicles by 2025. Transportation emissions are the primary source of carcinogenic particulate matter and smog. Low-income communities are disproportionately affected by the transportation emissions.

AB 1696 clarifies that adding parking spaces with charging stations for electric vehicles and plug-in hybrids should be a priority in the Department of Transportation’s and the state Department of General Services’ vehicle parking incentive programs for parking facilities and park-and-ride lots.

Having more charging stations in public spaces will allow EV drivers to “top off” or fully recharge their vehicles to travel to their destinations.

The bill is supported by the Union of Concerned Scientists. They note that in the most populous cities in the United States, driving an EV will not only reduce emissions, but save owners money compared with driving the average gasoline vehicle.

Assemblymember Wieckowski represents the 25th Assembly District, which includes Fremont, Newark, Milpitas, San Jose and Santa Clara.

with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code.

“The range of artistic styles weave together different aspects of the skateboard culture including graffiti art, tattoo art, and pop surrealism. All of the work is skateboard themed and the pieces range from photography to works on canvas. This exhibition features outstanding works by artists from Berkeley, San Jose, San Ramon, San Francisco, Vacaville, Sacramento and other locations throughout the Bay Area to Los Angeles and even one from New

Set within the Sun Gallery as a completely independent exhibition space, the Ken Cook Room has tall white walls, a clerestory window on one side and ample floor space to act as a dedicated project room and space to show work specific to one artist. Our first exhibition, currently showing through June 1, 2014 in the Ken Cook Room, is that of Czech artist, Silvie Lukacova (<http://www.silvielukacova.com/home.html>)

“I apply paint to the surface of canvas or a wood panel to explore and express my understanding and view of the world around me and within me. My work is largely intuitive, exploring connections and relations between shapes, lines and colors, as a way of making sense of events and relations in real life; as well as a contemplation on the human condition, and a search for simplicity and order in the seemingly chaotic.”
