Bay Area non-profit Induz brings their annual fundraiser to Fremont once again on Saturday, October 20. "Induz Laser Dandiya 2018" features a spectacular laser lights display, power packed performances, live music, food, and children's activity corner with proceeds from the event benefiting art education for underprivileged children. Induz Dandiya has been a huge success, with sold-out events for the past 10 years.

The Dandiya Raas dance originated as devotional garba dances, a folk dance of India from Gujarat state. Raas is played with dandiya (pair of colorfully decorated sticks), and is a very gracious and energetic dance, which has its own form of style and art to it.

This year, popular Bay Area live band Alaap will play traditional dandiya and garba music along with popular Bollywood songs. Other attractions include performances by children from Aerodance, BombayJam, an interactive

How to Fight Off the Flu—Simple Preventive Steps

It's flu season once again and most of us are familiar with the most common advice for beating the bug (and stopping the spread of germs): get a flu shot, cover your mouth when you cough or sneeze, wash your hands frequently and try to avoid close contact with sick people.

But did you know that exercise, diet—even sunshine—can affect your immune system? According to Katie Vigano, a physician assistant at the Washington Township Medical Foundation's Newark Clinic, eating a healthy diet can help you fight off infection. “A good foundation for fortifying your immune system is eating two servings of fruits and at least three to four cups of veggies per day; I tell my patients to eat the rainbow. It's vital to keep the foods we eat diverse in color to ensure we are getting the right amount of vitamins and other nutrients.”

With the holidays upon us—starting with Halloween and all that sugar-laden candy—there will be a plethora of temptations to indulge in sugary foods. “Sugar can suppress the immune system, so remember to avoid overindulging,” Vigano advises. “There are some really great foods with antimicrobial properties such as ginger, garlic, turmeric, onions, oregano and some mushroom varieties, that can help ward off the flu and other viruses, so you might consider cooking with those when possible,” she adds.

Vitamin D is another immune system supporter, yet many of us are unknowingly deficient. In fact, notes Vigano, 70 percent of our population is severely lacking in this crucial vitamin, which is why people often catch colds and flu this time of year so easily. “Consider getting a blood panel to find out if you have enough vitamin D in your system. An optimal level is 45 nanograms per milliliter or higher. This level has been shown to lower your risk of contracting influenza by 75 percent.”

Supplementing with vitamin D3 is the most efficient way to improve your vitamin D levels, Vigano notes. “There are over-the-counter drops for infants, gummies for children and gel caps that adults can take. It is safe to consider taking this supplement at least a few days every week to keep levels high enough for protection through flu season, which extends through around March or April every year.”

However, Vigano adds, those who are confirmed to be deficient need to take either a megadose once weekly or a lower dose every day until their results reflect optimal levels. Exclusively breast-fed babies often require vitamin D supplementation. A sufficient vitamin D level in conjunction with your flu shot significantly limits your chances of catching the flu this and every flu season. Food sources for vitamin D include several types of fatty fish (or cod liver oil) and vitamin D-fortified foods.

Of course, one of the best ways to get a beneficial amount of vitamin D is to expose as much skin as possible to sunlight for 15 to 20 minutes per day. Many studies show that the body is most efficient at making vitamin D at midday.

Getting the proper amount of sleep and exercise is another excellent way to boost your immune system. “Aim for seven to eight hours of sleep per night and 30 minutes of exercise per day,” Vigano counsels, adding that exercise helps improve your sleep quality.

The body isn't the only thing that needs rest; even your mind needs a certain amount of it per day. “I encourage my patients to meditate; even 10 minutes a day can help reduce stress, which adversely affects the immune system,” says Vigano. Think you can't sit still for that long? There are several guided meditation apps for smart phones; some of these can even be integrated with a health app for an all-around healthy combination.

Also, be certain to talk to your doctor about getting a flu shot. Early fall is the best time to get vaccinated, and the earlier the better, as it takes two weeks after vaccination for the antibodies that protect against the flu to develop in the body.

You can find more information about this year's flu season and the benefits of vaccinations at <https://www.cdc.gov/flu>.

Following these simple guidelines could help you fight off the flu and enhance your overall well-being throughout the year. Here's to your good health!

Positive Change for Blue Shield Insurance Plans and Washington Hospital

Washington Hospital has expanded its health insurance options for local residents with the inclusion of Blue Shield of California PPO Individual and Family Plans.

As of July 1, 2018, residents covered under the Blue Shield Individual and Family Plan PPO insurance programs, including Blue Shield's Covered California products, are no longer being treated as out-of-network patients, according to Washington Hospital's Senior Director of Contract Services, Dave Hayne.

The new contract came after months of negotiation between Washington Hospital and Blue Shield, Hayne said. "This is a real benefit for Tri-City Area residents. Since many patients who had Blue Shield Individual/Family Plan (IFP) insurance coverage found their insurance didn't cover Washington Hospital or Washington Township Medical Foundation physicians."

This meant those individuals couldn't use their own local physicians or receive hospital services close to home. It was just too expensive for them as out-of-network services essentially are paid out-of-pocket given the very limited plan coverage, Hayne explained. "Patients had to look outside the district for medical options which imposed a real hardship on them. Those residents with Blue Shield IFP plans would have to travel significant distances to find a hospital that was in-network."

Washington Hospital and Blue Shield of California are working together to provide health care needs of our community members.

Kelly Link, a Bay Area resident, is one such patient. She chose to have back surgery at Washington Hospital because a Washington Hospital surgeon had been highly recommended by her personal physician. Originally covered by Blue Cross, she lost in-network coverage when Blue Cross withdrew from the individual and family plan market. Rather than going to another physician group, Ms. Link waited six months until the Blue Shield PPO Individual and Family Plan was available. She is now covered by her insurance as in-network and is proceeding with her surgery using the surgeon and hospital of her choice.

Prior to 2018, Blue Cross of California offered individual and family insurance plans, including Covered California Plans, to Washington Township Health Care District residents but that company withdrew from the individual and family plan market last year — leaving a huge void for many residents, Hayne said.

After Blue Cross withdrew from the market, Washington Hospital worked hard to reach a contract agreement with Blue Shield so district residents would have access to family and individual health insurance plans at reasonable rates.

Many people are covered by medical insurance obtained through their employers. However, those who do not have access to employer-based insurance now can purchase medical insurance directly from Blue Shield or, if qualified, obtain coverage through Covered California, the state's health insurance marketplace, since Blue Shield is a designated

Covered California health plan. (Covered California, which operates under the federal Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, provides health insurance plans for individuals and families who cannot afford or cannot obtain insurance through an employer group plan.)

Now, with Blue Shield individual and family plans as part of the Washington Hospital portfolio, residents with this plan have additional access to local care

The art of Usha Shukl

SUBMITTED BY DORSI DIAZ

The Sun Gallery is pleased to announce the art of Usha Shukla on display through the month of October at the Sun Gallery in Hayward.

Usha Shukla was born and brought up in New Delhi, India. From early childhood she was fascinated by the outdoors, and the vibrant colors of the Indian countryside left a strong impression on her. After a graduate degree in English literature Shukla went on to get a diploma in fashion design. In 1996 when she moved to San Francisco with her family, she found everything different except her interaction with nature. In 2005, after a visit to the Louvre Museum in Paris, Shukla realized her true passion for art. She enrolled in the local community college and started her formal art education. She completed her graduate program at the Academy of Art University, San Francisco, focusing on painting.

Combining her love of nature and passion for art, Shukla paints large abstract paintings in vibrant colors. She has a unique process of mark making. Instead of conventional tools like brushes and palette knives, she moves the paint on wood panels using an air blower. She has participated in several juried group shows in the Bay Area and won awards. She also has a public art mural in the city of Livermore. Her work is collected by several local art collectors. Shukla won the 2016-17 Clyde & Co Art Award for Emerging Artists, San Francisco, and her work was exhibited in the Clyde & Co Offices. She had a solo show at Cannery Art Gallery in San Francisco in May 2017. Most recently Shukla won the Award of Excellence at the Pleasanton Art League Alviso Adobe Show. Shukla has been selected for a public art commission by the Alameda County Arts Commission, and soon there will be two lamppost banners up in Inner Sunset of her paintings selected by an Francisco Women Artists group.

Shukla's work will be on display through Sunday, October 28 in the Ken Cook

Room of Sun Gallery. For more information, call (510) 581-4050 or email the gallery at sungallery@comcast.net. You can also visit online at www.sungallery.org.

New library turns to a new page in Hayward history

SUBMITTED BY THE CITY OF HAYWARD

A last-minute burst of finishing touches is being completed on the long-awaited new Hayward Main Library to prepare for its grand opening on Saturday, October 27. Rising three stories at 888 C Street in downtown Hayward, the 58,000-square foot building is designed as a net-zero energy facility and will set a new standard in environmentally sustainable design. The building is entirely electricity self-sufficient without reliance on fossil fuels and preserves drinking water by capturing, storing and recycling rain water for non-potable uses.

Among the features library patrons will enjoy are the building's large capacity that houses 50 percent more materials than the old main library, including books and multimedia for all ages, 53 additional computers for public use, a digital media lab, and a Makerspace featuring 3D printers, robotics and textiles.

It also contains multiple community meeting rooms, a separate Homework Support Center within the Children's Library, works by local artists, a café and bookstore, and offer a range of community services.

"Don't Dress for Dinner" by Marc Camoletti and adapted by Robin Hawdon opens Friday, October 19 at Chanticleers Theatre in Castro Valley. Directed by Randy Anger, an actor and director well-known to Chanticleers' audiences, this laugh-out-loud comedy contains adult themes, a rush of sexy shenanigans, mix-ups and wild coincidences that keep this farce moving from curtain up.

When Jacqueline decides to visit her mother for a few days, her husband Bernard sees an opportunity for a cozy weekend with his mistress. He invites his friend Robert along as his alibi and hires a Cordon Bleu cook to prepare gourmet delights. But when Jacqueline realizes Robert is coming for a visit everything changes! One impossible situation leads to another as the hapless friend Robert finds himself the target of both amorous attention and wrathful vengeance, while Bernard tries desperately to salvage a scrap of illicit bliss from the wreckage of the weekend. An evening of hilarious confusion ensues as Bernard and Robert improvise at breakneck speed. With a cook named Suzette, a lover named Suzanne, a confused friend, and a suspicious wife, this show has all the ingredients for a truly scrumptious comedic soufflé.

Chanticleers' production features Roger Caetano as Bernard, Rhonda Joy Taylor as Jacqueline, Jacqui Herrera as Suzette, John Vincent Burke as Robert, James Frankle as George, and newcomer Laura Zimmerman as Suzanne.

"Don't Dress for Dinner" opens with Chanticleers' traditional complimentary hors d'oeuvres, desserts, and beverage gala on Friday, October 19 and runs through Sunday, November 11. It's nonstop fun-welcome to hackathons

SUBMITTED BY SAHIL JAIN

Contrary to how it may sound, a hackathon does not involve actual hacking. Instead, it's a creativity and networking event that allows hundreds of individuals to gather and build technology together. BASEHacks 3.0 was a 24-hour high school hackathon, an all-inclusive free event held on September 22-23. Welcoming everyone from the beginners to the most advanced coders, BASEHacks 3.0 proved to be a great success.

The hackathon wasn't targeted toward a specific group of people. Workshops covered everything from Introduction to Web Design, to Intermediate iOS Application Development, to Natural Language Processing from Berkeley Electrical Engineering and Computer Science (EECS). Keynote speakers from Make School and professors from Stanford University offered insights and perspectives and encouraged high school students to take advantage of hackathons like BASEHacks to explore their potential.

The theme for the hackathon was to create products in the areas of social good, education, and medicine. Interdisciplinary innovation was also encouraged to leverage technology and data to produce solutions to unsolved problems. Over 200 students attended BASEHacks 3.0, one of the largest high school hackathons in the nation.

For more than 24 hours, a cohort of 200+ hackers worked on projects ranging from Alexa-enabled smart fridges to a decentralized ATM machine. Over 40 teams presented their astonishing work to judges.

The competition was tough; a total of 16 prizes were awarded but in eyes of judges every project is was “winner”. As Sahil Jain, Executive Director at BASEHacks mentions, “It's the amount of learning, fun, and growth that occurred over 24 hours which truly mattered, not some piece of technology called a “prize” at the end”. “While prizes are nice, the end goal was to facilitate personal development as much as we could, in different shapes, forms, and sizes”. Unlike other hackathons, prizes like the “Best Beginner Hack” was awarded to reward young individuals persevering and following their passions by coming to events such as BASEHacks. To keep the energy going a local sandwich shop sponsored the lunch.

In the midst of Silicon Valley, hackathons are a positive impact on society in a fun and meaningful way, encouraging students to build upon their interests at a young age.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Manufacturing Day, a terrific opportunity

I am sending a note of sincere “Thanks” for your “Manufacturing Day” article, page 7, in the October 2, 2018 issue of the Tri-City Voice.

