Rattlesnake Rendezvous tests primitive living skills

By DAVID R. NEWMAN

If you've ever wondered what it was really like to live during the Stone Age, now's your chance to find out! The 28th "Rattlesnake Rendezvous" is a three-day camping weekend in the Sunol Wilderness that recreates life during prehistoric times, minus the dinosaurs.

Part of the East Bay Regional Parks curriculum, the goal of the Rattlesnake Rendezvous is to teach participants primitive living skills while immersing them in a communal environment. Apart from modern amenities such as sleeping bags, tents, and a few groceries, the class will be completely dependent on what nature provides.

Naturalist and Docent Coordinator Cat Taylor has been running the program for the past 15 years. "We've had a few years now where we haven't been able to offer it because of the construction that's going on at the Calaveras Reservoir, so it's kind of exciting that we're able to bring this back."

Tri-Cities Motor Rally races back to Newark

By ROBBIE FINLEY

You don't need to go to the movies to see some fast and furious cars – Newark's got them right here! The East Bay's hottest cars will be on display at the 4th annual "Tri-Cities Motor Rally" on Saturday, May 2 at NewPark Mall.

"It's a great family atmosphere where there is something for all ages," said Valerie Boyle, President of the Newark Chamber of Commerce. Featuring a wide variety of custom, vintage, and exotic cars, the family-friendly event will have a lot to offer visitors, such as delicious food, a play area for kids, music, an awards ceremony, and of course, awesome cars! Over 100 are expected to be on display. "We invite all makes and models," Boyle said.

A number of prizes will be handed out to the vehicles exhibited during the event, such as Best In Show, Best Restoration, Trick Truck, Wildest Custom, Best Female Ride, Best Import, Pure Muscle, and Best Team Award. "Each year, the event has grown. The word has spread enough so that enthusiasts and participants save the date early and look forward to the announcements for the next event," Boyle explained.

For those enthusiasts who want to learn more about restoring their own vehicles, a Vendor Showcase Alley will be available featuring everything you need. "Vendors vary from year to year... (it's) a variety of local small businesses and chamber members, such as car care specialists and car dealerships," Boyle said. Visitors can not only see custom rides, but learn about how it's done.

The Motor Rally has also expanded its depth in the enthusiast's lifestyle with the addition of an RD Drift Track, where R car enthusiasts can come and race their vehicles around. "It's another form of participation that encompasses the motor rally theme," Boyle said.

This is the fourth year that the Newark Chamber of Commerce has staged the Motor Rally, which raises funds to help support the Chamber of Commerce's programs and activities. They have also teamed with local non-profit car-enthusiast organization Team District 10 to organize the event.

Proper Foot Care is Critical for Anyone with Diabetes

Washington Hospital Endocrinologist Offers Tips During Foot Health Awareness Month

Diabetes can literally knock you off your feet. High blood sugar levels associated with the disease can destroy the body's small vessels and damage nerves, raising the risk for foot problems. April is Foot Health Awareness Month, a good time to learn about some of the steps you can take to protect your feet.

“Diabetes affects the small blood vessels that supply the skin and nerves on the feet,” explained Dr. Prasad Katta, a local endocrinologist and member of the Washington Hospital medical staff. “Damage to the nerves can make it harder to feel sores and other issues with your feet. The reduced blood flow can make it more difficult to heal an injury or fight off an infection.”

Nerve damage from diabetes is called diabetic neuropathy. According to the American Diabetes Association, about half of all people with diabetes have some form of nerve damage. It is more common in those who have had the disease for a number of years.

"It is most common 10 to 15 years after you have been diagnosed with diabetes," Dr. Katta said. "That's why it's so critical to keep your blood sugar under control. As time goes by, it causes more and more damage."

Common foot problems include corns, calluses, blisters, ingrown toenails, bunions, plantar warts, hammertoes, dry and cracked skin, and athlete's foot. People with diabetes are at much greater risk of developing serious infections from these common foot problems due to the neuropathy and poor blood flow.

If you can't feel a crack or ingrown toenail on your foot because of neuropathy, it could get worse and become infected. The muscles of the foot may not function well because the nerves that make them move properly are damaged. This could cause the foot to not align properly and create too much pressure in one area of the foot, causing sores or other issues.

According to Dr. Katta, about 10 percent of people with diabetes will develop foot ulcers or sores. People with diabetes are also at much higher risk of foot amputations due to serious infections and other problems.

Preventing Problems

“The number one way to prevent foot problems is to keep your blood sugar level under control,” Dr. Katta stressed. “But you also need to take good care of your feet.”

He offered the following tips for proper foot care:

Consult with a podiatrist for an annual foot check up. You may also need to have a foot ultrasound to determine whether enough blood is flowing into your feet and a neurological exam to see how much sensation there is in your feet.

Foot Awareness Month is in April and it is a good time to learn some of the steps you can take to protect your feet. For more information about programs and services at Washington Hospital that can help you manage your diabetes, visit www.whhs.com/diabetes. To learn more about the Washington Center for Wound Healing and Hyperbaric Medicine, visit www.whhs.com/wound.

Examine your feet every day. Check the top and bottoms of your feet for dry, cracked skin, blisters, ingrown toenails, corns, calluses, cuts, scratches, and sores. Look for redness and increased warmth or tenderness when touching your foot.

Wash and dry your feet daily. Use warm water and mild soap. Pat the skin dry rather than rubbing it. After washing, use lotion on the bottom of your feet to prevent cracking.

Take good care of your toenails. It's best to cut your toenails after bathing, when they are soft and easy to cut. Cut them straight across and then smooth them with a nail file. Avoid cutting into the corners of your toes.

Protect your feet. Always wear comfortable shoes and never go barefoot, even around the house. Wear slippers or shoes with socks. Make sure your shoes fit properly. Avoid shoes with high heels and pointed toes as well as open-toed shoes and sandals because they increase your risk of injury and possible infection. Change your socks daily. Before putting on your shoes, make sure there are no foreign objects in them or rough areas that will rub your feet.

Ulcers and other sores that aren't healing properly may need to be treated at the Washington Center for Wound Healing and Hyperbaric Medicine. The professional staff at the center is highly trained in the specialized comprehensive care of problem wounds, using the most up-to-date approaches in the science of wound care.

"If you discover a sore on your foot or have an ingrown toenail or other problem with your feet, consult with your physician," Dr. Katta added. "It's important to get these issues treated before they get worse. It may be that you need antibiotics for an infected wound or specialized care for a foot sore. You have to stay on top of your feet and pay close attention to them to avoid serious problems."

Massage Therapy: Make Mom's Day!

Washington Wellness Center Offers Reduced-Rate Massages

The phrase, “Go ahead, make my day!” has been famous ever since actor Clint Eastwood uttered those words in his role as “Dirty Harry” Callahan in the 1983 movie Sudden Impact. But the Washington Wellness Center has a far kinder, gentler intent in offering a way to “make mom’s day.” From now throughout the month of May, you can treat your mother, sister, girlfriend, or any special woman in your life – including yourself – to a relaxing, rejuvenating 50-minute Mother’s Day Wellness Massage for $60 (a $75 value).

“I’m an advocate of women taking time for themselves,” says Washington Women’s Center Coordinator Laura Constantine, RN. “I personally try to get a massage every week. For me, it’s a time when I don’t have to deal with the computer, the telephone, or kids yelling, ‘Mom! We give ourselves to others all day long. It’s important to give back to yourself – or to other women in your life –in recognition of all we do.”

The Wellness Center’s experienced, licensed massage therapists offer a wide range of massage styles to fit individual preferences:

- Swedish Massage can relax your body tensions using long, fluid strokes and a variety of muscle-kneading techniques to improve circulation, reduce tension and relieve sore, aching muscles.
- Sports Massage helps athletes improve their flexibility and recover more quickly from injuries.
- Deep Tissue Massage focuses on connective tissues and works deep into muscles to help ease and release long-held patterns of muscular tension.
- Pregnancy Massage helps ease back pain for expectant mothers while aiding blood circulation and giving the mother rest and relief from pregnancy’s potential discomforts.
- Foot Reflexology, a gentle and even foot massage, helps with relaxation while reducing stress and tension.

- Therapeutic Massage combines neuromuscular therapy, connective tissue massage and reflexology with Swedish massage strokes to promote relaxation and restore balance to the body.
- Oncology Massage, performed by an oncology massage-trained therapist, can help in managing pain and reducing anxiety, nausea, insomnia and fatigue associated with cancer and cancer treatments.

In addition to these 50-minute massages, the Wellness Center also offers a 75-minute “hot stone massage” that uses water-heated smooth, flat stones that the massage therapist places on key points on the body. The therapist also may hold the stones and use warm oil to gently glide the stones over muscles. Hot stone massage promotes deep muscle and tissue relaxation, alleviates stress and releases toxins. It also relieves pain, improves circulation and calms the psyche. (The cost of the hot stone massage is $110.)

“I really like the deep tissue massage, because I sit in front of a computer for much of the day,” Constantine says. “By the end of the day, my shoulders are all crunched up, and the deep tissue massage eases the tension created by holding those muscles in the same position for so long.”

Constantine notes that women enjoy the relaxing, spa-like setting of the Wellness Center, with private dressing rooms and lockers. Clients receive a robe to keep them warm and cozy. The warm, comfortable massage tables are located in individual, private massage rooms.

Not Just for Women Only

The Wellness Center also offers men’s massages in a separate area with its own entrance, assuring privacy for both male and female clients.

“Some men might think that a massage is simply an indulgence, but massage offers a number of health benefits, too,” Constantine says. “Massage can calm the nervous system and reduce stress and anxiety. It also can im-

Mole Found on Scalp and Children and Lice

Dear Doctor,
My son has a mole on his scalp. Should I be concerned about this?

Dear Reader,
It is common to find moles on the scalp. The most important thing is to monitor the mole for changes. If any of the following are noted, you should take your son to see his pediatrician:

- Irregular borders (uneven shape or edges)
- Changes in color to black, blue, or red
- Changes in the surface texture
- Scabs, scaling, irritation, or bleeding in the mole

Dear Doctor,
My daughter came home from school with a letter indicating that she was exposed to lice. What do you recommend?

Dear Reader,
Begin by inspecting your daughter’s scalp and the nape of her neck for small bugs crawling around the shaft of the hair. You may need to use a magnifying glass to do this. If you see lice, you should wash her hair with an over the counter medicine that contains either pyrethrins combined with piperonyl butoxide; (brand name products: A-200, Pronto, R&C, Rid, Triple X), or permethrin lotion, 1%; (brand name product: Nix). Lastly, use the hottest cycles to wash all bedding, stuffed animals, pillows, throws, hats, scarves and clothes that were used or worn during the last 2 days. Any combs or brushes that were used should be placed in hot water (above 130° F) for at least 5-10 minutes. Frequent re-inspection is necessary for the first week of treatment to ensure the lice are gone. They can be difficult to get rid of so be patient!

Digging Deeper into Anthropology

The field of anthropology is more than the study of tribes hidden deep in a rain forest or sifting through the dust of newly discovered ruins to piece together shards of ancient artifacts. These activities are definitely aspects of anthropology, however, and contribute to the science of puzzling together the study of humankind. The many fields of anthropology, physical, forensic, cultural, linguistic and experimental, take a scientific perspective toward uncovering the story of who we are by looking back at where we came from.

Ohlone students taking General Ed courses in anthropology gain an understanding of culture—their own and the cultures of others—developing an understanding that broadens their knowledge of the world. Students who major in anthropology delve further into the subject, contrasting and comparing the patterns and similarities in cultural behaviors from one group of people to another. Dr. Jo Rainie Rodgers, anthropology professor at the College, has provided a wide variety of learning experiences and opportunities for students of anthropology at Ohlone. She has taken students on digs in China, Egypt and Russia and has acquired grant money that brought fabulous artifacts into Ohlone College’s collection. One example is a cast of Australopithecus afarensis, or the “Lucy Skeleton,” a 3.2 million-year-old skeleton of a now extinct species. To learn more about cultures, anthropology students have participated in a cross-disciplinary “kinship study” with international students in ESL courses. Through conducting the interviews the students build a picture of the various cultures of their project partners while allowing the ESL students an opportunity to increase their skills in English. In recent years, access to dig sites has become more difficult, limiting opportunities for students to participate in this learning experience. Finding creative ways to solve this problem, Dr. Rodgers and her colleagues in the anthropology department at Ohlone are creating artificial dig sites by creating pits, burying fragments of skeletal casts, and allowing them to sit long enough to acquire the aspects of an authentic site, a common practice at many universities. The anthropology department is the second largest program of course offerings in the science department at Ohlone. The variety of fields within this academic discipline offer students multiple ways to study our favorite subject – ourselves.

