9/11: As the decades pass, the act of remembering evolves

AP WIRE SERVICE By TED ANTHONY AP NATIONAL WRITER

SHANKSVILLE, Pa. (AP), Aug 28 - The hills in Shanksville seem to swallow sound. The plateau that Americans by the millions ascend to visit the Flight 93 National Memorial, to think of those who died in this southwestern Pennsylvania expanse, sits just above much of the landscape, creating a pocket of quiet precisely where quiet needs to be.

It is a place that encourages the act of remembering.

Twenty years have passed since United Flight 93 made its final descent, chaos unfolding aboard as buildings burned 300 miles to the east. Nearly one-fifth of the country is too young to remember firsthand

Kintsugi: Picking up the pieces

"There is a crack, a crack in everything

That's how the light gets in." - Leonard Cohen from the song "Anthem" Curtis Kotake, a Newark resident, has been practicing an art form known as Kintsugi. It involves taking broken pieces of pottery and putting them back together. To Kotake, the art form creates deeper meaning - "Let's gather up the pieces and move forward, mending what is broken and fixing it at the broken lines, relays a powerful message about developing resilience." Teen-led backpack drive helps students get back to school

SUBMITTED BY LEONA CHEN PHOTOS COURTESY OF JESSICA CHENG

Over eighteen months into a global pandemic, a team of five Fremont high school juniors from American, Irvington and Washington high schools are ready to finally get back to campus — and looking out for those who may have a hard time doing so. Conscious that some families might struggle with the financial burden of the back-to-school season, including purchasing backpacks and mandatory supplies, particularly after the challenges of the last year, the team (Ariel Chang, Athena Chew, Hope Lin, Kira Lau and lead organizer Jessica Cheng) made it their mission to help students access crucial resources for the school year ahead.

Their plan included a backpack drive, held in partnership with 11 different local churches, that elected to sponsor the effort. The team also coordinated with local businesses, including Raley's, Target and Lucky supermarkets, and found community partners including Fremont-based tech company SYNNEX Corporation and diasporic non-profit Taiwanese American Federation of Northern California (TAFNC). "We know today's students are the future," says TAFNC president Cleo Chiang, ' and we want to set them up for success." continued on page 5

As a leading resource for health care services in Southern Alameda County, Washington Hospital Healthcare Foundation has made the difficult decision to cancel the 35th Annual Top Hat Gala, originally scheduled for October 9. While everyone was looking forward to an in-person celebration, the safety of the community and the risk of COVID-19 transmission prevailed.

For the last 34 years, Top Hat has brought people together in support of Washington Hospital. First held at the Top of the Mark in San Francisco in 1986, the dinner dance has grown into an elegant celebration in Fremont, raising funds for clinical services in the Tri-City Area. Thanks to the support of the community, Washington Hospital Healthcare Foundation continues to play a key role in ensuring Tri-City residents have access to the highest quality health care. Generous Top Hat donors have contributed millions of dollars to support the Hospital's most vital programs and services, including: the Special Care Nursery, Prenatal Diagnostic Services, the Radiation Oncology Center, the Emergency Department and many more over the years.

This year, in lieu of a traditional Top Hat Gala, the Hospital is asking for community support to help take the next step forward to providing a full continuum of quality care locally for the community. Funds raised by this year's Top Hat drive will help create an Acute Rehabilitation Center at Washington Hospital. This center will fill a critical gap in rehabilitation care in our local district and surrounding communities by providing intensive, specialized treatment for patients with stroke, limb amputation and other major medical conditions. Through clinical collaboration and advanced technology including specialized lifts, tracking systems and equipment, patients will receive daily individualized physical, occupational and speech therapy from Washington Hospital's team of certified rehabilitation nurses and therapists.

Support Options

Community members can support this critical community need in one of three ways:

- Make a gift directly to the Inpatient Acute Rehabilitation Center fund. Donations are 100% tax-deductible.
- Bid on silent auction items beginning September 20. (Find details on the Foundation website.)

• Purchase raffle tickets for a chance to win a $2,500 gift card to Dale Hardware. ($75 buys three chances to win!)

"Although we are not able to celebrate together this year, I encourage you to support the Inpatient Acute Rehabilitation Center," Gary Charland, President of the Foundation, said. "This center will fulfill a need for our community now and into the future, helping patients reclaim their independence." He continued, "Washington Hospital is committed to providing the highest quality of care in our community, and your support can help fill this critical gap in care in our local district and surrounding communities."

To make a direct donation, purchase raffle tickets, find out more about the silent auction, or ask questions about Washington Hospital's philanthropic Foundation, call, email, or check the website: 510.818.7350, foundation@whhs.com (email), whhs.com/foundation (website).