I read the article and realized what a terrific opportunity Manufacturing Day is to expose the young generation to local industry right here in Fremont. I presented the article to my 18-year-old son, currently in his first year of college, and he was interested to tour some of the companies.

My son and I toured Littelfuse, Alom and Evolve, all located in South Fremont. Each company's staff was warm and welcoming and provided so much information about their business and gave us a walking tour throughout their impressive facilities. My son is now considering a major in Industrial Engineering after this experience.

A majority of the young generation does not get a chance to see details of daily operations behind the walls of companies that surround them. Manufacturing Day provides a wonderful opportunity to see “what's out there,” what they can possibly do in their future, and helps give them a direction or idea of what to study in college in order to be prepared for the future.

So, thank you Tri City Voice, and Littelfuse, Alom and Evolve for a truly positive and enlightening “Manufacturing Day.” Please continue to offer such an event again because you do make a difference.

Little scrutiny in DeVry sale, as DeVos targets protections

By COLLIN BINKLEY AND RICHARD LARDNER ASSOCIATED PRESS

A little-known venture capitalist is on the verge of acquiring one of the biggest for-profit colleges in the country, a transaction that would put him in control of a troubled national chain that’s more than 60 times the size of the tiny California school he currently owns.

The business friendly Trump administration has given a tentative green light to the sale of DeVry University to Bradley Palmer, chairman of Connecticut-based Palm Ventures, even as critics warn the deal raises red flags. Chief among them is the challenge of taking over such a large institution. DeVry, which has an annual enrollment of about 46,000, also faces thousands of fraud complaints filed by students.

The DeVry acquisition is the inverse of how Washington typically works. Often companies and their top executives spend heavily to influence a government decision or policy in their favor. But there’s no sign that any of the parties employed lobbyists or made significant political contributions specifically to push the sale forward.

Like most transactions in the for-profit world, the DeVry deal has received little public scrutiny even though millions of dollars in federal financial aid are at stake. And the change in ownership is moving along at the same time Education Secretary Betsy DeVos works to dismantle Obama-era regulations designed to better police the industry and increase protections for students.

If the DeVry deal is finalized, it would be another in a series of recent sales meant to breathe new life into troubled for-profit colleges. Purdue University recently bought the for-profit Kaplan University chain and converted it into a nonprofit to lead the school’s online programs. Kaplan agreed to a $1.3 million settlement in 2015 after it was accused of hiring unqualified instructors. Last year the Dream Center Foundation, a religious charity, purchased three chains from Education Management Corporation, which in 2015 agreed to nearly $200 million in settlements over allegations that it used illegal recruiting tactics.

Under the terms of the DeVry sale, the chain’s stock will be acquired at no cost by Cogswell Education LLC, a holding company registered in Delaware and run by Palmer. Cogswell Education currently owns the for-profit Cogswell College in San Jose.

The impact for students is unclear. The Education Department said DeVry must keep promises it previously made to its students, including a commitment to disclose information about costs and student debt. A spokeswoman for Cogswell Education added that Palmer has no plans to sell DeVry in any particular timeframe.

“We are going into the DeVry investment with a long-term view focused on impact, quality and student outcomes,” spokeswoman Natalie Berkey said in a statement.

For DeVos’ detractors, the sale is more evidence that she’s putting corporate profits over the interests of consumers. A little more than a decade ago, Palmer’s firm acquired the nonprofit Heald College chain. In the span of a few years, Heald was converted into a for-profit school and then sold for $395 million to the Corinthian Colleges chain, which collapsed in 2015.

Bob Shireman, a former Education Department official during President Barack Obama’s first term and a frequent critic of for-profit colleges, questioned whether a similar fate awaits DeVry. Would Palm Ventures strip the chain down to make it as profitable as possible and then sell it off?

“Based on the way private equity firms have behaved generally, it would be reasonable to conclude that things are going to get worse for students and taxpayers,” Shireman said. “Not every lion kills its tamer, it’s not an absolute, but certainly it’s a reason for concern.”

Palmer declined to comment for this story. Berkey said in a statement that Palmer is “very private” and does not speak with media. She said if the transaction secures all necessary approvals, DeVry will be operated and governed by its own independent board of trustees, separate from Cogswell College.

“Further, it is not anticipated at this time that Brad Palmer or any employee or affiliate of Palm Ventures or any shareholder of DeVry will have a seat on the DeVry board of trustees,” Berkey said.

Ernie Gobble, a spokesman for Adtalem Global Education, which currently owns DeVry, declined to respond to questions about the deal, saying only that “the transaction is still tracking according to expectations.”

The sale is still awaiting final review by the Education Department but already has cleared several key hurdles, despite reservations voiced by regulators.

In an SEC filing Sept. 17, Adtalem said DeVry’s accreditor, the Higher Learning Commission, had approved a transfer of the school’s accreditation to the new owner. Gobble declined to provide a copy of the commission’s approval letter. Commission spokesman Steve Kauffman said the company does not make information about cases public.

Department officials gave preliminary approval in a June 19 “pre-acquisition review” to Adtalem, although the document suggested there would be some connection between DeVry and Cogswell College. The department has concerns about combining two institutions of “vastly different size,” the letter said, adding that DeVry “dwarfs” Cogswell College.

The department’s proposed solution is to let DeVry’s new owner operate the chain at current enrollment levels, with a ban on expansion for at least a year. The department also plans to continue holding $68 million that DeVry was previously required to pay as a form of insurance in case the chain fails.

The Illinois Board of Higher Education voted over the summer to grant DeVry the authority to operate and grant degrees in Illinois under Cogswell Education. Adtalem is headquartered in Chicago, and eight of DeVry’s 52 campuses are in Illinois.

The state board’s approval came even as a coalition of student and taxpayer advocacy groups raised numerous concerns about the transaction, including Palm Ventures’ history with Heald and what they said was a “lack of clarity” about the potential role that Palm Ventures may have in operating DeVry’s programs.

In a June 1 letter to the Illinois board, Palmer declared that the objections the groups raised were “replete with errors.” Heald thrived while owned by Palm Ventures, he wrote, and the firm had no dealings with Corinthian before the sale.

But Sen. Dick Durbin, D-Ill.,

a critic of DeVry who had urged DeVos and the board to carefully scrutinize the deal, said students in Illinois and across the country should be wary of signing up at the new institution. DeVry agreed in 2016 to a $100 million settlement to resolve an FTC lawsuit alleging the school misled students through deceptive ads.

“I’ve raised my concerns about this transaction from the get-go,” Durbin said in a statement. “DeVry has a proven track record of misconduct and Cogswell is ill-equipped, even unlikely, to turn it around.”

When a college changes hands, it’s typically reviewed by the Education Department and by the school’s accreditor, but it’s largely done behind closed doors and without public input. The Obama administration began calling for greater scrutiny of school transactions in its final years but never formally changed procedures.

“They have tended to happen in a black box, where it’s never been clear who is making these decisions, on what basis they are making them or what criteria are being used,” said Shireman, a senior fellow at The Century Foundation, a progressive Washington think tank.

The DeVry sale is expected to close in early fiscal year 2019, which began in July, according to an SEC disclosure filed last month by Adtalem. Even though DeVry has fallen behind in certain performance benchmarks that the deal rested upon, Palmer hasn’t signaled any plans to change course.

The December 2017 purchase agreement permits Cogswell Education to walk away if the Education Department receives more than 2,250 fraud claims from former DeVry students on or before the deal’s closing date. As of May, there were approximately 10,275 complaints against DeVry pending review, according to department data, including more than 3,700 filed since January 2017.

Barmak Nassirian, director of federal relations and policy analysis for the American Association of State Colleges and Universities, said it’s no coincidence that DeVry and other for-profits are attempting a comeback at the same time the Trump administration moves to eliminate policies that Nassirian describes as “governmental safeguards.”

oversight that has created this new frenzy in the marketplace, where the veterans of the previous round of rip-offs are basically taking their winnings and handing the toxic assets to new owners,” Nassirian said.

Although Palm Ventures isn’t seen as a major player in the for-profit realm, it has quietly bought and sold several chains over the past three decades, generating millions of dollars by flipping brands like Heald College, UEI College and American Education Center. It also owns Nightingale College, a small for-profit nursing school in Utah, and a stake in Post University, a for-profit in Connecticut that’s fighting two federal lawsuits from former employees who say it uses unethical recruiting practices to drive profits.

Palmer’s father, Russell Palmer, who led a predecessor of the Deloitte firm, has bought and sold several for-profit chains through his Philadelphia investment firm, the Palmer Group.

None of the Palm Ventures’ officers listed on the company’s website comes from a career in academia, and the firm just as frequently invests in tech companies, hotels and the food industry. Palmer, who got his start in the restaurant industry, typically stays out of the limelight, even in marquee education deals. When he bought Heald College in 2007, a news release announcing the sale said the buyer “wishes to remain undisclosed.”

Founded more than a century ago, Cogswell College had 740 students throughout the 2016-17 school year, according to Education Department data. Most of its students are California residents, taught by 19 full-time faculty members.

The school’s revenue has skyrocketed since Palmer bought it, growing from $1.3 million in 2010 to nearly $10 million in 2015, according to Education Department data analyzed by The Associated Press. The growth has been tied to a rapid rise in enrollment, from 238 students to more than 600, with a sharp increase in the number of low-income students who receive federal Pell Grants.

Shareholders must vote on Musk’s return as Tesla chairman

By TOM KRISHER AP AUTO WRITER

If Tesla CEO Elon Musk wants to return as chairman, shareholders will have to vote on it.

The requirement is detailed in a court brief filed jointly on Thursday by Tesla and the Securities and Exchange Commission. The brief was required by a federal judge who must approve a securities fraud settlement reached with Musk and the company last month.

Musk and Tesla agreed to pay $20 million each and make concessions to settle an SEC lawsuit alleging Musk duped investors with statements about a plan to take the company private.

The settlement allows Musk to remain CEO but requires him to relinquish his role as chairman for at least three years. After that time, a majority of shareholders must approve Musk’s return to lead the company’s board.

U.S. District Judge Alison Nathan ordered the brief to show the settlement was “fair and reasonable,” which is a common practice in the court. She has yet to rule on the agreements with Musk and Tesla.

The SEC accused Musk of committing securities fraud due to an Aug. 7 tweet in which he declared he had secured to finance taking the company private at $420 per share, a huge premium over the stock price at the time.

The commission alleged that Musk hadn’t locked up the estimated $25 billion to $50 billion that it would have required to pull off that deal, and wanted to punish him by forcing him out as Tesla’s CEO.

Initially rejecting an SEC offer to settle the case, Musk relented two days after the fraud complaint and agreed to resolve the matter by paying the penalty, stepping down as chairman and agreeing to oversight about his communications on company news.

But the deal didn’t prevent the free-wheeling Musk from continuing to speak out about other subjects, apparently to include mocking the SEC.

No mention was made in the brief about Musk insulting the commission on twitter Oct. 4, so he apparently won’t face any punishment for that. The SEC wouldn’t comment Thursday.

Musk taunted the securities agency just days after the Sept. 29 settlement was announced, calling it the “Shortseller Enrichment Commission” before snidely praising it for “doing incredible work.”

The tweet stoked Musk’s long-running feud with short sellers, a category of investors that have been betting on Tesla’s stock to fall.

Chester Spatt, finance professor at Carnegie Mellon University and former SEC economist, said the shareholder vote requirement shows the SEC is protecting investors.

“It’s a good reminder to the board that ultimately it is the stockholders that matter,” he said. Spatt said Musk insulting the SEC was “boneheaded,” but didn’t violate securities laws. “That tweet was just him exercising his free speech rights.”

Musk, 47, has rarely seemed hesitant to make provocative statements to his more than 22 million followers on Twitter. He is now defending himself against a defamation lawsuit filed by a diver who helped save 12 boys on a Thai soccer team from a flooded cave. Musk described the diver as a pedophile in a tweet that has since been deleted.

As part of Musk’s settlement with the SEC, Tesla is supposed to monitor its CEO’s Twitter posts, but only those that have to do with company news.

Shares of Tesla closed Thursday down 1.8 percent at $252.23 as the Dow Jones Industrial average dropped over 500 points.

Krisher reported from Detroit. Michael Liedtke contributed from San Francisco.

Initiative seeks to repeal California's gasoline tax hike

BY AMY TAXIN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

California voters will soon decide whether to drive out a gasoline tax increase passed to fund transportation projects across the state.

Proposition 6 seeks to repeal last year's decision by the Democratic-led Legislature to raise fuel taxes and vehicle fees to pay for roughly $5 billion a year in highway and road improvements and transit programs.

Republicans and Democrats agree the sprawling state known for its car culture needs a transportation overhaul, with suburban commuters clamoring for better freeways and urban dwellers demanding mass transit.

But how to fund these fixes has been hotly disputed, prompting the recall of a Democratic state lawmaker who voted for the tax increase and spurring Republican candidates in races for federal, state and local offices to take up the call for repeal.