Ohlone College Foundation UPDATE:

The CIO Scholarship Fund, a Silicon Valley non-profit composed of chief information officers, has started a permanent endowment to fund an embedded tutoring program for STEM courses at Ohlone College with a donation of $23,000. Embedded tutors are students who assist instructors inside the classroom by helping students with their class assignments. Embedded tutoring has already had a positive impact on student success, increasing the number of students who successfully complete these courses by up to 10% each semester. Previous donations from CIO Scholarship Fund for embedded tutoring total $15,000. The additional donation brings their total contribution to $38,000! More than 400 scholarship applications were submitted to the Ohlone College Foundation which will award almost $150,000 to students. Applications are currently being reviewed and recipients will be announced at the College’s annual scholarship reception on May 28.

Dr. Jo Rainie Rodgers – Not afraid to get her hands dirty!

Jo Rainie Rodgers has a long professional career that has always incorporated her knowledge and love of anthropology. With a Bachelor of Science in Anthropology and later an MBA from CSU Hayward (now East Bay), her career has included running her own business in cultural resource management, examining intended construction zones for possible archaeological sites and making recommendations. She worked with US companies, such as Bechtel and others, to prepare employees for cultural transitions as they move to and from foreign countries for work. Because of her international experience, she was later hired by a large global company to oversee an international IT test site, collaborating with people in 65 countries, and engaging in the development of some of the earliest online and internet commerce systems. She began teaching anthropology classes at night and when she retired from the field of IT in 2000, she shifted to a greater focus on teaching at the College. She completed her Ed.D. from Alliant University while working at Ohlone. Her interest in anthropology began when she was eight years old and continued with a fervor that drove her to write to and ultimately meet Dr. Louis Leakey, a famed paleoanthropologist, who told Jo to come study with him when she finished college. She was devastated when he passed away before she got the opportunity. At Ohlone she has been actively involved with her students and with fellow faculty, having served on multiple committees and writing her department’s program review. She lead Ohlone’s participation in National Anthropology Day and created a scholarship for anthropology students who transfer to a four year school. Jo met her husband George Rodgers, now professor emeritus at Ohlone, while the two were excavating sites at Coyote Hills and Central Park. It’s safe to say that, throughout her work and personal experiences, anthropology has always been a part of her life.

What’s Next: Measure G Update

Ohlone has begun construction on the major projects funded by the Measure G Bond. The Academic Core Project is underway now with major demolition to begin this summer. Next fall the college will hold a groundbreaking to commence construction on three modern instructional facilities. The project includes an up to date science center with labs to serve our comprehensive courses in the fields of science and technology, as well as classrooms and office space. The spacious arts building encompasses classrooms and labs for a wide range of programs that include traditional arts such as drawing, painting and sculpture and a broader range of art programs including photography, graphic design, interior design, glass, and ceramics. The music program will also move to the new building with a comprehensive recording studio and rehearsal spaces. The third building, the “Learning Commons,” houses the library, which will provide access to enhanced access to digital information and search engines linked into multiple academic sites. General classrooms, with the latest instructional technology will comprise additional space in the learning commons. These buildings replace three of the 45 year old campus structures that have progressively declining infrastructure and facilities that are losing ground in meeting the needs for modern laboratories, instructional spaces and technology requirements. The new construction has taken into account the need for greater mobility to access the classrooms at the top of the campus, providing improved accessibility and reducing the need to climb stairs, one of the College’s most widely acknowledged features. Soft demolition, taking apart the interiors of these buildings, has already begun. Major demolition of all three structures is scheduled for this summer. All summer 2015 classes, with a few exceptions, will be held online and at the Newark campus, which is not affected by the construction. All services to students will be offered on the Newark campus so the majority of students will not be on the Fremont campus during the demolition phase.

Lincoln Elementary takes on the LearnStorm Challenge

SUBMITTED BY ANGELA EHRLICH

Lincoln Elementary (Newark) students' hard work has finally paid off with the LearnStorm Challenge and has unlocked $15,000 worth of free technology devices and six months of free internet access for eligible students. We did it by having over 50 percent of our students signed up for the challenge and with over 30 minutes each of activity in LearnStorm. Google, DonorsChoose.org, and Internet Essentials, are rewarding students' effort and making learning in LearnStorm easier.

LearnStorm is a free Bay Area math challenge powered by Khan Academy with over 44,000 students signed up from over 50 percent of Bay Area Schools. The three month learning challenge is designed to build a student's ability to learn anything through mastery of math skills. It rewards hard work and mastery, no matter if you're learning addition, calculus, or coding. The student has access to Common Core grade level math skills and challenges, and can also explore other topics in math, science, and social studies. It is team based school vs. school and city vs. city.

Lincoln Elementary is currently ranked high among the top 100 participating Bay Area schools, and a school-wide assembly will be held on Friday, May 1 to receive our free technology devices.

Congratulations Lincoln Leopards!

Abode Services partners with HandUp

SUBMITTED BY PAUL T. ROSYNSKY

Community members seeking to support neighbors in need have a new way to help as Abode Services and HandUp launch an online partnership that allows supporters to make an immediate difference in somebody's life. The partnership empowers Abode Services' participants to advocate for themselves and raise funds towards specific goals. Supporters can make donations through HandUp, a crowdfunding platform for people living without a home or who were previously homeless. Participants receive 100 percent of the donations made through HandUp, and use those contributions to fund basic needs like food, clothing, and housing, gain key educational and job training lessons, or fund any other needs necessary for them to remain housed. Donors can choose which participant to fund after hearing directly from the participant through online profiles. In their profiles, individuals tell their stories and explain why they are seeking funding.

Supporters can help someone like Phillip, a cancer survivor who is seeking to raise money to pay for a phlebotomy class so he can help others with medical conditions. They can also help Christopher who is seeking donations for a bed so he no longer has to sleep on the floor. There are currently half a dozen participants seeking donations, and Abode Services will add more as HandUp regularly updates the site allowing our community to continue supporting people in need. "This powerful HandUp donation platform will allow our supporters to hear directly from the people they are helping, and will allow supporters to witness the impact their donations are having on the lives of real people right here in our community," said Abode Services Executive Director Louis Chicoine.

Visit www.handup.org to learn more about how you can give a local neighbor a HandUp. To learn more about Abode Services, visit www.abodeservices.org.

Return of Fremont Street Eats; Fremont foodies, listen up!

Returning for its third season in Downtown Fremont, Fremont Street Eats will open on Friday, May 1 from 4:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. along Capitol Avenue between Liberty and State streets. Stop by the food trucks and experience eclectic flavors from a variety of gourmet offerings outside City Hall's doorstep. This popular event will take place every Friday between May and October and is sponsored by the Fremont Chamber of Commerce.

Starting on Wednesday, May 6 from 3 p.m. to 7 p.m., a new Downtown Farmer's Market will operate weekly on Capitol Avenue between Liberty and State streets. Come to Downtown Fremont and get your fresh fruit and vegetables on your way home from work every Wednesday from May through October!

Please note that both events will move mid-summer to a temporary location on Liberty Street between Capitol and Beacon avenues. This is due to street improvement work scheduled to occur on Capitol Avenue between State Street and Paseo Padre Parkway.

For more information about Downtown events and projects, visit www.fremont.gov/Downtown.

Bright and Sustainable Streets

The City of Fremont is taking big steps to ensure sustainability in the community! The City recently completed the replacement of 351 existing high pressure sodium (HPS) streetlights with light emitting diode (LED) streetlights. The replaced street lights run along Mowry Avenue (from the Interstate 880 interchange to Peralta Boulevard) and along Walnut Avenue/Argonaut Way (from Mowry Avenue to Mission Boulevard).

In addition to contributing to Fremont's sustainability efforts, the project will reduce electrical consumption by 130,000 kWh per year and help save an estimated $16,400 per year on electrical costs. Each of these represents approximately a 50 percent reduction compared to our city's existing conditions.

But wait, the project isn't over yet! Fremont is planning to convert the remaining 14,753 streetlights and 761 community park lights to LED, which will result in more than $700,000 in annual electricity savings. This street light project is just another step in the right direction as Fremont strives to conserve resources and build a more sustainable future.

Tri-City Volunteers takes part in East Bay Gives

SUBMITTED BY GLORIA LARA

Tri-City Volunteers is excited to be a part of East Bay Gives, a one-day online fundraising event on Tuesday, May 5. This event, hosted by East Bay Community Foundation, connects caring individuals like you to charitable causes that are making an impact in our local community. With May 5th quickly approaching, we would like to ask for your support in three ways: Mark your calendar for May 5th, Like us on Facebook to stay connected, and share our Facebook page with friends to help us spread the word about Tri-City Volunteers and our participation in East Bay Gives.

Tri-City Volunteers is a non-denominational, non-profit organization serving more than 6,000 families needing nutritional support in the Tri-City Area as well as neighboring Alameda County cities. Founded in 1970 by a group of community members who saw a need for better food security in the Tri-Cities, Tri-City Volunteers seeks to eliminate hunger and promote financial self-sufficiency. In addition to food assistance, we provide volunteer opportunities and job training in order to improve the quality of life for all in our community, especially children, youth, low-income families and seniors. With a staff of nine, a volunteer force of more than 1,900 and a budget that barely breaks $600,000 we are extremely efficient in distributing over eight million pounds of food annually.

We hope that you will support us during this time and team up with us to raise funds to continue our fight to end hunger. Don't forget to Like us on Facebook at www.facebook.com/TriCityVolunteers and bookmark our East Bay Gives page at www.tinyurl.com/ebgtcv.

CARS pulls into PhotoCentral

SUBMITTED BY KATE JORDAHL

Please join PhotoCentral for a world premiere of a new body of work by renowned photographer Bill Owens. “CARS: World Premier of New Work from Vintage Negatives and Chromes” was photographed in the 1970s and comprises rich color work as well as Owens’ signature black and white photographic style. “CARS” complements and supplements Owens’ “Suburbia” (1973), which has been called one of the seminal photographic books of the Twentieth Century.

Born in San Jose, California, in 1938, Owens has spent his life as a traveler, Peace Corps worker, photographer, photo journalist, and brewer. He has received a Guggenheim Fellowship, two NEA (National Endowment for the Arts) grants, founded Buffalo Bill’s Brewery in Hayward in 1983 and launched “American Brewer Magazine” three years later. His publications include “Our Kind of People” (1975), “Working: I Do It for the Money” (1977), “Leisure” (2004), and “The Village” 2014.

Owens’ work has been shown at the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art, San Jose Museum of Art, Salon de la Photo in Paris, Centre Photographique d’Île de France, the Robert Koch Gallery in San Francisco, and the Greg Kucera Gallery in Seattle. His work is owned by museums and independent collectors alike.

The show will run from May 4 to June 13 with a reception open to the public on Saturday, May 16 with vintage cars on display, courtesy of local community members. Prints will be available for purchase to support PhotoCentral programs.

Communities responding to Overcome Poverty

SUBMITTED BY BRUCE STRYD

Tri-City residents looking to make a difference in these trying times are invited to participate in the Fremont CROP (Communities Responding to Overcome Poverty) Hunger Walk for the 6th year. Over 100 walkers will join us on Sunday, May 3 around Lake Elizabeth in Central Park to help stop hunger and poverty in our community and around the world through self-help initiatives. A portion of the funds raised will go to the Centerville Free Dining Room, which serves people with dinners and helpful resources in Fremont.

The Fremont CROP Hunger Walk has been anchored by five Fremont congregations, including Pathway Community, St. Paul's Methodist, St. Christina's Greek Orthodox, Centerville Presbyterian and Niles Discovery. Last year, about 80 walkers raised more than $6,500 in the Fremont CROP Hunger Walk. We invite other Tri-City residents to join in this compassionate and practical effort.

On why she walks each year, Judy Huff of Fremont stated, "I walk because they walk. What a way to help people in need and to do it in a healthy way and atmosphere. It's a win-win situation. I'm just glad I can do it in company with like-minded friends instead of in the danger that those in need have to cope with on an everyday basis."

For more information about the Fremont CROP Hunger Walk, contact Jan Breen at jansbreen@yahoo.com.

Drivers for Survivors expands service

"Our goal is to offer relief to the stress that comes with a cancer diagnosis," explains Sherry Higgs, founder and executive director of DFS. "Many patients struggle with getting to their vital appointments. Cancer patients may feel like a burden to family and friends or they may not have a strong support network."

As a cancer survivor, Higgs understands the experiences that patients have during this daunting time. "Worries about finances and insurance coverage, coupled with juggling appointment logistics can strain relationships. Life transitions into a tightrope walk as resources are stretched to the limit." Providing clients free transportation assistance with a caring companion alleviates much of the anxiety they experience and provides relief to their family members. DFS absorbs some of their hardship with dignity, discretion, and tenderness.

The drivers offer much more than door-to-door transportation service. They are the heartbeat of DFS because of the supportive companionship they provide to clients. The volunteer driver-companions are carefully matched with clients who have similar interests. Many of the driver-companions are cancer survivors themselves, and since our inception, they have provided over 4,700 rides to cancer patients.