"Republicans hate increases in taxes," said Fred Smoller, a political science professor at Chapman University in Orange County, where Republicans face several competitive congressional races. "They also need something on the ballot to, as they say, 'gin the base' for the fall."

Gov. Jerry Brown signed the transportation deal last year to raise $52 billion over a decade for road and bridge repairs. Nearly half the money will come from fuel taxes, with a 12 cent-per-gallon boost in gasoline excise taxes that took effect last November.

The repeal initiative – a constitutional amendment proposed by San Diego talk radio host and Republican former councilman Carl DeMaio – is backed by Republican gubernatorial candidate John Cox and taxpayer advocates. It is opposed by construction industry and firefighter unions.

Supporters raised about $5 million through September, according to campaign finance reports. That's a far cry from the $30 million raised to oppose the initiative, which would also require voter approval to raise vehicle or fuel taxes in the future.

For DeMaio, the issue isn't just transportation but the rising cost of living in California especially for the working class. He argues fuel taxes should be used more efficiently.

"Everything in California is so much more expensive and the question is why," he said. "Gas taxes for me was the issue that was just symbolic of this entire cost-of-living crisis that's being ignored by politicians."

Opponents contend there aren't enough funds to keep up with the transit needs of California's 40 million people. Over the last two decades, automobiles have become more fuel efficient – a boon for the environment but a challenge to transportation budgets as drivers need less gasoline.

Kiana Valentine, senior legislative representative with the California State Association of Counties, said some roads were going to gravel and streets left unplowed during snowstorms when local governments couldn't afford the upkeep.

"Ultimately, they're putting the safety of Californians and the future of our transportation infrastructure, and our economy, and our overall quality of life at risk," she said.

A September poll by the nonpartisan Public Policy Institute of California showed the measure lagging, with only 39 percent saying they would vote for repeal and 52 percent saying they oppose it.

On a train platform in the Orange County city of Fullerton, several people complained about congested freeway driving but had different ideas of how to fix it. Brenda Gentry, a 61-year-old paralegal who rides the train to her job in Los Angeles, said Californians pay far more for gasoline than her out-of-state relatives.

"I think the gas tax is ridiculous," said Gentry, a 61-year-old Republican from the small community of Placentia. "I would certainly support getting rid of it."

Linda Johnson, a 66-year-old retired teacher and Democrat from Anaheim, said she feels just the opposite. She'd like to drive herself to the airport rather than take a lengthy train ride and said she's willing to pay more in gasoline taxes to see road improvements.

"ust fix the traffic in LA," she said. "I don't mind the gas increase if it goes to fixing the roads."

While the initiative is a state ballot measure, Republican candidates for Congress are also jumping on the issue as they face increased pressure from Democrats trying to make the most of President Donald Trump's low approval ratings in the state and capture a majority of seats in the House of Representatives in November.

In the PPIC survey, Trump had a 37 percent approval rating among likely California voters, and didn't win the 2016 election even in the once traditional Republican stronghold of Orange County.

Much support for the measure poured in after Republicans successfully recalled Orange County Democratic state Sen. Josh Newman in June over his vote for the gas tax increase. The recall ended Democrats' two-thirds majority in the state Legislature and signaled the initiative might be tapping into voters' unease with the taxes, experts said.

"This is a way to bring out the Republican faithful – which is smaller than before but still brings a lot of votes to down-ticket items that can save state legislative seats, but important to everyone right now are these key Congressional seats," said Wesley Hussey, a political science professor at California State University, Sacramento. "It really has taken on a life of its own."

Tri-City Stargazer FOR WEEK: OCTOBER 17 - OCTOBER 23, 2018

For All Signs: Mercury, ancient messenger god, is unusually busy throughout this week. This suggests that most of us will be preoccupied with communication of one form or another. There may be many phone calls, messages, letters, quick conversations, rapid decisions, and/or papers to write. The period is favorable for probing into causes and finding the bottom line to any matter. Beware of the tendency to jump to conclusions or acting before all the facts are clear. Remind yourself of how the old "gossip" game is played and don't take what you hear very seriously unless it is verified by another trusted source. Remain especially conscious of what you say/repeat because Venus is retrograde, and relationships may be unsteady.

Aries the Ram (March 21-April 20): Issues concerning partnerships and spending of resources are front and center at this time. You may be discussing how to utilize joint resources or what is the best spending/saving strategy. Irritability and a tendency to short temper may be your companions this week. Your reflexes are off. Drive and handle tools carefully.

Taurus the Bull (April 21-May 20): Surprise, changeability, and general rebellion are the qualities prominent this week. You may be the one who feels rebellious and wants to be left alone. Or it could be your partner or a good friend. If you have things on your mind regarding a relationship, they may fall right out of your mouth when you least expect it. Think.

Gemini the Twins (May 21-June 20): Mercury is your ruling planet and represents your life. Its pattern this week is busy, busy, busy. You may feel slightly on edge with a case of the jitters. You do not need to be everywhere, but perhaps you will feel that way. Don't let the Messenger lead you into unnecessary activity. Take care of your mental and physical health.

Cancer the Crab (June 21-July 21): There may be one or more developments this week that seem to drag you back to past times, memories, and people. It could be the temptation to fall into habit patterns that you have long since outgrown. As soon as your toes hit that water, stop and evaluate. Do you really want to go there?

Leo the Lion (July 22-August 22): Experiences may seem surreal on some level during this week. You may be doing something you never thought you would do. Hold onto the awareness that you might be misinterpreting what happens. It is also possible that you are unconsciously applying a mask to suit the circumstances. If you feel disconnected, you must go back to your heart center.

Virgo the Virgin (August 23-September 22): Please see the lead paragraph. You will be extremely busy this week. You may feel somewhat edgy and irritable. Obsessive worry may cause this reaction. If there is nothing you can do that is productive, let it go. Things usually take care of themselves without a lot of fuss, if you give them a chance.

Libra the Scales (September 23-October 22): It is important to pay attention to your bookkeeping and personal accounting now. It is not generally fun, but your mind is ready to concentrate upon it. You may be tempted to spend more than is wise. Think long-term, not so much about what sparkles now.

Scorpio the Scorpion (October 23-November 21): You are somewhat edgy and irritable this week. Parts of your mind are scattered into so many corners that it is hard to pull everything together. But you know clearly where boundaries need to be drawn and you are not hesitant to do so. The best of verbal warriors is concise and says what is needed, but no more.

Sagittarius the Archer (November 22-December 21): This is an unusually positive time to seek support and counsel (if needed). You have almost finished a grand project and now you need to prepare yourself to move beyond it. Consider meditation, mindfulness, or any other means to clear out the details and look at your big picture.

Capricorn the Goat (December 22-January 19): This is a wonderful week to concentrate on research or some other mental project. Your mind is clear and things seem to flow easily from one thing to another. If you need support from others in your circle, speak up. It will be there.

Aquarius the Water Bearer (January 20-February 18): This looks like a week in which you really want to say your piece, but you have a sense that would be a bad idea. Agreed if you feel so upset that you can't present your case with compassion. But if you give attention to everyone's feelings and present it tactfully, you could accomplish an improvement.

Pisces the Fish (February 19-March 20): Allow your intuition to be your guide. The Muse wants to speak through you during this period of two to three weeks. Focus on art, music, dance, and color—whatever gives you pleasure. Take long breaks if possible. Being near the water will be most soothing, even if it is only the bathtub.

More than 1,000 election officers are still needed, including more than 100 bilingual volunteers. English-only volunteers are also needed.

“This is a remarkable opportunity for Santa Clara County residents to observe, promote and facilitate one of our most important civil liberties; our democratic rights as voters,” said Registrar of Voters Shannon Bushey, adding that election officers are paid up to $200 for volunteering at the polls.

Bilingual election officers must be fluent in English and one of the following languages: Mandarin, Cantonese, Taiwanese, Spanish, Tagalog, Vietnamese, Hindi, Gujarati, Nepali, Punjabi, Japanese, Khmer, Korean, Farsi, Syriac, Russian, Portuguese, Tamil or Telugu. Farsi, Russian, and Syriac speakers are especially needed.

Eligible residents who would like to participate in the democratic process are encouraged to contact the Registrar of Voters’ Office immediately. Election officers must be citizens who are registered to vote, legal permanent residents, or high school students 16 year-old or older with a minimum GPA of 2.5 and both parental and principal permission. Experience is not necessary; all training is provided.

Help us Assess Hayward Community Needs

SUBMITTED BY CITY OF HAYWARD

The City of Hayward is seeking public input as part of a citywide assessment of community needs in the areas of housing, transportation, health and employment. Once completed, the Community Needs Assessment will be presented at a public meeting of the City Council and will be used to help inform future policy, program and funding decisions.

One way to provide input is to complete the Community Needs Assessment survey at <https://www.surveymonkey.com/r/HaywardCommunitySurvey>.

Developed by the City’s project consulting partner Crescendo Consulting Group, the survey takes about six minutes to complete and will be open until October 31. In addition to completing the questionnaire yourself, the City encourages sharing the survey with other members of the Hayward community.

If you have questions or want additional information, please contact the City of Hayward Community Services Division at (510) 583-4250.

Can we thank you enough!

The 36th annual Hayward Volunteer Recognition and Awards Dinner on October 9 honored dozens of outstanding Hayward community members who give their time and energy to benefit others and support local service programs and nonprofit organizations.

Judy Harrison, a founding member of the Hayward Education Foundation and president of the Friends of Hayward Library, is the recipient of the 2018 Life Time Achievement Award, one of the event’s two most celebrated recognitions.

Ralph Morales, executive director of the South Hayward Parish and tireless affordable housing and social justice advocate, received the 2018 John N. Pappas Humanitarian Award, which honors the memory of the former Hayward school board member, planning commissioner, City Council member and Mayor.

Sponsored by Supervisor Richard Valle and the City of Hayward with nearly 40 participating community organizations and agencies, the Volunteer Dinner took place under the big tent on the grounds of Saint Rose Hospital.

Hayward first began formally honoring volunteers in 1977, when a civic club, Hayward First, created the Pappas Award. After a hiatus of a few years, a new committee of community members formed in 1983 to renew the awards program and dinner.

Dandiya Raas Dance

Bollywood fitness performance. We are also introducing a special and exciting “Flash Mob” and performance led by dance group moreUPBEAT. Guests are encouraged to join the flash mob team; the choreography video is available on the Induz Laser Dandiya Facebook event page. Vegetarian food catered by Chaat Bhavan and Mantra India will be available for purchase.

This event is not just a fundraiser but a medium for bringing diverse cultures and communities together. We see the point of “connection” as being Where Art Meets Heart. If we can accomplish that for our children, then the world of their future will be a peaceful and happy place.

We at Induz believe that every child deserves a comprehensive education that includes global learning and the arts. Induz has been working over the last decade to address the gap that exists in our education system in providing holistic education for our children. Our mission is to empower children to be creative and innovative through the arts. The 100 percent volunteer run organization has been providing arts enrichment educational programs to low-income schools across the San Francisco Bay Area. The program has made a significant impact over the years and received recognition as one of the best after-school programs in Silicon Valley. Induz also has global programs running in India, Nepal, Africa, and Haiti.

The first initiative in Bangalore, Project Tulika, launched in 2008 for orphan kids is going strong. The Kopou Project in Dibrugarh, Assam, India, launched in August 2016 provides arts and vocational training for the children of tea plantation workers. Besides classes in arts, music, and dance for children, the Kopou Project offers sewing classes to teenage girls, enabling sustainable skills. Induz plans to further expand the vocational courses to include computers and electrician classes.

In April 2017, Induz launched Project Iris in Haiti, an arts and creative focused initiative. Induz is also in the process of construction on a Resource Center, a place for children to learn various forms of art and music, and it will also house a library and serve as a community center. The community center in Haiti is on a mountain, epicenter of 2010 devastating earthquakes, not easily accessible. It is a 90-minute walk from the base of the mountain, or one can ride on donkeys to get there.

The program and Resource Center will serve communities from seven surrounding mountain villages, approximately 300 children. Life for children and families in the mountain is very hard due to poverty, lack of roads, heavy rainfall, floods, and lack of proper sanitation. Induz hopes to provide a better life and future for the children. The Induz team visited the village in June 2017 and saw the impact and difference the organization is making. Induz volunteers visited the site and conducted workshops, planted trees, and are now in the process of soil assessment to plan the foundation for the building. There has been a huge progress on the project but further funds are required to complete the center.

Funds raised from the Dandiya event will go towards the completion of the center in addition to funding other local projects.

Induz Dandiya tickets can be bought at www.sulekha.com/induz or by contacting Ray Mitra at (510) 875-5006. Contact Mitra for volunteering opportunities. For more information about Induz and its projects or make a donation, please visit www.induz.org.

Grow garlic now, grab it in spring

ARTICLE AND PHOTOS BY DANIEL O'DONNELL

Alice May Brock, the owner of the restaurant that was the inspiration for the classic 1969 film "Alice's Restaurant" once said, "Tomatoes and oregano make it Italian; wine and tarragon make it French. Sour cream makes it Russian; lemon and cinnamon make it Greek. Soy sauce makes it Chinese; garlic makes it good." That is why garlic is one of only a handful of foods, herbs, and spices that are commonly used in culinary dishes all over the world. October is the perfect time to start growing it here.

Garlic is a plant species that is closely related to leeks, chives, shallots, and onions. Scientifically known as Allium sativum, it is a bulbous plant that produces a small number of thin narrow leaves and a single flower stalk. Garlic plants do not flower; instead they produce a scape with small bulbils that will develop on top of the stalk in the spring. The scapes of some garlic varieties are edible and can be used in salads and pasta dishes. The main culinary use for a garlic plant is the individual cloves that make up the bulb when it is ready to be harvested.

Garlic has been celebrated for over 7,000 years. Well-preserved cloves were found in King Tutankhamen's tomb. China is the number one producer growing two thirds of the garlic harvested worldwide. India and Bangladesh are second and third with the U.S. ranked between sixth and eleventh in garlic production, depending on the year and source of the statistics. The majority of U.S. garlic farming is concentrated in California. Gilroy is known as the Garlic Capital of the World and hosts a large garlic festival every July.

There are compelling reasons to grow garlic at home even though the Garlic Capital of the World is just a short drive away and fresh garlic is readily available in local markets. The Tri-City area has an ideal climate for growing garlic. There are also several different varieties that are not always available in local stores or at farmers' markets. Some offer subtle differences in flavor while others can take on different pungencies. All varieties are high in antioxidants and promote health benefits that include reducing blood pressure and cholesterol levels.

There are three subspecies of garlic that all produce edible cloves: softneck, stiffneck, and great-headed or elephant types. Each subspecies has a few characteristics that are common to its group.

Hardneck varieties, as the name suggests, have stiff stalks, which is not an important distinction. What is notable is that hardneck varieties are cold hardy, have fewer but larger cloves, are easy to peel, are milder tasting, and do not store long. Names to look for are Korean, Siberian, German Red, Spanish Roja, and Purple Glazer.

Softneck varieties have soft stems and can be stored up to nine months and still taste fresh. The soft stems provide a decorative and beneficial way to store the bulbs with an easy to learn braiding process. Softneck varieties are recommended for growing in warmer climates, they have intense flavors, and grow bigger bulbs with more cloves. Varieties include Inchelium Red, California Early, California Late, Silver Rose, and Early Italian Purple.

Elephant or great-headed is a garlic variety that is characterized by a bulb that consists of four to six enormous cloves. It is easy to peel, stores well, and has a very mild garlic and sometimes onion taste.

Heirloom and uncommon garlic bulbs sold specifically for planting can be purchased online or sometimes at local nurseries. Only certified organic bulbs purchased at the supermarket or farmers' market should be used for growing. Non-organic garlic can be treated to make their shelf life longer making them harder to grow.

Planting garlic in the Tri-City area can be done October through December. Garlic should be planted in a sunny spot. Dig a two to three-inch deep trench and add an organic fertilizer such as chicken manure, blood meal, or fish emulsion to the bottom of the row. Break apart the bulb and place the cloves root side down two to four inches apart in the trench. Cover with soil. Plant multiple rows 10 to 14 inches apart.

Garlic is a heavy feeder and will need one of the organic high nitrogen fertilizers listed above applied to the soil once or twice in the spring. Water the soil so it stays damp as a wrung-out sponge. Taper off the watering in mid June and let the soil begin to dry. The garlic should be ready to harvest in July.

An unknown source once stated, "Garlic is the catsup of intellectuals." There is no shortage of garlic to purchase in the supermarket, but a scarcity of varieties with unique flavors and distinctive colors. You do not have to be a genius to grow your own garlic, just smart enough to do it.

Police to host prescription drug drop-off event

SUBMITTED MILPITAS AND HAYWARD PD

On Saturday, October 27 the Milpitas Police Department and Hayward Police Department are partnering with the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) on its 16th National Prescription Drug Take Back Day. The event is designed to give the public an opportunity to prevent pill abuse and theft by ridding their homes of potentially dangerous expired, unused, and unwanted prescription drugs.

People are encouraged to bring their unneeded medications for disposal between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. to the Milpitas Police Department at 1275 N. Milpitas Blvd. or the Hayward Police Department at 300 W. Winton Ave. Most prescription drugs, including pills, patches and liquids are eligible for the event, however, needles or sharps cannot be accepted. The service is free and anonymous, with no questions asked.

This initiative addresses a vital public safety and public health issue. Medicines that languish in home cabinets are highly susceptible to diversion, misuse, and abuse. Rates of prescription drug abuse in the U.S. are alarmingly high, as are the number of accidental poisonings and overdoses due to these drugs.

For more information about the disposal of prescription drugs or about the October 27 Take Back Day event, go to the DEA Diversion website: www.deadiversion.usdoj.gov/

Aztec, Folklorico and Mariachi headline Day of the Dead celebration

The annual Día de los Muertos celebration, an amalgamation of All Souls Day and All Saint's Day with ancient beliefs of indigenous people of Mexico, is observed October 31 through November 2. It is believed that at midnight of October 31, the gates of heaven open to spirits of deceased children, allowing them to temporarily reunite with their families; on November 2, spirits of adults join the festivities. Altars are prepared with food, drink, toys, candies and mementos that welcome and honor the spirits of loved ones. It is believed that offerings will please the departed and, in return, provide protection, good luck and wisdom for their families and friends. This celebration coincides with Catholic traditions of special masses to show respect for and remembrance of deceased family and friends.

In honor of Dia de los Muertos, a celebration will be held on Sunday, October 21 at Magnolia Plaza in Newark. Olin Anahuac, traditional Aztec dancers will perform as well as

Ballet Folkloric by students of Schilling and Musik Elementary Schools. Music of Los Lagos Mariachi Band will entertain as well. An arts and crafts workspace will also be provided as well as light refreshments. Everyone is invited to come by to celebrate their heritage and honor their ancestors.

Run 4 Education

SUBMITTED BY FAHRIA KHAN

The 14th annual "Fremont Run 4 Education" is coming up quickly! Last year, we had a successful event where we doubled the attendance from the previous year with well over 800 runners. Over 35 sponsors participated in a vibrant community expo, and Mike Inouye of NBC News was on-site with our own local hometown hero Brandon Sass as MCs. We had participation from every single elementary school, including Glankler Early Learning Center, in Fremont Unified School District (FUSD), and raised over $20,000 with your support! We expect our 14th anniversary to be even bigger and better!

This year, the run will take place on Sunday, October 28 at Quarry Lakes Recreational Area. All funds raised go directly to Fremont Education Foundation's (FEF) Guy Emanuele Sports Fund (GESF). GESF supports after school sports for students throughout Fremont Unified School District. For high school students, individual grants help offset costs of equipment, sports-wear, fees, shoes, sports bags, tournament fees, and other related items required for participation. We were able to grant over 65 scholarships this past year from the funds raised at last year's highly successful run. In addition, every elementary and junior high school with after school sports programs received a grant from FEF.

This year, every FUSD elementary school, including Glankler Early Learning Center, will receive money for each registration. So, encourage your neighbors, relatives, and friends to sign up to help your school. Register online at www.fremonstrun4education.com.

How to Wipe Out a Deadly Disease

Can you number the parts of this story in the correct order?

The situation was even sadder because a vaccine that could prevent people from getting polio had been invented.

It was so successful that Rotary International made it a goal to wipe polio off the face of the earth. For more than 30 years more than 2.5 billion children have been given the life-saving polio vaccine. Today, wild polio remains active in only two countries.

Dr. Santos asked members of Rotary clubs throughout the Philippines to vaccinate the children in their communities. More than 6 million children were immunized against polio. It was a huge success.

Dr. Benny Santos belonged to an international club called Rotary. He wrote a letter to the International President of Rotary asking if all of the Rotarians in the Philippines could volunteer to immunize the country's children. The President of Rotary and his committee approved the idea.

More than 30 years ago, a doctor in the Philippines named Dr. Benny Santos was very upset about the number of people in his country who had a disease called polio.

Polio caused people to become physically disabled. Some had problems breathing. Many died.

What is polio?

Rotary

A Special Test

Rotarians have a short test with only four questions. Use the code to discover the four questions Rotarians ask themselves about everything they say or do.

Is it the _____?	Is it _____ to all concerned?	Will it build _____ and _____?	Will it be _____ to all concerned?
☐ = GOODWILL	☐ = BETTER	☐ = GOOD	☐ = FAIR
☐ = BENEFICIAL	☐ = TRUTH	☐ = FRIENDSHIPS	☐ = TRUST

If everyone asked themselves these four questions before they said or did something, how would it make the world a better place?

Experience the world of bonsai

Step into the fascinating world of miniature trees when Yamato Bonsai Kai hosts their 47th annual bonsai exhibit. Meaning “planted in a container,” bonsai is a Japanese word for the art form of growing and maintaining small trees that look just like their full-sized counterparts. Any tree species can be used for bonsai, and many styles are used, such as broom (hokidachi), formal upright (chokkan), informal upright (moyogi), slanting (shakan), cascade (kengai), and growing on a rock (seki-joju).

The two-day event on Saturday, October 20 and Sunday, October 21 will have over 70 trees on display, several of which are 100 years old or more. There will be bonsai vendors with trees and tools to purchase, daily raffles, and see the art of bonsai in action with demonstrations held both days, featuring the talents of club members Sensei Johnny Uchida, Mike Baker, and Tony Hayworth.

If you like what you see at the exhibit, membership in Yamato Bonsai Kai is open to everyone. Beginners to experts enjoy monthly meetings, exhibits, and newsletters, which provide seasonal information about trees, grooming, and fertilization. The club also sponsors classes held at the Castro Valley Adult School. With the motto “Friendship through Bonsai,” Yamato Bonsai Kai offers expert knowledge and help, along with the company of fellow enthusiasts.

September 29 – November 25, 2018

Day of the Dead at its core is a celebration of life. It's about remembering deceased loved ones and honoring their lives. This year's exhibition presents all forms of ofrendas from our community members, from traditional altars to innovative sculptures. Some artworks highlight big moments in a loved one's life while others illustrate the impact of an historical figure. All show the many ways that Day of the Dead is celebrated.

ELDEST UNION CITY CITIZENS CELEBRATE 100 PLUS YEARS OF LIVING WELL

On October 2, Elizabeth “Betty” Ehly reached a remarkable milestone: The vivacious resident of the Masonic Home at Union City celebrated her 105th birthday! Even at this community, where day-to-day living reflects a passionate devotion to living well at every age, Ehly’s landmark birthday is nothing short of inspiring. Far from frail, the vivacious centenarian — a cancer survivor — effuses a contagious sense of joie de vivre.

Ehly’s many friends tend to find her visiting new campus residents, cheering ill friends, or creating beautiful handmade goods through the Needle Arts Group. A number of charitable organizations throughout the Tri-City community have recognized her generous spirit throughout the years; she often knits and crochets blankets, scarves, and other beautiful handmade items for veterans, infants, and others in need.

Brother and sister Betty Ehly, 105, and Bill Fretz, soon to be 100, are active, community-minded, and inspirational models of successful aging.

This year will soon bring another special moment in Ehly’s life: On November 3, her brother, Bill Fretz — also a resident at the Masonic Home — will join her in the 100 Plus Club.

Though she helped raise Fretz in their hometown of Bourbon, Indiana, when the two were children, they lived apart for several decades before reuniting at the Masonic Home in their later years. And,

as Ehly jokingly complains: “He still doesn’t listen to me!”

What Bill does listen to is the tick-tock of passing time. Known as the “clock man” around campus, he finds great joy in repairing timepieces for his friends and neighbors, as well as keeping the Homes’ collection of antique grandfather clocks in extraordinary condition.

“Betty and Bill motivate us all to do more and to live well,” says Masonic Homes President and Chief Executive Officer Gary Charland. “They are a highlight of our community and a reminder that we are all capable of making a difference in others lives, regardless of our age.”

When asked for advice on aging well, Ehly’s response clearly speaks to her and her brother’s charitable nature. “I keep very busy,” she says. “I always have something to do. There’s always someone in need; someone who needs a friend or a hand.”

HARVESTFEST RECEIVES AUTUMN WITH FRIENDSHIP AND FUN

On Saturday, September 22, the Masonic Homes campus welcomed community members from throughout the Tri-City region to recognize the fall equinox with a festive campus-wide celebration.

Children of all ages enjoyed carnival games, a petting zoo, a miniature golf course, and a bounce house. Guests feasted on pulled pork sandwiches, frozen treats from Rita’s of Hayward, and a variety of other favorite festival treats.

A number of Masonic organizations and dignitaries were in attendance at the event, including three past grand masters of Masons in California, along with the current grand marshal and grand pursuivant. Masonic youth from California Rainbow for Girls and Northern California DeMolay volunteered their time and assistance during the event, serving food, manning games, and providing parking assistance.