Drivers for Survivors is a nonprofit, 501(c)(3), charitable organization serving the residents of Fremont, Newark and Union City. For more information or to assist in our efforts, please visit <http://driversforsurvivors.org/donors/donate>.

SUBMITTED BY DRIVERS FOR SURVIVORS

Drivers for Survivors (DFS) is taking another giant step forward in its mission to help cancer patients become cancer survivors. DFS provides volunteer-companion drivers for ambulatory cancer patients to their medical treatment visits, including surgery, chemotherapy, and radiation. Because we have successfully increased our pool of companion drivers, we can now provide service to individuals while they undergo diagnosis for a possible cancerous finding. Even the suspicion of cancer qualifies you for services from DFS. We are now able to step in earlier to assist those in need at a vulnerable and traumatic time of their lives.

American, United deal setbacks to Boeing's 787 plane

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

American Airlines Group Inc. says it will delay delivery of five Boeing 787 jets in response to slower growth in international travel demand.

American announced Friday that it will take the planes in 2017 and 2018 instead of 2016. American took delivery of its third 787 on Friday. It plans to put the first one into service next month on flights between Dallas and Chicago, then use 787s on international routes starting in June.

News of the delay surfaced a day after United Continental Holdings Inc. announced that it would change an order to take 10 Boeing 777 jets instead of 787s. United already has several 787s, and executives said they like the plane but wanted the bigger 777 for some routes.

The 787, which Boeing Co. calls the Dreamliner, is made largely from lightweight carbon material to save on fuel. The planemaker disclosed this week that it is still losing money on the jet but hopes to begin breaking even on each delivery later this year. Meanwhile, United's switch to the 777 will help Boeing fill out orders for that plane before the introduction of a successor model around 2020.

Boeing shares closed down $1.47 to $148.40 but have gained 14 percent since the start of the year.

Taxes, ex-spouse benefits, and you

By MARIAELENA LEMUS
SOCIAL SECURITY PUBLIC AFFAIRS SPECIALIST IN SAN JOSE

April 14 is both Ex-Spouse Day and the eve of tax day. These two observances are doubly important if you are an ex-spouse, because Social Security pays benefits to eligible former spouses, and you may need to claim this income on your tax forms.

If you are age 62, unmarried, and divorced from someone entitled to Social Security retirement or disability benefits, you may be eligible to receive benefits based on his or her record. To be eligible, you must have been married to your ex-spouse for 10 years or more. If you have since remarried, you can't collect benefits on your former spouse's record unless your later marriage ended by annulment, divorce, or death. Also, if you're entitled to benefits on your own record, your benefit amount must be less than you would receive based on your ex-spouse's work. In other words, we'll pay the higher of the two benefits for which you're eligible, but not both.

You can apply for benefits on your former spouse's record even if he or she hasn't retired, as long as you divorced at least two years before applying. You can also elect to receive only the divorced spouse benefits and delay benefits on your own record after your full retirement age, which may translate to a higher monthly amount for you. If, however, you decide to wait until full retirement age to apply as a divorced spouse, your benefit will be equal to half of your ex-spouse's full retirement amount or disability benefit. The same rules apply for a deceased former spouse.

The amount of benefits you get has no effect on the benefits of your ex-spouse and his or her current spouse. Visit "Retirement Planner: If You Are Divorced" at www.socialsecurity.gov/retire2/divspouse.htm to find all the eligibility requirements you must meet to apply as a divorced spouse. Our benefits planner gives you an idea of your monthly benefit amount. If your ex-spouse died after you divorced, you can still qualify for widow's benefits. You'll find information about that in a note at the bottom of the website.

Visit www.socialsecurity.gov/retire2/divspouse.htm today to learn if you're eligible for benefits on your ex-spouse's record. What you learn may bring a smile to your face ... even on tax day!

Microsoft results show company's shift, but is it enough?

BY BRANDON BAILEY
AP TECHNOLOGY WRITER

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) Microsoft is changing its business. The question is whether it's changing fast enough.

The tech giant showed some progress Thursday, reporting better-than-expected quarterly earnings and more growth in its relatively new cloud computing segment. CEO Satya Nadella has been investing in new services and redesigning Microsoft's most popular programs for smartphones and other mobile gadgets.

But a continuing slump in the PC industry has caused Microsoft's stock to flounder in recent months, marking the end of a honeymoon year in which shares rose steadily after Nadella took the reins in February 2014. Microsoft's latest report shows another decline in profit and revenue from the company's flagship Windows software for personal computers.

Wall Street analysts say 2015 is the year Nadella needs to show his strategy is making a difference.

"He needs to not just talk the talk, but walk the walk," said FBR Capital Markets analyst Daniel Ives, who's been a fan of Nadella's moves to overhaul a company best-known for its PC software. He called the quarterly report "a big step in the right direction."

Microsoft's financial results underscore the importance of Nadella's efforts. Revenue from cloud computing has grown rapidly, as more businesses are paying to use software housed in Microsoft's data centers. The Redmond, Washington-based company says it's on track to log more than $6 billion in cloud sales this year.

But Microsoft still relies heavily on selling traditional software, which contributed the largest part of its $21.7 billion in sales for the quarter. While overall revenue increased, thanks to sales by the newly acquired Nokia phone business, the company saw a 26 percent drop in Windows licensing revenue for consumer PCs and a 19 percent drop in licensing for business PCs.

Demand for new PCs is expected to fall in 2015 for the fourth consecutive year, according to International Data Corp. Microsoft blamed weak demand, along with a strong dollar overseas, when it issued a forecast in January for lower revenue than analysts had expected. That sent Microsoft's stock tumbling more than 10 percent in one day.

After peaking at $50.05 last November, Microsoft Corp. shares have traded below $43 recently. The stock closed Thursday at $43.34 and rose almost 4 percent in extended trading after the earnings report.

Microsoft is hoping for a boost later this year when it releases a redesigned version of Windows with new features for PCs and mobile devices. And Nadella has taken other steps to get Microsoft's software into the hands of consumers who prefer smartphones and tablets.

That includes offering Windows at steep discounts for manufacturers to use in lower-priced tablets and laptops. This may hurt revenue near term, but Bernstein Research analyst Mark Moerdler says it should pay off eventually by getting more people to use Microsoft products like the Bing search engine and Office 365 programs for documents, spreadsheets and mail.

Similarly, Microsoft has released new Office apps for devices that run on rival operating systems from Apple and Google. While the apps are free for consumers, Microsoft hopes to gain revenue by charging for extra services and versions for business users.

The strategy makes sense, said Forrester analyst Ted Schadler. But he cautioned, "this kind of structural transition takes a long time."

Zero to One: Notes on Startups, or How to Build the Future

The thought pops into your head at least four times per weekday: I can do this.

You can give good customer service; you do it every day. You're good with numbers and people. You have more know-how than you know what to do with, and you can do this – on your own, for your own passion.

So you're thinking of stepping out, going it alone, and founding a start-up. But before you close one door to open another, read "Zero to One" by Peter Thiel (with Blake Masters).

How does a business thrive?

It's a question you've asked yourself while you're thinking about your start-up. How can your business get a leg-up on success? The answer, says Thiel, is that it can't... unless it invests "in the difficult task of creating new things..." The way to do that is not with a Me-Too business, but with technology, which is "miraculous."

Think about it: since mid-20th century, "only computers and communications have improved dramatically..."

While there's a lot of conflicting tenets in business, one key to building a "valuable company" is to figure out what nobody is doing, and do it. Another key is to create a monopoly, but not the illegal kind. Instead, you want "the kind of company that's so good at what it does that no other firm can offer a close substitute." That is the mark of a successful business but, to achieve it, you must know what a good one looks like. Then, start small and scale up carefully.

Don't underestimate the competition, but don't pay it too much heed, either; the danger is that competition "can make people hallucinate opportunities where none exist." When founding your start-up, hire people who enjoy working together – people you like, and that are alike in their interests. Much like a marriage, pick partners and board members carefully. Ward off instability by establishing who owns the company, who runs it, and who governs it. Know how to quash competition within your workplace. Remember that you are a salesman. And then start looking for secrets. They're everywhere, and they'll be the basis of your new business...

Just before you open the cover of "Zero to One," have a baseball glove ready. There's a lot of info lobbed at you here – fast – and you'll want to catch every bit of it.

The interesting thing, however, is that this isn't so much a book of advice as it is a book of thought-pokers. Building a successful start-up is not to be taken lightly, as author and PayPal founder Peter Thiel (with Blake Masters) subtly warns. There are dozens of things to understand, pitfalls to avoid, boxes to check when founding a business, and the authors don't mince words when discussing them. That kind of caution – a demand to think first - is invaluable for all future moguls.

And if that's where your aim lies, then this book will give you plenty to ponder. Just clear your calendar a bit, and grab "Zero to One" because you can do it.

Seafood consumption

Dear EarthTalk: What are some basic guidelines about seafood consumption, especially for women and in light of all the pollution threats to our oceans and waterways? – Betsy Draper, Boston, MA

Wild salmon, high in “long chain” omega-3s, is one of the healthiest foods we can eat. Credit: Roddy Scheer, roddyscheer.com

Between mercury poisoning, overfishing and the environmental impacts of fish farms or “aquaculture,” some might expect to see a “Proceed with Caution” sign above seafood counters soon. Others contend that fish and shellfish are an important part of a healthy diet, providing high-quality protein and omega-3 fatty acids. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) recommends eating up to 12 ounces of fish and shellfish per week, but only if they are “lower in mercury.”

Mercury can be released into the air through industrial pollution and can accumulate in streams and oceans. The FDA warns that if you regularly eat types of fish that are high in mercury, it can accumulate in your blood stream. They add that mercury is removed from the body naturally, but it may take over a year for levels to drop significantly. For this reason, women trying to become pregnant should avoid eating high-in-mercury fish like shark, swordfish, king mackerel and tilefish, and gravitate toward low-in-mercury shrimp, canned light tuna, salmon, pollock and catfish. According to the Monterey Bay Aquarium’s “Super Green List,” fish that are low in mercury and also good sources of especially healthy “long-chain” omega-3 fatty acids include Atlantic mackerel from Canada and the U.S., freshwater Coho salmon from the U.S., wild-caught Pacific sardines and Alaskan wild-caught salmon (fresh or canned).

Of course, it’s possible to obtain long-chain omega-3s without eating fish. Omega-3s supplement is derived from a strain of algae that naturally produces high amounts of eicosapentaenoic acid (EPA) and docosahexaenoic acid (DHA), the healthiest omega-3s. Although most people think fish are the original source of DHA and EPA, these omega-3s actually come from the algae lower in the food chain.

“When salmon farming began in North America, farmers discovered that without fish oil in their diet, farmed salmon did not contain salmon oil in their tissues,” says Udo Erasmus, Ph.D., author of Fats that Heal-Fats that Kill. “Fish get their ‘fish oil’ from the foods they eat. When we trace these supplement oils back to their origin, we find that the oils we call ‘fish oils’ are actually made by plants at the bottom of the food chain. One-celled red-brown algae makes fish oils. Fish oils are actually plant-based products.”

Algae and other plant-based omega fatty acids also will not deplete the ocean’s supply of fish. Industrial overfishing practices have wiped out certain types of fish before they’ve had a chance to repopulate, and unintentionally killed other marine species besides fish—known as “bycatch”—in their large nets. Upwards of one million sea turtles, for example, were estimated to have been killed as bycatch from 1990-2008, according to a report published in Conservation Letters in 2010. The transition to aquaculture, where fish are raised in confined quarters (like the “factory farming” of pigs, cows and chickens) has its own environmental burdens. According to the Mangrove Action Project, an estimated three million hectares of important coastal wetlands, including mangroves, have already been lost in order to make room for artificial shrimp ponds.

Music & Memory Book-to-Action program

SUBMITTED BY SALLY THOMAS

Hayward Public Library, in collaboration with California State University East Bay (CSUEB) and Alzheimer’s Services of the East Bay, invites the community to a special screening of the award-winning film “Alive Inside” on Thursday, April 30.

This film reveals a remarkable, music-based breakthrough in the care of Alzheimer’s and dementia patients, which has already transformed lives. Fostered by non-profit Music & Memory, the initiative is led by social worker Dan Cohen and is captured on camera over the course of three years by filmmaker Michael Rossato-Bennett. The film documents how songs from Alzheimer’s and dementia patients’ past can awaken memories and emotions that have been asleep for years, sometimes decades.

The April 30 film showing is the keynote event of the Music and Memory Book-to-Action program, which is raising awareness, sparking discussion, and engaging community members in music-sharing events with local seniors. This free film screening is open to the entire community as a way to raise awareness of this methodology for enriching the lives of the senior population, and celebrate the possibilities this brings for opening long-closed doors in the minds of those who suffer from Alzheimer’s and dementia.

Cinco de Mayo victory celebrated

One of the most celebrated events that takes place in some parts of Mexico and the U.S. is Cinco de Mayo (5th of May), a holiday that commemorates the Mexican army's victory over France at La Batalla de Puebla (The Battle of Puebla) in 1862.