I need a Forever Home

Terra is a 6 month old spayed female. She has a gorgeous brown tiger coat with bright orange accents. She's a little shy at first, but allows handling. She would like to find a quiet home with nice soft beds and good window views. Meet Terra at the Hayward Animal Shelter.

Terrance is 6 months old and is a shy guy who's still a little unsure about the world. With a little reassurance he lets his sweet side show, but he needs someone who will go slow with him and give him time to acclimate to a new home. Meet Terrance at the Hayward Animal Shelter.

Judge blocks US from ending protections for some immigrants

By ROBERT JABLON AND SUDHIN THANAWALA ASSOCIATED PRESS

A judge on Wednesday blocked the Trump administration from ending protections that allowed immigrants from four countries to live and work legally in the United States, saying the move would cause "irreparable harm and great hardship."

U.S. District Judge Edward Chen in San Francisco granted a request for a preliminary injunction against the administration's decision to discontinue temporary protected status for people from Sudan, Nicaragua, Haiti and El Salvador.

The judge said there is evidence that "President Trump harbors an animus against non-white, non-European aliens which influenced his ... decision to end the TPS designation."

The ruling cited Trump's 2015 campaign speech in which he characterized Mexican immigrants as drug dealers and rapists, his call to bar Muslims from entering the United States and his vulgar reference to African countries during a meeting about immigration at the White House in January.

It's the latest case in which judges have cited Trump's own comments to rule against his immigration policies. His words have been turned against him in lawsuits over decisions to separate families at the border, end legal protections for young immigrants and ban people from some Muslim-majority countries.

Temporary protected status is granted to countries ravaged by natural disasters or war and lets citizens of those countries remain in the U.S. until the situation improves back home. About 300,000 people have received those protections.

The ruling said the government failed to show the harm of continuing the 20-year-old program and that the plaintiffs established how uprooting those immigrants could hurt the local and national economy.

"Beneficiaries who have lived, worked, and raised families in the United States (many for more than a decade), will be subject to removal," Chen wrote.

Many have children who were born in the U.S. and may be faced with the choice of "bringing their children with them (and tearing them away from the only country and community they have known) or splitting their families apart," the ruling said.

Homeland Security officials said they could not comment on ongoing litigation.

The lawsuit from immigrants who have received the protections alleges the administration's decision was motivated by racism.

Chen questioned the administration's motives at a hearing last month. He cited a memo that he said suggested the decision was driven by the administration's America First policy.

He asked an attorney for the U.S. Justice Department to respond to plaintiffs' allegations that America First meant excluding immigrants who are not white.

Adam Kirschner, a government attorney, said the memo showed then-Homeland Security Acting Secretary Elaine Duke grappling with what to do about temporary protected status. Kirschner said input from the White House was expected on an issue like this, but the final decision was Duke's.

Chen repeated Trump's vulgar comment about African countries while responding that any influence the White House had on Duke could be relevant to the claims that the administration's moves were discriminatory.

Chen ruled Wednesday that evidence shows Duke's decision "may have been done in order to implement and justify a pre-ordained result desired by the White House."

El Salvador was designated for the program in 2001 after an earthquake, and the country's status was repeatedly renewed. The Trump administration announced in January that the program would expire for El Salvador in September 2019.

The administration concluded that El Salvador had received significant international aid to recover from the earthquake, and homes, schools and hospitals there had been rebuilt.

The Trump administration ended the program for the other three countries as well.

More than 200,000 immigrants could face deportation because of the change, and they have more than 200,000 American children who risk being uprooted from their communities and schools, according to plaintiffs in the lawsuit.

Gavilan defeats Ohlone: 25-20, 25-18, 25-16
October 12, 2018

Hailey Amaral led in kills (7) to go with 7 digs Katie Souza led in hitting percentage (.600) and assists (20) to go with 5 digs
Malia Silva led in digs (10)

Coach Penaflor's comments:

My main thought is... Gavilan is a solid team. I thought we played fine. We made errors here and there, which was to be expected when you're trying to be aggressive and match/contain the firepower that Gavilan has. The backrow play of sophomore libero Malia Silva, freshmen defensive specialist Elena Webster, sophomore defensive specialist Maggie Del Grande, and our other six rotation players really gave us chance and kept us in it. At the end of the day our offense couldn't figure out a way pass their big block and the defense that played behind and around them. Kudos to Gavilan, and we hope to have a better showing when we travel to their house.

Titans win a close, crucial battle

SUBMITTED AND PHOTOS BY MIKE HEIGHTCHEW

It is a very exciting time in Mission Valley Athletic League football. For example, an epic battle on October 13th between the John F. Kennedy Titans (Fremont) and Newark Cougars wasn't decided until the final seconds of play. Initially, it appeared that the Cougars were off to a commanding lead with a balanced pass and ground game, opening a 14-point lead in the first quarter. However, the Titans rallied in the second quarter and, with a two-point conversion, wrestled the lead away from the Cougars for a halftime score of 16-14.

A great interception and score by the Cougars' defense with 4:00 left in the third quarter led to a 21-16 Cougars lead and what could have been a turning point. But the Titans were not to be denied and fought a bruising ground battle, yard for yard, finally driving into the endzone with 2:43 left in the game and the 22-21 victory.

The Titans will next meet the Moreau Catholic Mariners (Hayward), both undefeated at 4-0 on October 19th.

SUBMITTED BY TIMOTHY HESS

The Newark Memorial Varsity boys and girls cross country teams both defeated Washington on October 11th. The Varsity Girls improved to 4-0, remaining in 1st place in the Mission Valley Athletic League (MVAL), defeating the Huskies by a score of 23-34. Jessica Novak was the Cougars’ lead runner and six other girls (Jennifer Tran, Becky Juarez, Aanchal Patel, Araceli Luna, Andrea Jauregui and Megha Joshi) contributed to the scoring for Newark.

The Varsity boys won by a score of 18-45 to improve their record to 3-1. Angel Martinez won the Varsity Boys race in 15:59 for 3 miles. Bring your family and a picnic and help to celebrate the pioneers and cowboys who settled Sunol. Get your inner cowboy on with hands-on ranching skills, live music by The Polka Cowboys and Tom Lucas Bluegrass Band, dancing, and old-fashioned games.

Sunol Regional Wilderness is located at the end of Geary Road off Calaveras Road about five miles south of I-680 and the town of Sunol. There’s a parking fee of $5 per vehicle; the Cowboy Hootenanny is free of charge. For information, call 510-544-3249.

Over at Coyote Hills Regional Park in Fremont, naturalist Dino Labiste continues his series of “Skills of the Past” programs with a session on shell pendant and necklace making from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturday, October 27. The group will make pine nut and clam shell necklaces, create an abalone pendant and twist string from dogbane fibers, all in the style of the Ohlone who inhabited Coyote Hills for millennia. The program is for ages 16 and older, and parent participation is required. There’s a fee of $10 per person ($12 for non-district residents). Registration is also required. For registration and information, call 888-327-2757. Select option 2 and refer to program number 22524.

Spider-man — naturalist Trent Pearce — plans another of his spider safaris from 3 to 4:30 p.m. on Saturday, October 20 at Briones Regional Park. Meet Trent at the Bear Creek staging area, which is on Bear Creek Road about five miles north of the intersection with San Pablo Dam Road in Orinda. The group will search for autumn arachnids in woods and fields. Heavy rain cancels. Trent’s program is free; there may be a parking fee if the kiosk is attended.

If you aren’t fond of spiders, there’s a bird-watching walk at Briones, too, from 9 a.m. to noon on Monday, October 22, led by naturalist Anthony Fisher. Meet Anthony at the top of Old Briones Road off Alhambra Valley Road south of Martinez.

For more information and directions on either program, call 510-544-2233.

The Wednesday Walkers are an informal group of hikers who go on naturalist-led explorations of various regional parks. Everyone’s welcome. Wear sturdy shoes, bring water and dress for the weather. Heavy rain cancels.

There’s a Wednesday Walk from 9:30 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. on October 24 at Tilden Regional Park near Berkeley, led by naturalist Trail Gail Broesder. This one is for ages eight and older. Meet Gail at Inspiration Point on Wildcat Canyon Road for a mostly flat hike with panoramic views of Mt. Diablo and San Francisco Bay. Call 510-544-2233.

Rose Hill Cemetery at Black Diamond Mines Regional Preserve in Antioch is the final resting place for many miners and their families who lived and worked there in the 19th century. Naturalist Eddie Willis will lead a hike to the cemetery from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. on Sunday, October 21, while telling stories of these people’s often hard lives. It’s half-mile, somewhat steep uphill walk.

Meet Eddie at the park’s uppermost parking lot, at the end of Somersville Road, about 3 miles south of Highway 4. There’s a parking fee of $5 per vehicle; the cemetery program is free. For information, call 888-327-2757, ext. 2750.

“Mammals of the Marsh” is the theme of a program from 2 p.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturday, October 20 at Big Break Regional Shoreline in Oakley. Stars of the show are the Delta’s furry inhabitants: river otters, beavers, minks and more. Big Break is at 69 Big Break Road off Oakley’s Main Street. For information, call 888-327-2757, ext. 3050.

There’s always something interesting to see and do in the regional parks. For complete listings, check out the web site, www.ebparks.org.

Titans Junior Varsity impressive in win

SUBMITTED AND PHOTOS BY MIKE HEIGHTCHEW

The John F. Kennedy Titans (Fremont) junior varsity put together an impressive win in their meeting with the Newark Cougars on October 13th. Taking control from start to finish, the Titans found the right combination of formations and play calls both on the ground and in the air. The final score, 42-0, was indicative of the Cougars’ frustration throughout the contest; it just wasn’t their day.

Man tries to remove bees with fireworks, burns down garage

ASSOCIATED PRESS

A Michigan man who tried to use fireworks to remove a bees’ nest from his garage ended up burning the building down instead. Local media reported that crews responding to the home in Grand Blanc Township on July 4 saw fireworks shooting into the sky from the burning garage. No one was injured. Grand Blanc Fire Chief Bob Burdette says the homeowner was trying to use a smoke bomb to get a bees’ nest out of the garage. Homeowner Mike Tingley says that while he’s sad about his garage, he’s happy the incident wasn’t worse. Tingley says “everyone is safe and that’s the main thing.”

OPINION

WILLIAM MARSHAK

Make A Difference

While some may decide to bob and weave when confronted by uncomfortable personal and economic choices, the stark reality is that all of us living on planet Earth are in trouble. The phrase “what goes around, comes around,” often used to express a sense of karma or ultimate revenge for mistreatment or bad deeds may be applicable to every one of us. Predictions of global crisis target the years 2030 – 2052 but those years are not a starting line to rectify or at least modify our behavior; that time was many years ago. However, absent those undone remedies, the time for action is now. A day of reckoning is swiftly approaching and just as the Terminator in the 1984 classic film returned from the future to wreak havoc, so too will our present actions have grave consequences on current and future generations.

As we approach Make A Difference Day, October 27, 2018, hopefully our efforts on that day will also signal a pledge to do our part to commit toward a bright future. Our economic, political and personal health depend on what we do today and in the immediate future. Just 10 days after Make A Difference Day, all United States citizens are asked to participate in a general election process, the backbone of our society. It is a time to make your voice heard without excuses. Important issues that affect our daily lives are at the forefront of political action and without participation by the electorate, these are left to an unsupervised system susceptible to control by others with hidden agendas, known as “dark money.”

Humanity has proven to be resourceful and innovative when confronted by seemingly insurmountable problems.

Technological brilliance in medicine, engineering, communication and industries of every kind have transformed our world in ways that were only imaginable in science fiction novels just a short while ago. We can apply this energy toward global, regional and local issues as well. At the local level, confronted by significant problems such as traffic, housing and the exorbitant cost of living, the same innovative approaches can be applied to solve current dilemmas.

While actions such as those of the Fremont City Council to divest from fossil fuel energy sources are laudable and necessary, it is essential for all of us to make a difference through the political process, ensuring the resolve to tackle “insurmountable” problems. Service on local boards, committees and commissions can harness personal skills, ingenuity and acumen to foster constructive ideas; even those who are not a member can attend a meeting or two to add their expertise to the mix. Who knows, you may be the one to make a critical difference in your community. Each city’s website lists its advisory bodies. Find one of interest and lend your knowledge. Make a Difference!

No matter what your political philosophy, it is disconcerting and frightening to hear the findings of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) presented in Hanoi, Viet Nam on October 10, 2018. Their conclusions and projections are not the result of an extremist or conspiratorial cabal, rather a respected group of international professionals who review and assess “the most recent scientific, technical and socio-economic information produced worldwide relevant to understanding of climate change.” [www.ipcc.ch].

There are 195 nation members of this United Nations organization founded in 1988, that collate the work of thousands of scientists from all over the world. This report is not a shoddy or poorly prepared document relying on anecdotal evidence. Three working groups, a task force and technical support unit are all involved in the final product. As stated by the organization, “Because of its scientific and intergovernmental nature, the IPCC embodies a unique opportunity to provide rigorous and balanced scientific information to decision makers.”

Grants raise public understanding of mental health

SUBMITTED BY JONATHAN BAIR

The City of Fremont is among 23 Northern California organizations recently awarded community health grants totaling $2 million for programs and initiatives to reduce stigma around mental illness. The city’s Human Services Department will use the funds to combat self-harm among young people in bi-cultural households.

The $2 million anti-stigma investment—the first part of a three-year initiative—will support community organizations in developing trainings, public forums, and awareness campaigns that are customized for specific populations.

Other grantees include school districts, youth and family services, and community coalitions that bring together a variety of stakeholders and agencies to serve people that historically shy away from getting mental health services

“Stigma is influenced by our cultural belief systems and it impacts our decisions to seek care, even in times of crisis,” said Yener Balan, MD, FAPA, executive director of behavioral health for Kaiser Permanente in Northern California. “Kaiser Permanente believes that a person’s culture should be at the center of their health care experience, not a barrier to getting the care they need.”

Annie Bailey, Administrator, City of Fremont Human Services Department, Youth & Family Services Division, said the grants will help the city’s Self Harm and Mental Health Stigma Reduction project to address the needs of youth being raised in bi-cultural households where there is significant stress related to acculturation and stigma associated with mental health issues, with its screening and treatment services for youth.

“Stigma around mental health issues and associated barriers to identification and treatment cause many people and particularly children to not get the support they need at an early age,” Bailey said. “This generous grant gives us the opportunity to help change community perception, increase awareness and knowledge, and ensure that youth are referred to necessary screening and treatment services.”

Addressing stigma is a major priority for Kaiser Permanente. The investments in Northern California are designed to complement the Find Your Words campaign the organization launched in 2016 with partners including the National Alliance on Mental Illness, National Suicide Prevention Lifeline, Crisis Text Line and Mental Health America.

Obituary

David Allan Bettencourt

David Allan Bettencourt entered into rest October 8, 2018 in Fremont, California. Born February 23, 1938 in San Jose, California to Anthony and Anna Bettencourt, he was 80 years old and a life long Fremont resident. David is survived by his loving wife, Fatima L. Bettencourt; Son, Mark A. Bettencourt and his wife, Sheila; Daughter, Amy A. McPartland and husband, David; four grandchildren, Saliyah, Michael, Kayla and Elysa.

David will be truly missed. He was funny, loved to share his goods from his garden, enjoyed delivering Portuguese sweet bread to neighbors, family and long distant friends. He loved good food and Portuguese festas and celebrations. David was very kind to the elderly and can always remember the events and shared stories with all the old timers.

He was a proud father and cared about his family and neighbors. He liked to follow sports such as baseball and football and loved supporting different ministries in church or the Portuguese clubs. If he was able to, he would help anyone and many people have been blessed because David shared his treasures.

David served in the Army National Guard of California with honesty and faithfulness. He also worked 10 years with Retail Clerks Union Local #870 and was a retired member of International Brotherhood of Teamsters Local #70. He also belonged to the Portuguese Social Club, the Portuguese fraternal Society of America, and Native Sons.

A vigil will be held Sunday, October 14, 2018 at 2:30 PM with visitation starting at 12:20 pm at Berge-Pappas-Smith Chapel of the Angels. Mass will be 11:00 AM, Monday, October 15, 2018 at Holy Spirit Catholic Church.

In lieu of flowers donations be made to Camp Taylor, a free medically supervised camp for children with heart disease, 8224 W. Grayson Road, Modesto, CA 95358.

Obituary

Shirley Schwab (Blacklock)

In loving memory of Shirley Schwab (Blacklock), a longtime resident of Fremont, who passed away peacefully on Friday, October 12. She was 86.

She was preceded in death by her husband Joe, a San Francisco native, and four sisters and two brothers. She is survived by her children: Bryan Schwab, Teri O'Callaghan (Jim), Jennifer Fields, Matt Schwab (Christine), and Joe Schwab Jr. (Anna), 11 grandchildren and five great grandchildren.

A native of Taft and former Pleasanton resident, Shirley was adored by all who knew her. We are all devastated and heartbroken by her passing, but her memory also fills us with joy.

Everybody loved Shirley. She had a sweet soul and the strength to raise five children. She was a longtime legal secretary, a great cook and an ardent Giants and 49ers fan.

Nothing made her happier than spending time with family and friends. With a natural warmth, quick wit and sharp mind, Shirley loved her family unconditionally.

She enjoyed talking sports and politics and always had something interesting to say. She was very well-read. Special thanks to Quail Garden Assisted Living in Livermore and Hope Hospice.

Shirley was also a constant companion with her husband, Joe, a former Pleasanton attorney and school board member, who preceded her in death 18 years ago. Now they can be reunited. Soulmates. Rest in Peace, Shirley. You lived a beautiful life.

Margaret “Maggie” Cosio

Resident of Fremont
March 26, 1932 – October 10, 2018

Margaret Garcia Cosio passed away peacefully in her sleep on October 10, 2018 at 86 years old. She was born on March 26, 1932 in Lindsay, California to Paula Villagran.

Margaret was often referred to as Maggie by family and close friends. Maggie was proud of her job as a Certified Nurse Assistant where she worked at Fremont Convalescent Hospital for 32 years. She loved taking care of people and her family, taking immense pride in keeping a spotless house. She loved cooking and feeding all those who entered her door. She greeted you with her memorable hugs and always asked how you were and if you were hungry. The answer to the latter was insignificant as she was going to feed you anyway. Maggie also enjoyed visiting all her family in Gilroy and Hollister, CA. If she was not visiting them on the weekends, she was calling her sisters and cousins on Saturday mornings.

Family was everything to her and she was like a mom to so many of us.

Maggie is preceded in death by her husband Pete Cosio who died in 1985 and her two loving sisters Theresa Vargas and Josie Dominguez.

She is survived by her sister Mona Quintana of Santa Clara, her children Loretta Reyes of Fremont, Diane (Don) Torres of Brentwood, Pete (Joy) Cosio of Modesto and Ron Cosio of Fremont. Her grandchildren, Don Torres, Tricia Muñoz, Daniel Torres, David Torres, Janelle Valdez, Ronnie Cosio, Vanessa Cosio and Melissa Cosio. Her great-grandchildren Jacob and Jaina Torres, Che and Isabel Muñoz, Stella and Eva Torres, Emma, Cameron and Louis Torres, Nevaeh and Catalina Valdez, Ronnie and Ava Cosio. She also has countless family members from in-laws, cousins to nephews, nieces and friends that will miss her dearly as well.

Visitation will be held from 09:00 AM to 11:00 AM, Thursday, October 18, 2018 with a Chapel Service at 11:00 AM, Fremont Memorial Chapel, 3723, Peralta Blvd., Fremont. Burial to follow immediately at Holy Sepulchre Cemetery, 26320 Mission Blvd., Hayward.

Social Security checks will grow in 2019 as inflation rises

By RICARDO ALONSO-ZALDIVAR
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tens of millions of Social Security recipients and other retirees will get a 2.8 percent boost in benefits next year as inflation edges higher. It's the biggest increase most retired baby boomers have gotten.

Following a stretch of low inflation, the cost-of-living adjustment, or COLA, for 2019 is the highest in seven years. It amounts to $39 a month for the average retired worker, according to estimates released Thursday by the Social Security Administration.

The COLA affects household budgets for about one in five Americans, including Social Security beneficiaries, disabled veterans and federal retirees. That's about 70 million people, enough to send ripples through the economy.

Unlike most private pensions, Social Security has featured inflation protection since 1975. Beneficiaries also gain from compounding since COLAs become part of their underlying benefit, the base for future cost-of-living increases.

Nonetheless many retirees and their advocates say the annual adjustment is too meager and doesn't reflect higher health care costs for older people. Federal budget hawks take the opposite view, arguing that increases should be smaller to reflect consumers' penny-pinching responses when costs go up.

With the COLA, the estimated average monthly Social Security payment for a retired worker will be $1,461 a month next year.

“For more recent retirees, the 2019 COLA will be the largest increase they have gotten to date,” said policy analyst Mary Johnson, of the nonpartisan Senior Citizens League.

But retiree Danette Deakin, of Bolivar, Missouri, said she feels as though her cost-of-living adjustment is already earmarked for rising expenses.

Her Medigap insurance for costs not covered by Medicare is going up, and so is her prescription drug plan. She expects her Medicare Part B premium for outpatient care will also up.

“It isn't enough of an increase that it takes care of all of the increases from health care, plus rent – our rent gets increased every year,” said Deakin, 70, who worked in the finance department at a boat dealership.

Health care costs eat up about one-third of her income, she estimated.

“I appreciate the COLA adjustment, and in no way am I complaining,” Deakin added. “It's just that every single thing you can talk about goes up. It doesn't go down.”

By law, the COLA is based on a broad index of consumer prices. Advocates for seniors claim the general index doesn't accurately capture the rising prices they face, especially for health care and housing. They want the government to switch to an index that reflects the spending patterns of older people.

“What the COLA should be based on is still a very real issue,” said William Arnone, CEO of the National Academy of Social Insurance, a research organization not involved in lobbying. “Older people spend their money in categories that are going up at a higher rate than overall inflation.”

The COLA is now based on the Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers, or CPI-W, which measures price changes for food, housing, clothing, transportation, energy, medical care, recreation and education.

Advocates for the elderly would prefer the CPI-E, an experimental measure from the government that reflects costs for households headed by a person age 62 or older. It usually outpaces general inflation, though not always.

COLAs can be small or zero, as was the case in several recent years. People often blame the president when that happens. However, the White House can't dictate the COLA, which is calculated by nonpolitical experts.

President Donald Trump has repeatedly vowed not to cut Social Security or Medicare. But the government is running $1 trillion deficits, partly as a result of the Republican tax cut bill Trump signed. Mounting deficits will revive pressure to cut Social Security, advocates for the elderly fear.

“The revenue loss in the tax bill contributes to much higher deficits and debt, and that is where the threats begin to come in,” said David Certner, policy director for AARP. “Social Security, and in particular the COLAs, have been the target.”

Former President Barack Obama floated – but ultimately dropped – a proposal called chained CPI, which would have slowed annual COLAs to reflect penny-pinching by consumers. Behind it is the idea that when the price of a particular good or service rises, people often respond by buying less or switching to a lower-cost alternative.

Because of compounding, smaller COLAs would have a dramatic effect over time on the federal budget and Social Security finances. But if inflation continues to rise, proposals to scale back cost-of-living adjustments carry greater political risk.

Beyond federal budget woes, Social Security faces its own long-term financial problems and won't be able to pay full benefits starting in 2034.

Social Security is financed by a 12.4 percent tax on wages, with half paid by workers and the other half paid by employers. Next year, the maximum amount of earnings subject to the Social Security tax will increase from $128,400 to $132,900.

About 177 million workers pay Social Security taxes. Of those, nearly 12 million workers will pay more in taxes because of the increase in taxable wages, according to the Social Security Administration.

In addition to retirees, other Social Security beneficiaries include disabled workers and surviving spouses and children. Low-income disabled and elderly people receiving Supplemental Security Income also get a COLA.

Handcuffed man steals police patrol car

SUBMITTED BY HAYWARD PD

A 40-year-old man was arrested late Tuesday afternoon in Hayward after he apparently slipped out of handcuffs while in the back of a San Jose Police Department patrol car earlier in the day and drove the car to Hayward.

The incident started at about 5:23 a.m. when San Jose police officers responded to a report of a suspicious vehicle in the 0-100 block of Holger Way in San Jose. The reporting party told police that a GPS in a stolen semi-truck showed the truck was parked on Holger Way.

Arriving officers found the truck and a man, later identified by police as Andrew Trujillo, inside the truck's cab and took him into custody. Trujillo was handcuffed and placed in the back caged area of a patrol car while police continued their investigation. Somehow, Trujillo slipped out of the handcuffs and fled in the police car. With the help of Hayward Police Department officers, the patrol car was eventually located on the 23000 block of Clawiter Road in Hayward.

Andrew Trujillo

Just before 5 p.m. San Jose Police officers re-arrested Trujillo in Hayward on the original charges and for stealing the patrol car. Police noted that all the police car's weapons were accounted for.

California train agency fined $650,000 for 2 worker deaths

BY PAUL ELIAS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Regulators fined the San Francisco Bay Area's transit agency $650,000 on Thursday for safety failures that led a commuter train to strike and kill two workers inspecting track five years ago during a union strike.

The California Public Utilities Commission also placed the Bay Area Rapid Transit agency on three years of probation. The commission said the fine would double if BART commits any safety violations during that period.

BART spokeswoman Alicia Trost said the agency was reviewing the decision, which nearly triples a $220,000 fine ordered by a judge last year. BART and staff members of the commission's Safety and Enforcement Division both appealed the judge's order to the five-member commission.

Commissioner Liane M. Randolph said regulators increased the fine because the safety failures were "egregious" and BART's response to the investigation was inadequate.