In the aftermath of the Mexican-American War (1846-1848) and the Reform War (1858-1861), Mexico's financial status became uncertain, accumulating debts to Spain, Britain, and France. While the other two nations arranged a negotiation, France decided to conquer Mexico and arrived in Veracruz. About 6,000 French troops made their way to Puebla and fought a small number of poorly trained Mexican army men. However, on May 5, 1862, the Mexican army won and forced the French to retreat.

Although the holiday celebrates Mexican heritage and pride, it is widely celebrated in the U.S. especially in areas with Mexican-American population. Festivities, however big or small, occur with mariachi music, Mexican folk dancing, parades, and authentic Mexican food. To commemorate the historic battle, various Tri-City organizations are celebrating the holiday for a cause. Other cities will be hosting fun, family-friendly events as well.

Raise your rooms to new heights with eye-catching ceilings

Want to infuse your home with architectural interest? Start at the top.

"The ceiling is really the most overlooked design element in a space, hands down," said Brian Patrick Flynn, whose interior designs are regularly featured on HGTV.com and often showcased by his own company, FlynnsideOut Productions.

Consider this: The largest solid surface in a room - besides the floor - is the ceiling. Instead of leaving it bright white or builder beige, convert this blank canvas into a decorative canopy of color and texture.

Flynn and other influential designers are forecasting a ceiling "revival" in 2015. Fresh interpretations of vintage styles - such as gleaming metal tiles and textural wood beams - are helping inspire that trend, along with new, easy-to-install products that put these ceiling projects well within the reach of today's DIY-ers.

"Just like people, rooms need different layers to be one-of-a kind," Flynn said. "That includes a ceiling that makes people look up and scan the entire space."

Here are some hot ceiling trends to take your rooms to new heights:

Laver on the luster

Stamped metal ceilings have contributed shine and sophistication to American homes since they were introduced in the 1880s. Besides beauty, metal ceilings offer quite some practicality. They resist mold and mildew, offer sag resistance and last longer than plaster or dry-wall. Metallaire metal ceiling tiles from Armstrong are available in twelve patterns, and a variety of finishes, including chrome, copper, brass, white and lacquered steel. The lacquered steel panels also can be painted to accent or blend with the rest of the room. Regardless of the finish, the texture of the tiles creates a tactile top layer to the space.

Mix and match ceiling styles

Some room designers are combining different decorating elements at the top, such as inlaying the recesses of coffered ceilings with gold or copper tiles. Flynn said he's also a fan of tongue-and-groove ceilings accented with beams. "This adds a ton of visual interest to the room, and can make it feel much larger," he said.

Create character with wood

From rustic timber to sleek teak, wood hues help set the tone in a room. Besides imparting a sense of warmth, the grains and knots in wood panels add a textural layer that contrasts nicely with smooth surfaces like painted walls and granite countertops.

Add architectural depth

Coffered ceilings first appeared in Roman architecture, and their geometric elegance has graced grand buildings ever since. Today, the cost and complexity of building coffered ceilings have been reduced by lightweight materials and easy-to-install prefabricated systems that boast features like mold, mildew and sag resistance.

Flynn recommends homeowners start thinking about their ceiling by exploring websites for ideas. A good place to start is www.armstrong.com/residential-ceilings, which offers hundreds of examples, including some really interesting before and after photos.

Sandi and Dick Pantages will be honored with the 2015 Cultural Arts Recognition Award at Music at the Mission's Masquerade Ball.

Along with all the music, delicious food, and masked merriment on Friday, May 1, Music at the Mission will be honoring Fremont's Sandi and Dick Pantages with the 2015 Cultural Arts Recognition Award.

"Thank you, Sandi and Dick, for your many years of cultivating a thriving music and arts community," said Aileen Chanco, Music at the Mission Executive Director. "Your passionate commitment, dedication and generous support for the community's performing arts organizations, especially Music at the Mission, have created a vibrant resource that all of us enjoy and appreciate as an investment in the next generation."

"Dick and Sandi have a distinguished history of volunteer leadership," said friend and fellow arts advocate Ann Millican. "They are dedicated to community service and improving the cultural quality of life."

The Pantages received statewide award recognition by the Association of California Orchestras for their work at the Fremont Symphony Orchestra, and have shared their wealth of experience with Music at the Mission. Sandi is currently the Music at the Mission Co-Chair of Development with Gael Stewart.

The Fremont Opera and Fremont Cultural Arts Council have also benefitted from the couple's patronage, knowledge, and hands-on involvement. And the Pantages continue to create and support exciting opportunities in the arts having recently founded and serve on the Board of the Slack Key Music Center, a non-profit foundation based in Kauai, Hawaii.

If you would like to attend A Silk Road Journey to enjoy an unforgettable evening out and celebrate this inspiring couple and the support they've given to the arts in our community, individual tickets are available online at www.musicatmsj.org. Questions or reservations for a table of ten should be directed to hmwhitney@aol.com. Registration closes on Wednesday, April 29. All proceeds will go to Music at the Mission, as it works to bring truly extraordinary chamber music to the Tri-City area in concerts and youth education programs.

Children's BOOK WEEK

Children's Book Week is celebrated May 4-10, 2015. It's a week to think about the books you love and to enjoy new books.

The first Book Week was celebrated in 1919. How many years ago was that?

In 1921, a Book Week poster was designed to encourage children to read. A new poster has been designed every year since then.

This year's poster was created by Grace Lee. She was born in Taiwan and grew up in Los Angeles. She is currently working as a storybook artist at Disney Publishing Worldwide.

Use the code to find out the slogan for the first Children's Book Week Poster.

AN INTERVIEW with Jeff Kinney

Kid Scoop readers had some questions for Jeff Kinney, creator of the popular Diary of a Wimpy Kid book series.

Q: Did you always want to be a writer when you were a kid?

A: I didn't! I wanted to be a newspaper cartoonist, and that dream didn't come through for me. I also wanted to be a computer programmer, and that dream did come true ... I created Poptropica, a virtual world for kids.

Q: As a kid, what was your favorite book?

A: I liked Tales of a Fourth Grade Nothing by Judy Blume.

Q: Have you always enjoyed reading?

A: I have. Especially in the bathroom. Okay, that's embarrassing.

Q: What inspired you to write the Wimpy Kid series?

A: My failure to become a newspaper cartoonist! I knew I had to get my cartoons seen, but I just needed to get them in another form.

Q: Did you enjoy middle school?

A: I didn't! For me, it was scary. I think things have gotten better for kids.

Q: Did you think that the first Wimpy Kid book would get so popular that you would have to write more?

A: I never thought the first book would even get published!

Q: What are your hobbies outside of writing?

A: I like going to Boston Celtics games with my kids. Does that count as a hobby?

Q: Are you thinking of writing another series?

A: I am! I hope I can come up with a good idea!

What to do after an earthquake

By HILLARY SCHMEEL

This is the fourth and final installment of our earthquake series, covering what steps to take after an earthquake hits.

After an earthquake there are a few things you will want to do. Most importantly, make sure everyone is safe and has no serious injuries, then inspect your home for damage. Do not use electrical switches or appliances if you suspect a gas leak since sparks may ignite gas. If you smell gas, hear gas escaping, see a broken gas line or if you suspect a gas leak, evacuate the building and call PG&E or 9-1-1 immediately.

If it is safe to do so, turn off the gas service shutoff valve, typically located near the gas meter. Do not shut off the valve unless you find the presence of any one of these conditions because there may be a long delay before PG&E can turn your service back on. Check for damaged household electrical wiring and turn off the power at the main electric switch if you suspect any damage. If the power goes out, turn off all electric appliances, and unplug major electric appliances to prevent possible damage when the power is turned back on.

Assume there will be after-shocks. Secure anything heavy that could fall and eliminate fire hazards. Listen to the radio for instructions regarding turning off gas and water. Local radio and television stations will provide information in the event of a major emergency. In some instances, the Emergency Alert System may be activated. Specific emergency instructions will be broadcasted by KCBS AM 740 and KQED FM 88.5. If available, television stations will include KAXT TV 1, KTVU TV 2, KRON TV 4, KPIX TV 5, KGO TV 7, KQED TV 9, KNTV TV 11, KBCW TV 12, KDTV TV 14 (Univision), KFTL TV 28, KSTS TV 48 (Telemundo) and KKPX TV 65. Emergency instructions will provide information on whether it is safer to evacuate your home or workplace or whether you will be better protected by staying in place. If you are ordered to evacuate, the radio announcements will also advise you on the safest place to go.

Get to a safe place outdoors if you think your home is unstable or in danger of collapsing. Provide first aid for anyone slightly injured and seek medical attention for anyone seriously injured. Check for downed or damaged electric utility lines. Never touch wires lying on the ground, hanging on poles, or objects that may be touching them. Downed wires may still be carrying current and could shock, injure, or kill you if touched.

If an earthquake happens and your child is in school, remember that every school has an emergency plan that includes evacuation destinations. Call your child's school today to find out where the location will be. In the event of an evacuation, you will be notified by the school of where and when your child can be picked up. Make sure the school has a way of reaching you. Radio or television stations may also have these instructions.

"It is difficult to assess what services will be available following an earthquake," said Amiel Thurston, Acting Deputy Fire Chief of the Fremont Fire Department. "It is anticipated that a significant earthquake on the Hayward fault will be disruptive to utility providers, communication vendors, hospitals and emergency service providers. Many of the systems relied upon for daily life may be altered or unavailable, including the 9-1-1 system itself. Depending on the severity of an earthquake, it may take time for resources to flow into affected communities."

After the 2014 South Napa earthquake, power was unavailable to more than 69,000 homes and businesses for over 24 hours. "Key concerns will be shelter, food, water and essential medications," said Thurston. It is very important to have a plan and be prepared to be self-sufficient for a minimum of three days.

"Recovery following a disaster is closely tied to funding," said Thurston. "California encourages property owners to carry earthquake insurance in addition to homeowners insurance to offset losses. If a disaster were to occur resulting in significant devastation in Fremont, we would look to the state and FEMA for financial assistance with response and recovery. Financial aid for individuals and businesses would be requested and resources (earthquake recovery centers) would likely be established to assist recovery efforts."

Recognizing our public safety dispatchers

SUBMITTED BY FREMONT AND NEWARK PD

The week of April 12-18, 2015 is National Public Safety Telecommunicators Week, also known as Dispatcher Appreciation Week, a week set aside to formally recognize the hard work and dedication of our nation's Public Safety Dispatchers.

Matt Reymundo has been recognized as Newark Police Department's Dispatcher of the Year, while Communications Supervisor Kim Codey has been selected for Fremont Police Department.

Dispatchers are the voice at the other end of the 911 call assisting a distraught caller and at the other end of the radio when police, firefighters, and medical personnel are responding to emergency situations. Not being visible or always recognized in the public eye, the critical role they play between the community and first responders is essential for every public safety call for service.

Niles Palm Trees and the Panama Pacific International Exposition

SUBMITTED BY JOYCE BLUEFORD

The landscape of Fremont has been described as paradise with its mountains, streams and palms especially in the older districts of Mission San Jose, Irvington and Niles. John Rock, considered the father of California palms, grew palms in San Jose in the 1860s. His elegant use of the palms promoted the idea of a tropical paradise. When Rock expanded his California Nursery Company to the Niles area in 1884, he moved many of the palms with many other plants.

California Nursery Company was growing in a time when agriculture and horticulture were becoming big business. In the 1898 nursery catalog, Rock states that "palms have become almost indispensable in all decorations—whether for apartments or conservatories—or the production of tropical effects in landscapes."

In 1915, W. V. Eberly, manager for the California Nursery, received the company's largest and highest profile contract, providing landscaping and exhibits for Panama Pacific International Exposition (PPIE) in San Francisco. California Nursery Company supplied the exposition with over a hundred full-grown palm trees (about 40 years old). The Avenue of Palms was a prominent feature that was aligned with palms on both sides. After the fair, some of the palms came back to Niles and 25 of them can be seen in the California Nursery Historical Park.

Another person that was involved in the planning stages would later purchase California Nursery Company in 1917. George C. Roeding, Sr., a Fresno nurseryman, was the first director of the Palace of Horticulture at PPIE. Roeding felt that this event needed to highlight the innovations that were going on in the field, from creating new fruits for consumers to developing more efficient agricultural tools to get trees to market. California Nursery Company, under the Roeding family, would become the largest nursery in the west coast from Washington to South America.

To commemorate the role of California Nursery Company in PPIE, Fremont Math Science Nucleus, California Nursery Company Legacy Council and the City of Fremont are planning several events at the California Nursery Historical Park. This park is owned by the city and currently under a master planning process to insure the preservation of its history for the public, including exhibits, lectures, tours and a Gala on Saturday, July 25.