"BART's degree of wrongdoing, particularly the safety rule violations discussed above, are most troubling," Randolph wrote in the decision.

Randolph noted that BART was more than 16 months late in producing its accident report and its "corrective-action plan" was only two pages long and submitted four years after the accident.

Trost said BART has spent $2 million upgrading its safety barrier and plans an additional $4 million in improvements. She said the agency has overhauled its safety policies since the accident.

Laurence Daniels, 66, and Christopher Sheppard, 58, were killed in 2013 while inspecting a track east of San Francisco. At the time, the agency was scrambling to restore limited service during a workers strike.

The train that struck the workers was part of a training exercise to teach managers how to drive in case of a prolonged worker walkout. The strike ended after four days.

The judge found that a trainee with no direct supervision in the cab was driving the train. The driver slammed on the emergency brake and tried to hit the button to sound the train's horns but instead pressed a button that controls the doors.

The transit agency was using a safety procedure called "simple approval," in which track inspectors were responsible for their own safety and determined they could clear the track within 15 seconds of an approaching train.

BART has since eliminated that policy. BART trains are now required to stop if a worker is within 6 feet of the track. BART says it has improved communications between drivers, track inspectors and the control center.

The workers had their backs to the train when they were struck in violation of agency safety rules. One member of inspection crews is always supposed to be watching for trains.

The California Occupational Safety and Health Administration fined BART $210,000 in 2014.

In addition, BART has paid the family of Daniels $300,000 to settle a wrongful-death lawsuit. BART said Sheppard's family settled a worker's compensation claim, but Trost said she didn't know the amount paid.

Tossed net captures space junk in orbit-cleanup experiment

BY MARCIA DUNNAP AEROSPACE WRITER

A tossed net has managed to capture space junk in a demonstration of ways to clean up orbit. In the British-led experiment, a big net was cast from a mini satellite Sunday. The net successfully wrapped around its target, an inflated structure that had just been deployed as part of the test. The distance covered nearly 20 feet (6 meters). A harpoon will be tested in a similar manner next year.

The University of Surrey's Guglielmo Aglietti said Thursday the target was spinning faster than expected. But he says that made the test even more realistic. The objective is to show ways of removing debris from orbit, which is cluttered with old rocket and spacecraft parts.

The experiment was deployed into orbit in June from the International Space Station.

A VISIT TO THE HAYWARD FAULT 150 YEARS IN THE MAKING!

MATH SCIENCE NUCLEUS

On October 21, 1868 there was a destructive earthquake in the San Francisco Bay area on what would eventually be called the Hayward Fault.

some fun learning about the earth under your feet. Hear about the history and future of the Hayward Fault which runs directly under Central Park on its way north through some of the most heavily populated parts of the Bay Area. The Math Science Nucleus in collaboration with the City of Fremont and the U.S. Geological with first responders, learn how to prepare your home and family for a major quake, and take a walking tour led by experienced geologists along the Earthquake Trail. Informational booths and displays will be located around the Earthquake Exhibit, the songs about things that shake us up. Quite a sight against the backdrop of the East Bay Hills, created by our own Hayward Fault. Want to experience the real thing without risking property, environment and life? The must see, or feel, event is the “Big

In commemoration of this event, the City of Fremont, Math Science Nucleus, U.S. Geological Survey, and California Geological Survey are hosting a special anniversary to educate the public on the power of the Hayward Fault. If you think the Candle Lighters Ghost House is scary, scientists from the U.S. Geological Survey warn that in a worst-case scenario, a major quake along the Hayward Fault could make the special effects movie “San Andreas” pale in comparison. They give a one-in-three chance that a 6.7 quake or greater can occur on the Hayward fault within the next 30 years! But not to worry, come down to Fremont’s Central Park on Sunday, October 21 and have

Survey has created a one-of-a-kind exhibit. You can actually see damage caused by the Hayward Fault as it slowly “creeps” under the Fremont Community Center. The City unknowingly built their first building in 1962 on the fault and, over the years, it has grown to a 1-2-inch offset. After 60 years, the building is now open for people to observe the effect of creep. This free event, dubbed “Haywired” by the U.S. Geological Survey, will not only highlight the Fremont Earthquake Exhibit and new self-guided tour, but offer a full day of activities. State Senator Bob Wieckowski and Mayor Lily Mei of Fremont will start the events with a ribbon cutting of new Earthquake Exhibit signs. Meet and talk

In addition, there will be a Kid Zone in the Fremont Community Center, designed for ages 4 - 10 with games and other hands-on earthquake-oriented activities, sponsored by Math Science Nucleus. A highlight will be the “Shaker Table” by Bharat Kathi from Boy Scout Troop 125 and a student at Valley Christian School. As an Eagle Scout project, Bharat engineered a table upon which children can build a structure to see if it is earthquake resistant. Can you construct a building that will resist the shaker? The automation control is programmable for up to four different earthquake scenarios: light shaking, moderate to heavy, and extreme, violent shaking movement. The simulator can create vertical thrust in excess of 12”; capable of front to back motion, side to side motion, corner to corner, and around the world! Our local Fremont Firefighters Association will cook up hot dogs and give out water. US appeals court rules for bartenders, waiters in tip fight

BY SUDHIN THANAWALA
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Restaurants must pay waiters and bartenders minimum wage when they are engaged in tasks such as cleaning toilets that are unrelated to their main jobs and do not offer tips, a divided U.S. appeals court ruled Tuesday. At issue in the decision by an 11-judge panel of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals was a federal law that allows an employer to pay workers who receive tips as little as $2.13 an hour as long as their tips earn them minimum wage. Employers cannot use that tip credit when the workers are engaged in unrelated tasks that don't pay tips, the panel ruled in a 9-2 decision. Employers also can't use the tip credit for tasks related to bartending or serving such as preparing coffee if employees spend a substantial part of the work week on them. The impact of the ruling appeared limited. Seven states require that employers pay workers the state minimum wage on top of any tips they receive, according to the labor department's wage and hour division. Six of those states fall under the 9th Circuit's jurisdiction: California, Alaska, Montana, Nevada, Oregon and Washington. Writing for the majority in Tuesday's ruling, Judge Richard Paez said tips were intended as “a gift to the server, as opposed to a cost-saving benefit to the employer.” A broader use of the tip credit would allow employers to underpay bartenders and wait staff and put off hiring staff such as janitors who don't receive tips and therefore must get paid minimum wage by employers, Paez said. The ruling upheld a regulation by the U.S. Department of Labor and subsequent guidance that limited employers' use of the tip credit. It also revived lawsuits against restaurant chains by 14 bartenders and servers. The defendants include P.F. Chang's China Bistro and J. Alexander's. Emails to attorneys for J. Alexander's and P.F. Chang's were not immediately returned. One of the plaintiffs, Alec Marsh, said he spent almost half his work week at a J. Alexander's in Phoenix on tasks that did not produce tips such as cutting fruit and stocking ice. The restaurant paid Marsh an hourly tip credit wage of $4.65 per hour in 2012 and $4.80 per hour in 2013 in accordance with Arizona law, according to the 9th Circuit ruling. Marsh argued in his lawsuit that the company was entitled to pay him that wage while he worked as a server, but not when he performed the other tasks. A U.S. judge in Arizona threw out Marsh's lawsuit. The 9th Circuit overturned that decision and sent the case back to the judge for additional hearings.

Instant divorce

AP WIRE SERVICE

India's government on Wednesday approved an ordinance to implement a top court ruling striking down the Muslim practice that allows men to instantly divorce. The government decision came after it failed to get approval of Parliament a year after the court ruled that the practice of triple “talaq” violated the constitutional rights of Muslim women.

Most of the 170 million Muslims in India are Sunnis governed by the Muslim Personal Law for family matters and disputes. The laws include allowing men to divorce by simply uttering the Arabic word “talaq,” or divorce, three times – and not necessarily consecutively, but at any time, and by any medium, including telephone, text message or social media post. The government will have another six months to get Parliament's approval for the ordinance to become law. But in the meantime, suspects can be prosecuted using the ordinance. Law Minister Ravi Shankar Prasad said that nearly 22 countries, including neighboring Pakistan and Bangladesh, have banned the practice and appealed to the opposition to approve the Muslim Women Protection of Rights on Marriage Bill. India's Muslim Law Board had told the court that while they considered the practice wrong, they opposed any court intervention and asked that the matter be left to the community. But several progressive Muslim activists decried the law board's position. After the Supreme Court verdict, Prime Minister Narendra Modi's government introduced a bill criminalizing the practice and it was approved in December by the lower house of Parliament, where his party commands a majority. But it couldn't get the approval of the upper house, where the opposition controls the majority of seats. The main opposition Congress party is opposing a three-year prison sentence for the offenders and wants a parliamentary committee to discuss the issue to reach a consensus. It favors a lesser sentence. In India, triple talaq has continued with the protection of laws that allow Muslim, Christian and Hindu communities to follow religious laws in matters like marriage, divorce, inheritance and adoption. While most Hindu personal laws have been overhauled and codified over the years, Muslim laws have been left to religious authorities and left largely untouched.

Measure E highlights; Lila Bringhurst Elementary School update

SUBMITTED BY KENNETH BLACKSTONE

The Fremont Unified School District Board of Education took the following action on agenda items related to the Measure E Bond Program at the Oct. 10, 2018 meeting:

- Received the quarterly financial status update on the 2014 Measure E Bond Program. Projects are proceeding according to the timeline and budgets outlined in the implementation plan, or as subsequently revised by Board action. As of June 30, 2018, $117,318,507 of Board-approved projects have been completed, with $351,575,389 in projects in progress.
- Received information on the estimated costs of a future General Obligation Bond and authorized staff to issue requests for proposals from a feasibility consultant, polling consultant and bond counsel. These are just partial services needed for a future bond. Still to be considered are architectural services to potentially update the Long Range Facilities Plan and the cost of the election with the County Registrar.

- Authorized staff to amend the facilities lease agreement with McCarthy Building Companies, Inc. in the amount of $33,839,612 for completion of the work of improvement of Bid Package 003 for the new construction project at Horner Middle School (HMS). This bid package includes mechanical, electrical, plumbing, exterior building skin, glazing, framing, drywall and plaster. The total project costs for HMS is $67,523,185. This amount was competitively negotiated during the Lease-leaseback proposal review. The work is subject to the provisions of Project Stabilization Agreement.

In addition, while not a Measure E project, the Board approved a school mascot [Blazers] logo and colors for the new Lila Bringhurst Elementary School, opening next fall. The logo selected features a child-friendly futuristic train with lightning bolts that are subtle connections to nearby high-tech companies and BART, while paying homage to the railroad of Pioneer days.

Challenge Statements to Startup Community

Since announcing the City’s participation in the 2019 Startup in Residence (STIR) cohort in August, the Fremont Public Works Department has identified and outlined two important traffic-related challenges that it will look to the startup community to help solve.

Fremont’s first challenge statement calls for a traffic incident communication tool that will proactively facilitate communication between City staff and roadway users who travel on Fremont roadways to mitigate problems before serious delays and bottlenecks occur.

The second seeks a solution to modernize and streamline the issuance of transportation permits and enforcement of truck routes and regulations. The requested platform would feature an automated approval/rejection process of proposed truck travel route, shared permit database with the Fremont Police Department, and integrated online payment system. Overall, Fremont’s transportation-oriented mission is to serve as a national model of how an auto-oriented suburb can evolve into a sustainable and modern city. Interested startups looking to partner with the City to design solutions to the above challenges may find more information and apply at www.Fremont.gov/STiR-Challenge1 and www.Fremont.gov/STiRChallenge2. The selected startup(s) will embark on a 16-week program to co-develop a solution with the City that will create real and sustainable impact.

To learn more about the City’s announcement to participate in the 2019 “Startup in Residence” Program, visit www.Fremont.gov/STiR.

Resolution to Divest Fully from Fossil Fuel Sector

At the October 9, 2018, Fremont City Council meeting, the Council adopted a resolution to divest fully from the fossil fuel sector and support the transition to clean, sustainable, renewable energy. The resolution, as recommended by the City’s Environmental Sustainability Commission and supported by the Human Relations Commission, commits Fremont to adopting policies to ban future investment in the fossil fuel sector. It also commits the City to a fast and just transition to 100 percent renewable energy by 2050 at the latest, discouraging installations of new fossil fuel infrastructure, instead adopting regulations that will support the transition to clean energy.

Such actions align with existing City policies and programs to reduce the impact of climate change through clean energy investments. Notable efforts include Bay Area SunShares (www.Fremont.gov/Sunshares), a limited-time offering for residents of discounted rooftop solar installations and zero emissions vehicles purchases, and the City’s 2017 Mandatory Solar Ordinance (www.Fremont.gov/GreenBuilding) requiring solar in all new residential construction projects. The City is also updating its Climate Action Plan to establish a new greenhouse gas emissions reduction target that will align with statewide goals of carbon neutrality by the year 2045 at the latest. Fremont residents are encouraged to explore actions they can take at home on their own to reduce fossil fuel consumption and make Fremont a healthier place to live, work, and play by visiting the Fremont Green Challenge (www.FremontGreenChallenge.org).

$28.6 million awarded for affordable housing

SUBMITTED BY CITY OF HAYWARD

The Hayward City Council voted to appropriate $28.6 million to support development of 259 apartments for people with low and extremely low incomes and who are homeless.

The Council allocated the funds to support three projects—two proposed by nonprofit developer EAH Housing, Inc., of San Rafael, and one by Abode Services, of Fremont, a nonprofit agency specializing in securing permanent homes for individuals and families experiencing homelessness.

The EAH projects, Matsya Family Villas, 22648 2nd St., and Mission Senior Paradise, 28000 Mission Blvd., would create 57 apartments for low-income and extremely low-income households, and 76 apartments for independent seniors who are low-income and extremely low-income.

The Abode Services project, at 2595 Depot Road, would create 126 micro apartments for low-income and extremely low-income people with on-site coordination of mental-health, addiction, employment and other social and support services. To be developed by Abode Services development affiliate Allied Housing, the project would reserve 31 units for homeless people and 31 for people living with mental-health disabilities.

By prioritizing housing for people experiencing homelessness, the funding award addresses a need identified in the most recent point-in-time count of homelessness in Alameda County. According to a January 2017 study, there are estimated to be more than 300 unsheltered homeless people in Hayward—primarily single adults, many with disabling conditions, who are living outside of or without access to even an emergency shelter.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Niles Gateway, invitation or fortress?

I was really impressed with a letter written to the City in response to the Final EIR [Environmental Impact Report] questions by our local historian, David Kiehn. With his permission, I have reprinted a portion of it here: deni caster “Niles is characterized by small houses with front yards, backyards and driveways. All of this would be ignored in the 82 townhomes proposed by the Niles Gateway project as it wants to eliminate the site’s inclusion in the Historic Overlay District and change it to Planned District.

The Gateway project would therefore ignore the wishes of the Niles Design Guidelines and Regulations, creating a project totally out of character with the historic nature of the community. The townhouses arranged as a series of “6 Plex” units, again, are totally out of character, style and size with the residential units within the Niles Historic Overlay District. These Gateway units discourage the social interaction between neighbors, as in the rest of Niles, by eliminating yards and driveways and substituting a two-car garage door so that residents are obligated to drive into the house without setting foot outdoors. These units are, in effect, fortresses by design, barring outside interaction. “Gateway” is an inadvertent description to this design, as it might as well be a gated community, because its fortress appearance discourages interaction with the whole of the Niles community.

These townhouses are not an invitation to live in Niles or be part of the community. This Medium Density proposal is instead designed to set it apart from the community, just the opposite of what is directed in the Niles Design Guidelines and Regulations. By removing the development out of the Niles Historic Overlay District to Planned District, this project becomes counter to what Niles is all about, an historic district that prides itself in its heritage. Better to keep this 6.07-acre parcel as open space or a park until a better use is decided upon.

One better use would be to divide up the site into lots as originally outlined in the 1888 Southern Pacific plat and infill with historic homes and commercial building from the rest of Fremont that the city deems “expendable” in their original locations. Cities like San Jose, Oakland and Los Angeles have set aside an area for historic buildings that would otherwise be demolished to create a village of vintage structures. This 6.07-acre parcel could be used for such a location as the City of Fremont condemns other buildings that currently exist, but are threatened by destruction. It would fit in nicely with the Niles Historic Overlay District and be an asset to the community, rather than a liability that the Niles Gateway Mixed-Use Project would bring as designed.

As for the “Creative-Retail-Artist-Flex-Tenancy” (CRAFT) units Valley Oak Partners propose, it bears no relation in design to anything in Niles, and again is at odds with the spirit, size, scale and character of the community. It’s as if an historic, beautifully-preserved 1903 Wright Flyer aircraft was purported to be the same in style, size and character as a SpaceX rocket. Nothing wrong with a SpaceX, just don’t pretend it fits into a community shaped in the early 1900s. It appears that Valley Oak Partners has no desire to create a design that fits our community, but is instead intent on reaping as many millions as it can in the space available. Do it elsewhere. Niles can do better.”

Profitability Meets Sustainability in Fremont-Based Sonic Manufacturing Facility

BY DEREK HANSEN, CEO AND CO-FOUNDER OF MYNT SYSTEMS

Late last year, the California Public Utilities Commission set an ambitious goal for all new commercial buildings to be zero net energy (ZNE) by 2030. Fortunately, advances in technology have made the transition to ZNE both eco-friendly and profitable.

Keeping with their commitment to innovation, sustainability, and advanced manufacturing, the City of Fremont gladly embraced this challenge and became home to Silicon Valley’s first retrofitted ZNE manufacturing facility. During the second half of 2017, Fremont-based Sonic Manufacturing, one of the largest electronic manufacturing factories in the Bay Area, received sustainable modifications designed and built by Mynt Systems. Their experience serves as a prime example of how manufacturing can be clean and going green can be profitable.

Without interrupting Sonic’s manufacturing operations, Mynt Systems organized and executed the three-phased solar energy and efficiency remodel for the 85,000 square foot manufacturing facility owned by Sharp Development. After the third phase was completed in December 2017, the retrofitted facility sported new HVAC equipment, LED lighting, window film, a TPO Cool Roof, and 1,030 kW of solar on the roof and carports. The investment for these upgrades totaled $3.5 million with simple payback possible in just under five years.

While Sonic Manufacturing and Sharp Development’s eagerness to reduce their carbon footprint is one intriguing element of this project, ZNE retrofitting offers an additional assortment of economic benefits to building owners and tenants alike. Most notably, Sharp Development is now eligible to receive a $1.1 million tax credit, $6 million of added value to the property, and $12.2 million in accumulated savings over 25 years. Sonic Manufacturing, the building’s tenant, will also benefit from the retrofitting, saving $421,000 annually in utility costs and gaining an improved working environment. Additionally, these energy savings are equivalent to taking 95 million gallons of gasoline off the road. We like to refer to these successes as “triple bottom line” results, as they positively impact the planet, profit, and people involved.

Intrigued by the multitude of positive effects stemming from this project, IndustryWeek’s Senior Editor Adrienne Selko penned an article recognizing Mynt Systems, Sonic Manufacturing, Sharp Development, and the City of Fremont as leaders in the ZNE movement.

Adrienne commends Mynt Systems’ replicable model that reduces energy usage while simultaneously benefiting the building’s tenant and owner. By working in conjunction with both parties, the model gives building owners the opportunity to convert their facilities to ZNE without disrupting tenants’ manufacturing productivity.

The Fremont Economic Development team played an important role in this initiative. Setting the pace for the green revolution, the City of Fremont provided fast-track permitting throughout this process. Usually, obtaining permits for remodels of this scale could take anywhere from six month to two years. However, Fremont’s process made the phased remodel possible to complete in a timely manner so that Sonic Manufacturing and Sharp Development could capitalize on the economic benefits as soon as possible.

For a comprehensive outline of these triple bottom line results for all parties involved, take a look at the following infographic that details the benefits of this 100 percent clean-powered manufacturing facility.

Joining together to make a difference

FRED FOX

Looking for a way to help the community grow and strengthen? Bay Area residents will have an opportunity to give something back to the community by participating in one of many “Make a Difference Day” activities scheduled for Saturday, October 27.

Make a Difference Day began in 1992 when USA Weekend Magazine proposed that readers take advantage of the extra day in the leap year to do something to help their communities. The leap-year framework was later shed; Make a Difference Day has become an annual event galvanizing people from across the country to help their neighborhoods and those in need.

From the beginning, Fremont has embraced Make a Difference Day with events throughout the city’s schools and civic programs. “Our City has always considered Make A Difference Day to be a priority,” said Fremont’s Make a Difference Day Project Manager

Christine Beitsch. “The annual Make a Difference Day - sponsored by the City of Fremont Human Relations Commissions, State Senator Bob Wieckowski, State Assemblyman Kansan Chu, County Supervisor Scott Haggerty, Mayor Lily Mei, Councilmember Raj Salwan and CityServe’s Compassion Network - is an opportunity for Fremont residents to serve their communities in activities such as sprucing up parks and community gardens, beautification projects at participating local schools, yard projects at mobile home parks, trail maintenance, writing thank you notes to veterans, serving the homeless, gathering warm winter clothing for those in need and much more.”

Beitsch also serves as the Founding Executive Director of the Compassion Network, a non-profit faith-based organization which serves Fremont, Union City, and Newark residents. The organization has helped over 21,000 people of all faiths, economic and ethnic groups. Their website provides a list of 31 churches and 27 other organizations with whom it partners to help bring volunteers together. Collaborations with many of these organizations are through the Fremont Family Resource Center.

Hayward will also see its share of Make a Difference Day events including a beautification event at Tennyson High School where, according to the City website residents will have “an opportunity to make a real and significant difference in their neighborhoods, connect with their neighbors, qualify for community service hours and learn about money-saving Green City programs.”

In Milpitas, the Lions Club, which has sponsored Make a Difference Day events in the past featuring health screenings and police canine demonstrations, will be supporting the Pumpkins in the Park event scheduled for October 27. Volunteer positions are available. Contact the Lions at (408) 430-7830 or visit <http://www.milpitaslions.com>. HAF Celebrates 15 Years of Advocacy

SUBMITTED BY

SAMIR KALRA

On September 30, an audience of nearly 300 attendees including Hindu American community and business leaders, interfaith partners, and elected officials joined the Hindu American Foundation (HAF) in celebrating 15 years of advocacy at its annual Silicon Valley Gala in Milpitas.

The Foundation’s signature event in California kicked off with an engaging and interactive social hour, featuring art exhibits by world-renowned artist Karthik Trivedi, whose artwork has adorned the White House and Buckingham Palace, and up and coming high school artist Chinmayi Shukla.

The formal program opened with a beautiful rendition of a famous Hindi bhajan (Hindu devotional song), Maili Chaadar, by UC Berkeley freshman and co-founder of Raaga^N, Geeta Shankar, and featured action-packed and inspiring dance performances by Mona Khan Company.

In addition to musical and dance performances, keynote speaker, Dr. Jeffery D. Long, enthralled the audience with a lively discussion on the Hindu themes interwoven in the iconic Star Wars movie series.

Other featured guest speakers included the Honorable Waytha Moorthy, Malaysian Senator and Minister for National Unity and Social Wellbeing, who traveled all the way from Malaysia, and Ohio State Representative Niraj Antani, the youngest elected official in the Ohio State House. Both speakers highlighted the important advocacy work of HAF.

They were joined by a number of government officials (and staff members), who similarly celebrated HAF’s advocacy work by presenting commendations, including:

- Bob Wieckowski, CA State Senate (10th Senate District)
- Steven Glazer, CA State Senate (7th Senate District) (wasn’t able to attend in person, but sent a commendation)
- Bill Quirk, CA State Assembly-member (20th Assembly District)
- Kansen Chu, CA State Assemblymember (25th Assembly District) and Daisy Chu
- Angela Nguyen, Office of Congresswoman Zoe Lofgren (19th Congressional District)

Hilltop Gala supports new Academic Core Buildings

ARTICLE AND PHOTOS COURTESY OF OHLONE COLLEGE

Ohlone College invites you to the 2nd annual "Hilltop Gala" on Saturday, November 3. Join our community and Legacy Sponsor Fremont Bank for the celebration of the year as we come together to raise funds for our new Academic Core Buildings.

"We are really excited about this year's event as the Academic Core Buildings are coming to fruition on our campus," says Dr. Gari Browning, President and Superintendent of the Ohlone

Community College District. "The support that the community shows by attending this event is a testament to the affinity they feel for Ohlone and for the important role we play in serving the Tri-Cities area."

Enjoy hosted wine and signature cocktails and select from entrée offerings of mesquite wood roasted tri-tip, roasted ginger and miso crusted Alaskan halibut, or vegetarian polenta cakes with grilled vegetables. The event will be hosted by special guest emcee Roberta Gonzales, star of the KPIX 5 travel show "Where's Roberta?"

Bring your dancing shoes for a night of fun where you'll move to the sound of classic California soul and funk performed by the Big Blue Soul Revue! The evening wraps up with a live auction to bid on one-of-a-kind goods, vacation packages, and more. You won't want to miss it!

Proceeds from the Hilltop Gala go directly to furnishing the new Academic Core Buildings with the latest technology and equipment to give the next generation of Ohlone College students a modern learning environment where they can thrive. Scheduled to open in 2019, the Academic Core consists of a new Science Center, Arts Building, and Learning Commons, and is set to elevate higher education for the Tri-Cities community and students for years to come.

Individual and table tickets are on sale now through Monday, October 22. Sponsorship packages are also available. This event is black tie optional and includes free valet parking in the Ohlone South parking structure off of Pine Street.

RSVP now and save your seat to watch the next chapter of Ohlone College unfold. Visit www.ohlone.edu/hilltopgala for details or call (510) 659-6020 for information.