For more information on the upcoming events, please go to <http://msnucleus.org/calnursery/events.html>. There will be an organizational meeting on Wednesday, April 29 for people interested in helping with the events. Please contact (510) 790-6284 or blueford@msnucleus.org for more information.

Tri-City Stargazer APRIL 29 – MAY 5, 2014 BY VIVIAN CAROL

For All Signs: Saturn and Uranus are in a moderately tense aspect. This is like two tectonic plates that want/need the same space. Each of us is struggling with a pull between the need for change, making the break for freedom, and our desire to maintain worldly security. The ideal solution is one that generates a creative alteration without totally annihilating stability. If you are feeling this energy, be aware it is not simply a phase or a mood. It is a message to be taken seriously and handled consciously. Search for ways to make changes intentionally or they will sneak in the back door and take you by surprise.

Aries the Ram (March 21-April 20): There are times that you have a sharp tongue and this week you may want to lash out quickly. Be careful of where you aim that weapon. Authority figures, older people, and teachers may not be forgiving. Give attention to vehicle complaints. You may have big car trouble if you don't.

Taurus the Bull (April 21-May 20): It may be difficult to find common ground with partners, authorities, or significant others in your life during this period. You have a desire to express yourself and the other seems to be recalcitrant. Don't turn this into a power play or long-term resentment. That will not be good for your health. Tone down your anger a notch or two and say your piece. Then let it go.

Gemini the Twins (May 21-June 20): You want to challenge the rules or the authorities and this is not the time to expect success, regardless of the topic. You will be blocked, no matter which way you present your desired outcome. Save yourself the trouble and settle your mind for the present. An opportunity will present itself later at a better time.

Cancer the Crab (June 21-July 21): There is a lot of chatter all around you. Some of it may be disturbing to your sense of comfort. Friends or family may be squabbling. Don't buy into it or worry much. The dust will settle soon and whatever the event, it will be over in a few days.

Leo the Lion (July 22-August 22): It is possible that the efforts of the last several months are set on display for others to see. You are welcomed as royalty. Beware the tendency to get carried away with your grandeur. You might make promises that you can't deliver or spend resources that you don't have.

Virgo the Virgin (August 23-September 22): You may encounter some unpleasant news this week related to family, home or career. Double check the veracity of any fact that comes your way. It is likely to be presented as a bigger drama than it really is. There may even be a liar in the bushes. That is especially a danger if money is involved.

Libra the Scales (September 23-October 22): Debts owed to you become irritants in that it requires considerable energy to seek payment. You may even think it isn't worth the emotional energy to try. If possible, set the issue aside until you are in a calmer place. Then it won't seem such a challenge to do what you must do.

Scorpio the Scorpion (October 23-November 21): You may be feeling lonely or somehow distant from those around you during this period. Your partner, clientele, and significant others seem to be focused on themselves without consideration for your needs. The cosmic design suggests this is a time for you to be your own best friend right now.

Sagittarius the Archer (November 22-December 21): This is a good news, bad news week. Interests concerning the Internet, the law, or education are favored. However, you and significant others are not having the best of communications right now. You may be in the mood to nit-pick others. Probably you will feel generally better if you work alone.

Capricorn the Goat (December 22-January 19): You come upon information that is hard to swallow this week. It probably concerns factors related to your work or daily routine. You may be pressured to adopt some type of high-tech equipment that can help you manage your life better. Dependency on a gadget is not what you envisioned for yourself.

Aquarius the Water Bearer (January 20-February 18): The pressure is on for you to open your mind and allow new information to replace some of the old. You feel almost like a traitor who has abandoned his task to maintain, above all costs. However, if you are to progress forward, you will have to somehow allow changes to happen around you.

Pisces the Fish (February 19-March 20): New media or a renewed form of communication will bring refreshment to your daily life. Aspects favor adding a roommate or visiting with siblings and neighbors. Short trips could be revitalizing. Your creativity is strong at this time, particularly in the areas of the oral or written word.

Fremont Celebrates 2015 National Children's Mental Health Awareness Day

The City of Fremont Human Services' Youth and Family Services Division along with many communities across the country will be celebrating National Children's Mental Health Awareness Day on May 7. The goal of this annual national initiative is to raise awareness about the importance of positive mental health and end the stigma around mental health.

A proclamation for National Children's Mental Health Awareness Day will be presented at the Fremont City Council meeting on Tuesday, May 5. The Mission San Jose High School Peer Resource Students will be honored with a Community Service Appreciation Certificate. The students organized and hosted a benefit show at Mission San Jose High School as part of a mental health awareness campaign. The night was filled with fun and creative acts revolving around the theme of hope to encourage discussion and shed light on the stigma that surrounds mental health issues. All proceeds from T-shirt sales and tickets were raised as a donation for the City's Youth and Family Services Division.

To thank the students for their efforts to increase awareness of mental health issues and help reduce stigma around accessing support, YFS nominated the students to receive a 2015 Alameda County Mental Health Board Community Service Award. The award will be presented to the students at the Annual Alameda County Mental Health Board Community Service Awards Ceremony on Thursday, May 14.

For more information about National Children's Mental Health Awareness Day visit <http://www.samhsa.gov/children/national-childrens-awareness-day-events/awareness-day-2015>.

Give Us Your Design Ideas for the boxART! Program

With a new wave of artwork approved for traffic signal control boxes, expect to see more boxART! murals popping up all over the city. The boxART! Program helps deter unsightly vandalism and creates inviting spaces for residents and visitors alike. Traffic signal control boxes, typically painted gray or olive green, are placed on or near street corners where there are traffic signals, and are visible to both pedestrian and vehicular traffic. The location of the traffic signal control boxes are selected based on their visibility and their susceptibility to graffiti.

Response to the initial boxes, launched in 2014, has been met with enthusiastic support from the Fremont community. As a result, the program expanded, recently launching a Phase 2 Call for Artists. Themes for boxART! include sustainability, green energy, community, education, technology, innovation, ecology, arts, humor, and human relations.

As the popularity of this program grows and expands, the City is looking to the public for design ideas for future phases. Please take a moment to answer the following question in regard to the City's boxART! program:

What future designs would you like to see included on utility boxes as part of boxART!?

You can voice your opinion on Fremont Open City Hall at www.Fremont.gov/OpenCityHallboxart.

Troubled Waters

SUBMITTED BY
SUN GALLERY

“Troubled Waters: Drought and Change” opened at Hayward’s Sun Gallery on Earth Day. The show features local and international artists working together to bring home the message of environmental change. Using art and interactive experiences, the gallery hopes to engage all ages, to not only view the art, but be inspired by it to make changes in their own water consumption and how they view the environment around them.

In addition to stunning photography of the drought in Death Valley by Wanda Worthington Kersey, the show also includes work by international artists Jean-Marc Brugges, Eszter Bornemisza and Anitta Toivio. Brugges’ unique and colorful style is a major presence in the show, along with environmental landscapes, wildlife and plants by local artists Bob Newey, Ross Becht, Susan Ashley, and Jennifer Koney. Colorful acrylic paintings, watercolor and photography bring attention to animals and habitat in work by artists Hollie Adamic, Terry Preston, Christa Schanda, Cathy Tella, Patra Rae Nesseth-Steffes, and Alan P. Haley.

In a twist of whimsy yet with profound impact, Fremont artists Peter and Maureen Langenbach use recycled materials to bring home the message of drought through their creative sculpture and art, blending humor with a great deal of meaning. Langenbach’s piece features a pair of blue Levis that have been creatively painted and cut to represent the California Drought Monitor map being wrung dry and squeezed through an old washing machine.

In another unexpected twist in the show, a talking fish in an oil-soaked tire by Benicia artist Wayne Kohler highlights the sad plight of the state’s wildlife, not only impacted by the water crisis but as victims of what Kohler aptly names “Industry.” A push button on the tire dares viewers to press it and see what happens.

The largest installation in the show (at 10’ x 8’), and perhaps one of the most moving, is a blend of a forest background with moving water projected onto it by artist Dotti Chicon and Finland artist Anitta Toivio. When standing in front of it, the viewer’s silhouette is projected into the environment, creating an ethereal experience. Once viewers take photos of themselves in the art, another unique piece is created, which becomes a new and personal piece of art for each participant.

Excited about the show’s prospects, Sun Gallery Director Dorsi Diaz hopes that attendees will go home with not only a beautiful art experience but a deeper appreciation for the environment and the importance that water plays in our lives. A teaching artist herself, Diaz worked with local schools like Strobbridge Elementary teaching them about water conservation through a blend of science and art. The art from the Strobbridge students are on display in the show along with colorful collage fish and drought landscapes taught by artist and illustrator Linda Lens, who teaches the free art Saturday classes held at the gallery on the second and fourth Saturday of every month.

An interactive wall in the show has been dedicated to water conservation, engaging viewers to hand in their own ideas by adding them to a water bucket perched by the wall entitled “Think out of the Bucket.” Local artist Alfred Twu has his own unique addition to the show, a professionally created game called “California Water Crisis,” which is not only educational but provides a fun way for families to learn about the drought and conserve water.

The show has also partnered with the City of Hayward to bring show-goers ideas about how they can conserve water in the now four-year drought. 350 South East Bay, a group that educates the public about climate change, will also be participating with educational materials on fracking, the drought, and water conservation.

“I think it’s important to work as a collaboration, as we have done in this show,” Diaz says. “It’s going to take all of us together to talk about the water crisis that California is having because of the drought, and look for ways to not only educate people but to teach them about how precious water really is to our daily lives.”

Recognized for its unique outreach and education efforts, Sun Gallery has been awarded the 2015 Environmental award from the City of Hayward. On April 21, staff, board members, teachers, and the director were awarded a plaque and honored at a special meeting at the Hayward City Hall council quarters.

An artists’ reception is planned for Saturday, May 9 and refreshments and finger foods will be served. In addition to getting a chance to meet the exhibiting artists, a free art class will be held in the gallery’s art studio. Families are invited to create a colorful earth art project to take home.

Rattlesnake Rendezvous tests primitive living skills

Many of the skills that are taught might be considered exotic by today’s standards. These include: flint-knapping, where obsidian and chert are used to create knives and arrowheads; cordage, where fibers are harvested from plants and prepared into string and ropes; and basketry weaving, using tule or willow.

There is also a shooting range where instead of using guns people learn how to throw a spear using an ancient Aztec device called an atlatl. The target, of course, is a big stack of hay made to look like a woolly mammoth. Says Taylor, “We’re not trying to recreate California from 10,000 years ago. We’re not teaching any one culture. We’re borrowing technologies from all over the world.”

Other highlights include an ethnobotany hike where they teach about the medicinal and edible uses of plants, a night time astronomy hike, and a music jam session Saturday evening using drums, bone flutes, digeridoos, rattles, and other primitive instruments.

Activities are led by a group of eight to twelve instructors, many of whom are members of the Society of Primitive Technology. “Each instructor has their specialties, but also each instructor is going to instruct in several different things. There’s quite a variety of activities to choose from that are going on simultaneously.”

Of course, no primitive village is complete without a communal feast. Since no metal is allowed, campers will cook meals over a large open fire pit using gourds, spits, and clay pots, with many items placed directly on the hot coals. The menu can include fish, corn, sweet potatoes, and nettle soup. And for breakfast, why not try an egg cooked in an onion skin or orange peel?

Stone boiling is another popular cooking method, which involves placing super heated rocks in liquid to get it to boil. And baking pits are sometimes built, where food cooks all day in an underground oven. According to Taylor, “They had a different technology set than we do today, but they were by no means any less intelligent... The more you learn about how things were done and how elegant their solutions were, it’s amazing.”

The Rattlesnake Rendezvous is one of the most unique and longest running programs of its kind in all of Northern California. It takes place at Camp Ohlone, a seven-mile hike from the Sunol Wilderness Interpretive Center. People will carpool in and unload on Friday evening, then say goodbye to the 21st century until Sunday afternoon.

It’s an experience that is fun for the whole family, and offers a welcome break from our digital world. Anyone nine and over is encouraged to attend. And with the ongoing construction at Calaveras Reser-

Job and wage growth in the Tri-Cities area

SUBMITTED BY
GINA RICCITELLI

On March 27, the Tri-Cities One Stop Career Center, housed at Ohlone College's Newark Campus, hosted an Employer Panel where hiring managers and decision makers opened up about their hiring processes.

The Advanced Manufacturing Forum featured a diverse panel of speakers from staffing, education, small business and government. Also attending were representatives from Alameda County whose recent regional study identified the highest-potential industry growth sectors for jobs and wages. In the Tri-Cities area, Advanced Manufacturing and, Information and Communications Technology (ICT) fuel the local area's job and wage growth.

The featured speakers for this forum included: Dr. Rose-Margaret Itua, Ohlone College; Aaron Isaacson, US Mint; Mah-Talet Mirza, Transcontinental; Sandra Lawrence, West Valley Staffing and Martha Rykala, Infrared. In an open and authentic dialogue they shared enthusiasm for the multitude of opportunities in manufacturing today as well as general agreement on the typical successful new hire: "He or she must have energy!"

This is a great field for those who like to work with their hands, and their heads. It is also a strong team environment where workers have the opportunity to rotate amongst responsibilities to avoid physical strain and bring fresh perspective to various routines and departments, as is done at Transcontinental.

"Be prepared to wear a lot of hats," says Ms. Rykala, CEO of Infrared, in the fast-paced and surprisingly creative manufacturing world where machining a prototype device for a new laser and designing on AutoCad meld.

The hiring managers concurred that it is absolutely critical that applicants present a resume commensurate with the stated job requirements however if a candidate does have additional skills, they might be evaluated for other positions as well. In other words, don't be shy about sharing your strengths as long they add value to meeting the organization's goals and demands.

And, in case job seekers are interested in federal government jobs, where duties and expectations are clearly mapped out, Mr. Isaacson advised those to learn about the uniquely styled federal resume format, and prepare to complete a very lengthy, detailed application as well as find job leads on USAJobs.com.

Besides a "can-do" attitude, up-to-date skills and know-how are critical. To fill in the gap, Ohlone College, amongst others, have developed courses such as Robotics and Automation, and, for ICT, CompTIA and CCNA certification, to name a few.

The Tri-Cities One-Stop Career Center will be hosting its annual Spring Job Fair on May 1 with up to 70 employers. This is free of charge and open to the public.

THEATRE REVIEW

Rollicking Nerd moves into Chanticleers

BY JULIE GRABOWSKI

Willum Cubbert is about to meet the man who saved his life. Injured in Vietnam, Willum was rescued by an unknown man, awarded the Purple Heart, and delivered safely home. Now, at his 34th birthday party arranged by friends Axel and Tansy he is about to meet his savior for the first time. Frustrated about his architectural designs for a hotel he is working on and upset about Tansy's imminent departure for Washington, D.C., to be a weather girl, Rick Steadman is a promising bright spot. However, he turns out to be far beyond what Willum could ever have expected.

Rick is odd, socially inept, and oblivious to the impact he makes on others. An inspector at a chalk factory in Wisconsin who lives with his brother and is learning the tambourine, Rick is on a wavelength all his own. While the polite and placid Willum is overwhelmed with the awful reality of Rick, he tries to accommodate him and go with the flow. After all, he owes him his life. But as the visit stretches into days and Rick begins to mangle every inch of Willum's life, desperate measures are called for to get rid of him.

Currently playing at Chanticleers Theatre under the direction of Stephanie Lauck, Larry Shue's "The Nerd" is an entertaining, high-energy comedy that keeps you wondering what crazy thing will happen next. While at times leaning into the melodramatic, Chanticleers' production is a fun and engaging experience none the less, with an outstanding C. Conrad Cady supporting the whole circus tent.

Cady revels in the character of Rick and gets every second right. His performance is fluid and magnetic, boisterous and funny, every inch worthy of the title role. Steve Allhoff is sturdy and sympathetic as the put-upon Willum, his contained conflict creating a complimentary opposite to Rick.

David McEwen as drama critic Axel always hits the mark with his quick quips and playful smart-alecky demeanor and is second only to Cady for the comic go-to. Emily Jeanes is a sweet but frothy Tansy who strikes as more of a ready-and-willing-to-please girl than a woman determined to take her chance and put career before love. The relationship between Willum and Tansy comes across as a gentle affection more than a desired romance and could use a bit more punch.

Bill Light and Susan Hohl seem miscast as Willum's boss and his wife, Warnock and Clelia Waldgrave; it is difficult to reconcile them as the parents of a young girl as they feel more like grandparents. However, Hohl carves out a niche for herself and amuses with Clelia's habit of breaking saucers to relieve stress. Abby Hasselbrink has fun as wild, trouble child Thora Waldgrave and packs quite a scream.

"The Nerd" is a parade of unpredictable and zany fun with a poignant twist that provides an enjoyable evening out.

Tickets are $18 general and $15 for students and seniors (60+). Add dinning to your theatre experience on Saturday, May 2 at 6 p.m. with a Preshow Dinner at Silver Spoon Gourmet Restaurant (3563 Castro Valley Blvd). The price-fix dinner is $21; mention Dinner Group when making show reservations. For reservations or more information, call (510) 733-5483 or visit www.chanticleers.org.

Prehistoric art workshop

SUBMITTED BY SUSAN HELMER

The Fremont Art Association is excited to introduce our next guest artist, Cathe Lieb, on Wednesday, May 6. Lieb will show us a window into our past by examining prehistoric art in an exciting hands-on workshop.

Imagine this for a moment. With sure stroke, the artist rubs the pigment-saturated hide across the rock face. Beneath his hand, the animal emerges, giant haunches churning on the uneven surface of stone, in the flickering glow of torchlight behind him.

Lieb's presentation will be a fascinating look into our past. Attendees will participate in a hands-on project that will bring the lecture to life in a fun and exciting way. The public is welcome to attend.

Mariners win battle with Titans

Softball

SUBMITTED AND PHOTOS BY MIKE HEIGHTCHEW

The hits just kept on coming as the Moreau Catholic Mariners met the John F. Kennedy Titans on Thursday April 23rd. In the end, the Mariners left the field with two more runs than their opponent with a 9-7 victory. The Mariners now own a 9-6 record for the season

Titan power at the plate was evident in the first inning as they scored two runs but the Mariners came back in the fourth inning with two of their own. It was an exciting game as both teams took turns swatting balls around the park; the Mariners with 16 and Titans with 14. The top of the fifth inning was the turning point as the Mariners scored six runs although the Titans would not go quietly, scoring a run in the sixth inning, followed by four more in the seventh.

Katie Cameron of Moreau Catholic had a day to remember as she was named Player of the Game s with a 2 for 3 outing at the plate, scoring three of the nine Mariner runs. Her role as catcher included throwing out a runner in the bottom of the seventh inning to help end a scoring threat. Cameron had help from all teammates, especially Ronnie Mora and Erin Hogan, each with three hits; Gabby Franco and Katherine Murdock with two hits and great defensive plays.

The Cal State East Bay baseball team scored two runs in the eighth inning and two more in the ninth to erase a three-run deficit on April 19th and walk off with a 7-6 victory over Cal State San Bernardino to sweep the four-game series.

After Marcus Williams tied the game with an RBI single to left, Myles Babitt lifted a sacrifice fly to center with one out in the ninth to send the Pioneers home with a victory.

Jason Fletcher had a monster game in the finale, going 4-for-4 with a walk, a double, and two runs scored to continue his hot streak. The Pioneer third baseman racked up 11 hits and eight RBI in the series, batting .647 in the four games.

Two-Hitter
wins series opener

Michael Pope and Angel Lara combined on a two-hitter, and the Cal State East Bay baseball team notched a 4-1 road victory over Chico State on April 24th at Nettleton Stadium. It's the fifth consecutive win for East Bay, and the team's eighth victory in the last ten games. They out-hit the Wildcats 12 to 2 as Pope out-dued Chico ace Luke Barker.

Dramatic Doubleheader Split

Marcus Wise knocked in the game-winning run in the 11th inning as the Cal State East Bay baseball team outlasted Chico State in the second game of a April 25th doubleheader. The Wildcats erased a five-run deficit in game one and captured a 7-6 victory, giving the teams a dramatic split of the twinbill at Nettleton Stadium.

East Bay's starting pitching was outstanding and the offense racked up 23 total hits on the day. Ryan Kochan continued his remarkable hot streak, going 5-for-9 in the doubleheader.

The James Logan Colts softball team suffered its first loss in 76 Mission Valley Athletic League contests on April 22nd, by a one run deficit to the Newark Memorial Cougars. In a close contest that saw only one run scored during the entire afternoon, the game was scoreless until the eighth [extra] inning when the Cougars finally sent a runner across the plate courtesy of a single, wild pitch and three walks. Winning pitcher Jiana Rojo held on to the win by retiring Colt batters in order in their half of the eighth inning. The win gave the Cougars sole possession of first place in Mission Valley Athletic League standings.

Cal State East Bay landed five team members on the 2015 Western Water Polo Association (WWPA) All-Conference Team, announced on Wednesday, April 22, 2015. Juniors Taylor Cross and Tori Dettloff earned first and second team honors respectively to lead the Pioneers.

Cross, a junior hole set from Fresno, leads this year's squad with 42 goals and 46 drawn exclusions. She has earned All-WWPA Team honors in both seasons with the Pioneers after taking down a second team selection in 2014.

Dettloff, a junior utility player from Stockton, became a major contributor late in the season and scored 16 of her 24 goals over a 7-game span. She poured in a season-high five in the team's overtime loss to University of California, San Diego on April 5. Dettloff finished the regular season second on the team in steals with 31 to go along with 15 assists and nine drawn ejections.

Senior goalkeeper Marrina Nation, senior hole set Alyssa Hess, and junior driver Simonne Call were named to the Honorable Mention Team.

Nation, a four year Pioneer from Oceanside, received her second straight all-conference nod after securing second team honors a year ago. In 24 games she has stopped 187 shots, held opponents to under 10 goals per game, and recorded nine victories. Nation moved into second on the program's all-time saves list earlier this season.

Hess, a senior transfer from Azusa Pacific University, had a strong start in her lone season with the Pioneers after earning WWPA Player of the Week honors to open the year. She finished the regular season with 23 goals, 18 assists, and nine steals.

Call, a third year Pioneer from Escondido, made the All-Conference team for the first time in her career. She has posted career-highs in every offensive category this season with 14 goals, 15 assists, 15 steals, and 22 drawn exclusions.

Historic series ends in a draw

Baseball

SUBMITTED AND PHOTOS BY MIKE HEIGHTCHEW

The series between the Washington Huskies and James Logan Colts saw the end of an era in Mission Valley Athletic League (MVAL) baseball as John Goulding of James Logan High School, the longest serving coach in MVAL baseball, is retiring at the end of the season.

Coach Mike Sewell of the Washington Huskies and John Goulding have met in many great battles over the years but will never face each other again. In the first game on April 22nd, Washington came away the winner, 2-0. The Huskies had just enough offense at bat with timely hitting as they took control early in the second inning, scoring twice and never looked back, making great defensive plays to hold on. Steven Kwan was the hitting star for Washington, going 2 for 2 at the plate and James Bender also helped with a 2 for 3 performance.

The second game on April 24th turned out to be a batting battle as James Logan finally won 5-4. Washington continued to be strong at bat with eight hits for the day but it was Logan's game with seven hits. Both teams showed strength at the plate with great hitting that made the game close but the Colts put together a well placed series of hits to take the lead and go on to win.

SCOTT CHISHOLM

It was announced by East Bay Head Coach Andy Cumbo on April 23rd that Homestead High School senior Jared Johnson and Ohlone College freshman Chase Walker have committed to join the Cal State East Bay men's soccer team in the 2015 season.

Johnson is a three-time All-League player and has claimed two SCVAL El Camino League Championships in 2013 and 2014 while competing for the Mustangs. The 6-foot-1 defender played club soccer for the Mountain View/Los Altos Soccer Club. He won a CCSL Gold Division Championship in 2013 with his club team.

Walker is a local 5-foot-10 defender out of Fremont. In high school, he was named an All-League player his senior year. He competed at Ohlone College for one year before choosing to join the Pioneers. Walker looks to make an impact on the back line for the Pioneers in 2015 by already having experience at the collegiate level.

The Region is Ready for REDI

Silicon Valley's Evolving Innovation Habitat

BY MATTHEW R. MAHOOD,
PRESIDENT & CEO
SAN JOSE SILICON VALLEY
CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Metropolitan regions all over the country — and the world — have been doing it, and finally, we are too! Just what am I talking about? Regions in our globally competitive economy are organizing to promote their strengths and brand themselves in unprecedented ways. And it’s paying off — just look at success stories like Austin, Texas, and New York City, and you soon realize the potential of these regional strategy investments. The greater Silicon Valley is a little late to this party, due in large part to a long history of organic economic growth fueled by abundant innovation. But the time has come to reconsider regionalism from an economic development standpoint.

Led by the San Jose Silicon Valley’s Chamber of Commerce (<http://www.svedc.com/>), the Regional Economic Development Initiative (<http://www.svedc.com/homepage/about-us/>) (REDI) is a new private-public partnership engaging stakeholders in a collaborative effort to create jobs by focusing on Silicon Valley’s most promising economic opportunities. The first phase of REDI included an analysis focused on the changing dynamics of Silicon Valley’s core economy and a growing interdependence of major export engines, support industries, and the service economy. A new wave of innovation, like the Internet of Things (IoT) (<http://www.thinksiliconvalley.com/silicon-valley-east/internet-things-revolution-what-you-need-know/>), is a key driver of future opportunities in Silicon Valley. This is creating a number of new opportunities for companies to connect with each other and with public sector partners to leverage exciting innovations in:

* R&D Centers: Silicon Valley is the Research and Development (R&D) home for global technology firms that are attracted by a high concentration of skilled talent. These R&D centers are building the platforms (hardware and software) that make IoT.

- Agile Manufacturing: Collaboration between traditional tech firms, local contract manufacturers, and global manufacturing firms in the design and prototyping of new kinds of “smart” hardware represents an exciting opportunity for innovation, driven by IoT.

- Health IT: Advanced health care services and research in the region are converging with information technology, advancing Health IT services. The integration of IoT and traditional health services is giving both health care institutions— as well as the individual consumer — better access to real-time data and processing power.

- Smart Buildings: Building and construction industries are being transformed by a move toward greater energy efficiency and new advanced materials, devices, and systems that promote greater productivity and savings. IoT represents the integration of traditional energy savings technology with the power of big data’s predictive and intelligent capabilities.

The next stage in the REDI process will be to engage private sector business leaders in each of these opportunity areas to lead the planning and execution of REDI’s action plan. The initiative will recruit influential members of the private sector (“civic entrepreneurs”) who are committed to the success of the region and understand the benefits of working collaboratively. While previously, the private sector collaborated to work on infrastructure and transportation issues, REDI seeks to be holistic and unified, working to improve conditions inside and outside of businesses.

This is a significant milestone in Silicon Valley regional relations, and Fremont has a critical role to play in this conversation, particularly regarding Agile Manufacturing and Research & Development. Look for updates in the coming months as action plans develop, and let’s look forward to collectively strengthening the Bay Area’s competitive edge.

Authorize the director of engineering to issue a bidder pre-qualification package for the Milpitas Sports Center pool repair.

Public hearings:

Approve community development grant funding allocations for fiscal year 2015-16 and adopt the one-year action plan.

WILLIAM MARSHAK

The winds of change are blowing hard in Fremont and its neighboring cities. Construction has rebounded from a recessionary lull and housing starts are just about everywhere you look. Along with this change comes a new dynamic paradigm that has already shifted focus in Fremont from its historic and existing districts to a shiny new downtown and development around South Fremont/Warm Springs BART station. Not only does this mean that the population of Fremont will increase dramatically, it will also impact intercity relations.

How does the so-called "Innovation District" relate to citizens in Glenmoor? Not only is Fremont diverse in its population, but the sheer size of Fremont, 90 square miles, translates to diversity in character as well. Older communities with aging infrastructure and defined personalities are juxtaposed with areas of emerging persona. Governance of this patchwork will face daunting challenges as the present, past and future collide.

Currently, Fremont uses a system called General Law to carry out its municipal business. Defined by the State, there are several options, but Fremont chooses to use the same form it adopted 50 years ago when the City incorporated. A Mayor and four councilmembers, elected at large, are asked to represent the residents and businesses within city limits. Day to day operation of the City is left to a City Manager who only answers to the council. All councilmembers are elected, usually without specific commitment or focus on any particular portion of Fremont. The Mayor is the foremost representative of Fremont but has the same voting rights on council as any other member; one vote out of five.

As the City grows and expands to fill its 90 square miles, how do politicians find balance between the needs and opportunities in all parts of Fremont? Each area has its own unique needs and aspirations. The cost of running a campaign to ask for votes from 225,000 residents has become prohibitive; some districts find themselves lost from the big picture. An answer might come through district elections for some of the council.

Why not expand the council to seven members; five elected by different electoral districts within the city while the Mayor and a Vice Mayor elected city-wide? Those who chose to represent a particular district would spend a lot less money on a geographically concentrated campaign and bring the concerns and attitudes of their constituents to council deliberations. If population shifts and growth are anticipated through this arrangement, all areas of the City of Fremont would feel they were being represented. There may be a way to accomplish this under current General Law rules but if not, Fremont should consider joining other large cities in the State of California and voting to become a Charter City.

As the winds of change waft through the City of Fremont, its time to give our government structure the sniff test to see whether it is designed to accommodate all of its constituents. As Bob Dylan said in his 60s classic song, "The answer my friend is blowin' in the wind."

Judge says flashing headlights is free speech

BY JEFF BARNARD
ASSOCIATED PRESS

GRANTS PASS, Ore. (AP)—Hauling a truckload of logs to a Southern Oregon mill last fall, Chris Hill noticed a sheriff's deputy behind him and flashed his lights to warn a UPS driver coming the other way.

The deputy pulled over Hill on U.S. Highway 140 in White City and handed him a $260 ticket for improperly using his headlights, saying another deputy had seen the flashing lights from behind the UPS truck and alerted him to stop the log truck because of the signaling.

Outraged, Hill decided to fight the ticket, and on Wednesday, a Jackson County Justice Court judge dismissed the citation, finding that motorists flashing their headlights amounts to speech protected by the Oregon Constitution.

Judge Joseph Carter determined the law covering the use of high beams was valid, but was unconstitutional as it was applied by the deputy.

"The citation was clearly given to punish the Defendant for that expression," the judge wrote. "The government certainly can and should enforce the traffic laws for the safety of all drivers on the road. However, the government cannot enforce the traffic laws, or any other laws, to punish drivers for their expressive conduct."

The Jackson County Sheriff's Office did not return a telephone call for comment.

Hill, 38, of Klamath Falls, has been driving truck for 10 years, and was not interested in seeing his insurance rates go up for getting a ticket. He initially told the deputy that the UPS driver was his neighbor, and he was just saying hello.

"My point to the cop was his partner didn't know why I was flashing my lights," Hill said. "He couldn't tell for sure what I was doing."

By the time his case went to court last month, Hill had researched the law and found nothing that expressly prohibited the use of headlights to signal other drivers. He also recalled a TV news story about a federal judge in the Midwest barring police from handing out tickets to drivers who flashed their lights to warn others of a speed trap ahead.

"I thought, 'Well, I'll throw that in there, too,'" he said.

Acting as his own attorney in a hearing conducted by telephone, Hill said he acknowledged the UPS driver wasn't his neighbor, and he raised the free speech argument.

"What I did wasn't illegal, whether it's freedom of speech or not," he told The Associated Press.

Dave Fidanque, director of the American Civil Liberties Union of Oregon, noted the Oregon Court of Appeals overturned a traffic law prohibiting horn honking for non-traffic purposes on similar grounds in the 1990s after a number of people got tickets for honking in support of U.S. troops during the first Gulf War.

"If the motive of the sheriff's deputies was in fact not to make the roads safer, but to raise more revenue from traffic enforcement, that would be even more reason why it should be unconstitutional," Fidanque said. "If this is part of a pattern, then it probably would be worth us looking into it in more detail."

Public Hearing:

Council approved resolution authorizing an application for federal assistance under the Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) program for FY 2014-2015 and approves FY 2015-2016 action plan, which includes FY 2016 CDBG allocations. Council also adopted the attached resolution approving the Alameda County HOME Consortium five-year consolidated plan for FY 2015-2019. Council also affirmed preliminary funding decisions in the FY 2016 social services and arts/music categories. These items were previously introduced at the April 7, 2015 Council meeting. There was discussion regarding South Hayward Parish and how they prefer to use funds; thus, Council was given three options. Councilmember Francisco Zermeno moved the staff recommendations and chose option 2, which is "[splitting] the awarded amount of $26,000 with 50 percent to the Alameda County Food Bank and 50 percent to South Hayward Parish for non-consumable expenses," according to staff report. However, the motion was not supported. Councilmember Elisa Márquez moved the staff recommendation and option 1, which is to support the recommendations of Community Service Commission to avoid issues in auditing and allocation of funds. However, Councilmember Márquez suggested fundraising efforts to further assist South Hayward Parish. (Lamnín – Abstention; Zermeno – Nay)

Legislative Business:

Council approved resolutions of intention to form a Community Facilities District (CFD) #3 to finance police and fire protection services in the South Hayward BART area, and annex the Libitzky and Burbank residual sites into the existing CFD #2 in the Cannery Place area. An ordinance to levy a special tax within CFD #2 was introduced.

Adjournment:

The meeting was adjourned in memory of Betty Huntzinger.

Pioneers escape with overtime win

Women's Water Polo

SUBMITTED BY SCOTT CHISHOLM

Cal State East Bay outlasted Cal State Monterey Bay 12-11 in overtime in the opening game of the Western Water Polo Association (WWPA) Championships on April 24th at the SPIRE Institute. The Pioneers survived despite surrendering six unanswered second half goals over a 7-minute stretch which eventually forced overtime.

The Pioneer offense came out firing on all cylinders scoring goals on each of its first three possessions. Taylor Cross scored the first pair of her game-high five, followed by back-to-back goals from Ka'iliponi McGee to make it 4-0. Kristin Boston's first goal with the club made it 5-0 less than five minutes into the game.

Cross and Olivia Mackell scored in the final two minutes of the opening half pushing the Pioneers to seemingly a comfortable 7-1 cushion at halftime. The teams traded goals capped off by a Tori Dettloff score with 3:01 left in the third quarter to make it a 9-3 game.

Tatiana Veloso and Bree Hogervorst each scored in the final 86 seconds of the third to make it 9-5. At the 4:52 mark of the fourth quarter Kylie Wheelock cut the Otter deficit to three and sparked a swift game-tying scoring run.

CSUEB's Cross scored with 72 seconds left to stem the tide and put the Pioneers back out front. CSUMB's Samantha Whitecotton scored her lone goal of the game on the ensuing possession, eventually forcing overtime.

Cal State East Bay never trailed; Sabrina Hatzter scoring 55 seconds into overtime. Dettloff won the opening sprint in the second overtime period to gain possession. The crucial swim paid dividends as she assisted on the game-winning goal to junior Casey Rushforth on the opening possession.

CSUEB goalkeeper Marrina Nation made 11 saves and held the Otter offense to just one first half goal while picking up her 10th win of the year.

Golden Goal sends Pioneers to WWPA Title Game

Junior Jenn Lightbody scored 55 seconds into the first sudden death overtime period to give Cal State East Bay women's water polo an 8-7 victory over Sonoma State during an April 25th Western Water Polo Association (WWPA) semifinal. The Pioneers will play for the tournament title against UC San Diego on April 26, at the SPIRE Institute.

"That was the craziest game I have ever been a part of," said 13th year Head Coach Lisa Cooper.

HARD wins multiple showcase awards

SUBMITTED BY LAURA CORREA-HERNANDEZ

The Hayward Area Recreation and Park District (HARD) is pleased to announce that it has received multiple 2014 awards from the California Parks and Recreation Society (CPRS) and the local CPRS District 3 for its website redesign, "How HARD is Your Day?" video and the Initiative in Action Junior Camp Counselor Program.

The website redesign and video, which is located on the home page of HARD's website, each received the 2014 Award of Excellence from the CPRS in the Marketing and Communications category. The CPRS District 3 Outstanding Operation Management Award was given for the website redesign and video while the camp program received the Outstanding Recreation Program Award.

The District, along with the Board Members and staff, is honored to be recognized for its hard work and vision in order to better serve the District's diverse communities. General Manager John Gouveia, who created the Social Media Committee that leads the efforts in the website redesign and video, stated that "It was time to take the District in a new direction by providing the community with a website that was engaging and a video that shared all the great things that the District has to offer from our classes to our unique facilities and venues."

The Junior Counselor Initiative in Action Program is part of the East Avenue Camps leadership development program that builds upon leadership development and encourages junior counselors to take the initiative to go above and beyond the set expectations and responsibilities. Junior counselors are selected by camp staff for this recognition, which serves as indicators of current and future leadership – key qualities that are valued when selecting future camp staff. For information about the Initiative in Action Camp Counselor Program, please contact Recreation Supervisor Jennifer Koney at (510) 881-6723 or konj@haywardrec.org.

We invite the community to visit the award-winning website and view all there is to do in a HARD day by exploring, playing, and learning at www.haywardrec.org.

Gadget Watch: Whistle, a fitness tracker for dogs

By JOSEPH PISANI
AP BUSINESS WRITER

NEW YORK (AP) — Bad news for lazy dogs: A new device, called Whistle, lets pet owners track how much exercise — or sleep — their four-legged friends are getting.

Whistle is similar to popular activity trackers designed for humans. It wraps around a dog's collar and syncs with a smartphone app, collecting data on how much activity and rest the pet had.

I tried it out on my dog, who would much rather sleep under the couch than chase a ball. It's no surprise to find out that he wasn't getting at least 30 minutes of movement a day. But that was mainly my fault.

Whistle pushed me to take him out on more walks for longer periods.

At $129, it is as pricey as some of the latest human fitness trackers from the likes of FitBit and Jawbone.

One major difference: Whistle syncs data to its app through Wi-Fi, as well as Bluetooth. That lets you check up on your dogs without being near them, so you can track how much exercise your dog is getting when left with dog walkers, a doggy day care or family and friends.

The Whistle app, available for Apple and Android smartphones, is nicely designed. Multiple people can download the app and see the same data through the same account, which is a great if others help care for your dog.

THE DEVICE: The Whistle looks slick. It is round and is made of stainless steel. It weighs 16 grams, or less than an ounce. It is about 1.5 inches (3.8 centimeters) wide and less than half-an-inch (1.25-centimeter) thick.

My biggest worry was losing it. But the device locks on to a rubber strap that is then wrapped around the dog collar. It stayed in place and never fell off.

Because it is waterproof, dogs can take the Whistle with them for a swim, the company says. I used it during rainy dog walks, and it always worked fine.

DOGGY DATA: The app lists how much rest and activity the dog gets in a day. You can also add what the dog ate, what medication you gave it and any additional notes or photos you want.

The app looks like a Facebook timeline for your dog. You can scroll down to see what the dog has done during the day. You can also quickly swipe the screen from left to right to see what the dog did on past days.

MAY BE TOO HEAVY FOR TINY DOGS: The company recommends using it on dogs that weigh more than 10 pounds (4.5 kilograms). It still works on smaller dogs, the company says, but the Whistle might be too big for them. It's up to you to decide. My dog is a little over 11 pounds and didn't notice the Whistle at all.

BATTERY LIFE: The built-in battery lasts about a week before it has to be recharged. The app alerts you when it starts getting low.

The Whistle is charged through a USB cord that plugs into a computer or laptop. It doesn't come with a wall charger outlet, which is a pain if you don't have a laptop or desktop computer. I used the wall charger for my iPhone, or you can buy one for less than $10.

WHERE TO FETCH IT: The Whistle is sold in PetSmart stores and online at Whistle.com.

Sunday, April 19

Between Tuesday, April 7, 2015 and Thursday, April 9, 2015, unknown suspect(s), entered the rear garage without permission and removed items from inside a residence on the 37000 block of Second Street. The loss was camping equipment.

Officers responded at 12:04 a.m. to an auto burglary call on the 41300 block of Roberts Avenue. The caller stated that two subjects had just stolen some items from a vehicle. It was later determined the victim couldn't identify the suspects.

Monday, April 20

At 2:15 p.m., a caller advised that several recreational vehicles and a trailer were burglarized at the Auto Mall Public Storage lot, located on the 42300 block of Boscell Road. The unknown suspect(s) gained access into the yard by cutting a large hole in the rear fence. Possible suspects are a white male adult and a Hispanic male adult who were chased off the property on Sunday, April 19, 2015 prior to the reporting party realizing that the vehicles had been burglarized. Community Service Officers (CSOs) Gott and Aguirre investigated.

At 9:06 p.m., officers were dispatched to a call of a vehicle that had just been stolen on the 49000 block of Cinnamon Fern Common. The caller stated that he had just seen two men pulling out of the garage area of his complex in his green Honda Accord. Officer Nordseth arrived on scene and immediately located the vehicle with two occupants, who were lost inside the complex. When the victim came to get his vehicle, he identified several items in the vehicle that were not his. Located inside a backpack were burglary tools and suspected methamphetamine, along with a variety of other suspected stolen items. Officers arrested a 24-year-old adult male, San Jose resident, for taking a vehicle without the owner's permission, receiving known stolen property, possession of a controlled substance, possession of drug paraphernalia, possession of burglary tools and loitering on private property. At approximately 8:40 p.m., Officer Collins was detailed to the Valero gas station in Warm Springs regarding the attempted use of a stolen credit card. The suspects fled on foot, but were similar in description to the couple who had stolen the taxi earlier. The taxi was located near the Valero station, and shortly thereafter the 19-year-old adult male (San Jose resident) suspect was located in the area and arrested for taking a vehicle without permission. The female was still outstanding. Investigation is ongoing.

Vehicle accident on Palomares Road

SUBMITTED BY DIANE HENDRY, DIVISION CHIEF OF ADMIN, FREMONT FD

On April 20, at 9 p.m., the Fremont Fire Department (FFD) responded with two engines, one truck, and one Battalion Chief to a report of a vehicle over the side of the road and down the hill on Palomares Road approximately 3 miles north of Niles Canyon Rd. Upon arrival, firefighters determined that a pick-up truck went off of the road and was upside down at the bottom of the hill approximately 40 feet into a dry creek bed on Palomares Rd. Firefighters determined that there were a total of four male victims, with one pinned under the pick-up truck. A quick assessment was made by Engine 52 and the victim under the pick-up was declared to be deceased. The second victim was ejected from the vehicle and determined to be in serious condition. The third victim was near the vehicle and received minor injuries. The fourth victim was on top of the roadway upon FFD arrival and he received minor injuries from the accident.

Fremont Firefighters along with the assistance of Cal Fire set-up a low-angle rope system to rescue the victims from the bottom of the hill and bring them up to the roadway. All three patients were treated and one critical patient was transported to Eden Hospital in Castro Valley and the other two patients with minor injuries were transported to Washington Hospital.

California Highway Patrol was on scene and the Alameda County Coroner arrived. With the assistance of firefighters, the fourth victim was removed from the vehicle and brought up to the roadway to the coroner.

California Highway Patrol was handling the investigation of the accident and should be contacted for additional information.

The Heart of BART: Electrician Mark Carter

SUBMITTED BY BART DISTRICT

BART Electrician Mark Carter reports for work at 11 p.m. each weeknight and toils through the wee hours of the morning. He’s done it for 33 years. You might imagine that when Mark is not on the job he would spend much of his free time catching up on his sleep. But he doesn’t.

He’s on a quest: to help people who have served our country but who are struggling with the psychological scars of that service. “They deserve the best treatment we as U.S. citizens can provide,” he says, “but especially, they deserve not to be ignored.”

Mark is cofounder of an organization called “Operation Wounded Minds,” an Oakland-based non-profit whose mission is “to remove the shame and stigma from Post Traumatic Stress so individuals will be more inclined to seek treatment and society will be more supportive.”

Like many volunteers passionate about a cause, Mark has a direct connection to the issue. “My son is a victim of Post Traumatic Stress. I noticed something was haunting him, bothering him, had changed him.”

Mark’s son Ty served in the Marine Corps for four years and, after taking a five year break as a civilian, enlisted in the Army. As a soldier, he served two combat tours in Afghanistan. It was only after the heat of the battle that Ty began to recognize the reality of Post Traumatic Stress: flashbacks, nightmares, anxiety, and depression.

“There’s a tremendous amount of support available for veterans with visible scars. But few people understand veterans who are suffering invisible scars,” Ty says. “There is a stigma wrapped around mental health issues. There’s the feeling of being ashamed, that I can’t hack it or cut it.”

After one fateful day in Afghanistan, no one has questioned whether Ty can cut it. It was just about dawn on October 3, 2009 when more than 300 enemy fighters launched an intense attack on the remote outpost where Ty and 52 other soldiers had hunkered down. As bullets rained on the outpost, Ty jumped out of bed and into action.

According the Army’s official narrative, “With complete disregard for his own safety and in spite of his own wounds, he ran through a hail of enemy rocket propelled grenade and machine gunfire to rescue a critically wounded comrade who had been pinned down in an exposed position. Specialist Carter rendered life-extending first aid and carried the soldier to cover.”

Despite being wounded in the first 30 minutes of battle, Ty repeatedly resupplied ammunition to fighting positions and “provided accurate fire under intense pressure to drive back enemy that had infiltrated the camp perimeter.”

By nightfall, when reinforcements arrived, almost two-thirds of the Coalition soldiers at the outpost had been killed or wounded. President Barack Obama described Ty as “representative of exactly the kind of people and the quality of people who are serving us.”

The President awarded the Medal of Honor, the nation’s highest military honor, to Ty in an August 2012 ceremony. Mark took time off from his job at BART to attend.

“He was put in a situation that no one would ever want to be in and survived,” Mark says. “His response to what he was engulfed in was the response that every person wishes that they would have the guts to do. He has become a much better man than me. It is an honor for me to be his father!”

When Ty was a small child, Mark juggled his graveyard shift schedules with the responsibilities of parenthood. “He was always able to wake up to make sure we made it to swim practice, soccer practice, Cub Scouts,” says Ty, recalling one his favorite memories – a pinewood derby, an event in which scouts build and race wooden cars.

“What BART has meant to us was that as kids, we were always supported.” — Ty Carter

Mark’s sense of responsibility to others is part of his profession. “Before and after the overnight maintenance work, it’s our job to shut down the electrical system wherever work is being done to ensure the safety of fellow employees as well as outside contractors. When the work is completed for the night, we make sure everything electrically comes back on line for commuters.”

Then, shaking off the effects of a sleepless night, Mark often tackles his volunteer duties. “I’ve recently tried the other shifts available in my department but find that the night shift frees me up to work for our veterans in a schedule that fits them,” Mark says.

Mark and “Operation Wounded Minds” founder and executive director Dwayne Jones are looking to expand their good works. They point out that no one is immune from Post Traumatic Stress and are working to remove the word “disorder” from the discussion of the medically-recognized mental health condition.

Ty wholeheartedly supports their efforts. “I’ve learned it has nothing to do with combat. Post Traumatic Stress is a people thing. My father’s been able to see that and that’s why his organization doesn’t focus on just this war but all wars. It’s actually a broad spectrum of people suffering to a point of frustration and what he’s trying to do is to fill the gap with whatever they may need. My affiliation is to support him, but this is his task. That organization has their task; I have my own.”

After the White House medal ceremony, Ty discovered a natural gift for communicating and public speaking while spending months travelling for the U.S. Army to talk about Post Traumatic Stress. He’s left the Army and has embarked on a career of sharing with civilians, lessons he learned in the military.

“My job with Ty M. Carter and Associates is to use what I learned in the firefight to teach others about leadership, resiliency and, also, to push the memory of those eight men who lost their lives. Every time I tell the story, it’s very painful for me, but I know that by doing that, their actions are remembered.

Note: The eight soldiers who lost their lives in the October 9, 2009 Battle of Kamdesh were: Sgt. Justin T. Gallegos, Sgt. Christopher T. Griffin, Sgt. Joshua Mitchell Hardt, Sgt. Joshua John Kirk, Spc. Stephan Lee Mace, Staff Sgt. Vernon W. Martin, Sgt. Michael P. Scusa, and Pfc. Kevin C. Thomson.

Stabbing at Shilo’s Cocktails Suspects at Large

SUBMITTED BY LT. ROBERT MCMANUS, SAN LEANDRO PD

On April 16, 2015 at 8:40 p.m., San Leandro Police Officers responded to Shilo’s Cocktails, located in the 900 block of Manor Blvd., after receiving 9-1-1 calls reporting that a stabbing had occurred inside the bar.

When officers arrived, they found three men in their 30s suffering from stab wounds sustained during a violent fight that occurred inside of the bar. Paramedics transported the victims to local hospitals, including one trauma unit. At least two of the victims will undergo surgery. All of the victims are listed in stable condition and remain hospitalized.

Officers and detectives collected evidence, reviewed security video from neighboring businesses, and interviewed Shilo’s employees and patrons in an attempt to identify the suspects responsible for the assault.

“This was an extremely violent attack in a small bar,” said Lt. Robert McManus. “It is very fortunate that no one else was injured.”

Police will continue to identify and interview additional witnesses, hoping that they will be able to quickly identify and apprehend the suspects responsible for the attack.

Anyone with information is asked to contact Detective Steve Cesaretti at (510) 577-3239.

Please contact the San Leandro Police Department’s Criminal Investigation Division with any information regarding this case at 510-577-3230. ??

Upstate NY girl, 5, spends day
at wrong school

AP WIRE SERVICE

SCHENECTADY, N.Y. (AP)—Officials at an upstate New York school district say a kindergartner spent a day at the wrong school after getting on the wrong bus.
Schenectady (skhe-NEHK'-ta-dee) city school district officials say the series of mistakes began Wednesday morning when the 5-year-old girl boarded the wrong bus, which was driven by a substitute driver.
At the school, teachers were expecting a new first-grader and asked the girl if she was that student. The girl said she was and spent the day answering to the no-show first-grader's name.

The mistake wasn't discovered until the kindergartner's mother called her school to report that her daughter didn't get off the bus that afternoon. School officials say they located her a short time later.
The district says it's re-examining its bus and new student procedures.

Groom who halted own wedding with bomb hoax jailed

AP WIRE SERVICE

LONDON (AP)—A forgetful British bridegroom who made a hoax bomb threat rather than admit he'd neglected to book the venue for his wedding has been sentenced to a year in jail.
Neil McArdle called Liverpool's St. George's Hall from a phone booth on his scheduled wedding day in April, claiming a bomb was due to go off in 45 minutes.
His fiancée, Amy Williams, was left standing in the street in her wedding gown while the building was evacuated.
McArdle was arrested and admitted that he made the call because he had forgotten to fill out the paperwork for the wedding.
On Tuesday a judge at Liverpool Crown Court in northwest England sentenced him to 12 months in jail.
Defense lawyer Charles Lander said McArdle and Williams are still together.