September 6 Begins National Suicide Prevention Week

Local Psychiatrist Notes Correlation

Between Pandemic

and Increase in Mental Health Issues

NATIONAL SUICIDE PREVENTION WEEK

National Suicide Prevention Week runs from September 6 through 12 this year, and comes at a time when mental health concerns are high across the country. The COVID-19 virus, the natural disasters and the worldwide political turmoil are taking their toll on millions of people's mental health and well-being.

In a recent study conducted by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), 40 percent of U.S. adults reported struggling with mental health or substance abuse. The study further determined that essential workers, unpaid adult caregivers, racial and ethnic minorities, and younger adults are suffering disproportionately worse mental health outcomes. Moreover, these populations are more likely to engage in substance abuse and suffer from elevated suicidal ideation, which is when someone is thinking about or planning to commit suicide.

Board-certified psychiatrist with Washington Township Medical Foundation, Catalina Villa, MD, says that among her patients, there is an increase in anxiety, depression, drug overdoses, and both attempted and successful suicide. "Even in the general population," she adds, "anxiety and depression are much more common now."

Among those who are contending with higher levels of suicidal ideation are health care professionals treating COVID-19. "Front-line medical staff caring for COVID-19 patients are particularly vulnerable to increased depression," says Dr. Villa. "For these caregivers, in addition to the usual challenges of caring for the very sick, is their never-ending worry that they themselves could be exposed to COVID-19 and inadvertently infect their families or friends."

Over the past several months, Dr. Villa has treated a number of patients hospitalized because of drug overdoses. Individuals with a history of substance abuse are more likely to self-medicate when they are feeling anxious or depressed. Since the onset of the pandemic, patients who are dependent upon opioids, painkillers, or heroin have had a greater chance of overdosing, accidentally or intentionally.

In addition to patients with substance abuse issues, Dr. Villa is seeing an escalation in suicide attempts among elderly patients. For seniors, isolation and difficulties managing their ailments can compound their feelings of low self-esteem and helplessness.

Men, more than women, from families or cultures that expect them to be the stronger sex may be reluctant to admit to feeling hopeless or anxious. As a result of the public health crisis, many people who were the primary breadwinners in their families are now experiencing unemployment, which is causing them enormous distress and feelings of guilt. Similarly, young people expecting that they would be working and independent or studying at college, are now struggling to address their dependence, disappointment and isolation. Young women especially are suffering increased degrees of depression. "It is not just sadness," she says. "More women in their teens and early 20s are clinically depressed and need treatment."

Dr. Villa notes that there are identifiable risk factors that make individuals more susceptible to suicidal thoughts and behavior. These include mental health preconditions such as depression, bipolar disorder or substance abuse. Environmental and historical factors can also play a role, such as stressful life events, exposure to another person's suicide, or a family history of suicide attempts.

During these challenging times, depression and anxiety are becoming more common, but that does not make them any less serious. If you know someone who has spoken about feeling helpless, hopeless, or wishing to die, or who has expressed feeling that he or she is a burden to others, it is important to take their distress seriously and inquire further. "When people are depressed, they need to talk about their emotional state," explains Dr. Villa. "It is vital that they have someone to talk to about how they are feeling." She encourages people to contact their primary care physician, or a psychiatrist or psychologist, to ask for support.

If you yourself are feeling low, there are steps you can take that may help. Dr. Villa recommends having a structured routine, getting at least seven hours of sleep each night, eating healthy foods, and doing daily exercises. Regularly socializing online or in-person (while wearing a mask and keeping socially distanced—especially if others are not vaccinated) are also important. "But if you find yourself in bed watching television all day, abusing alcohol or drugs, or thinking about suicide—seek help," urges Dr. Villa. "And if you know someone who is not doing well emotionally, talk to them about it. The most valuable thing is to listen to them. If you continue to be worried about them, try to convince them to call their primary care physician or a crisis hotline."

Your concern and intervention could prevent someone from taking his or her own life. The National Institute of Mental Health says that there are certain behaviors that may be warning signs that someone is thinking about suicide. These include the following:

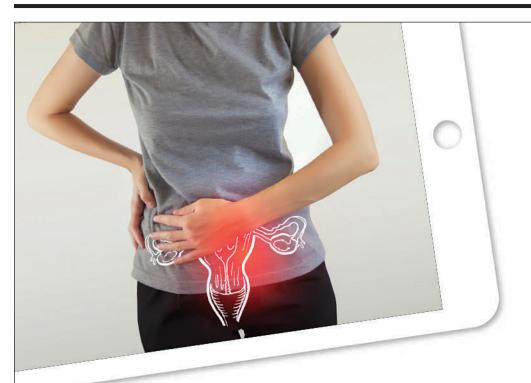

Expressing:

- A desire to die
- Feelings of guilt or shame
- Concerns about being a burden to others
- Hopelessness, feeling trapped, or without reason to live
- Anxiousness, agitation, or rage
- Physical or emotional pain

Changes in behavior, such as:

- Researching ways to die, making a plan to die
- Withdrawing from friends, saying goodbye, giving away important items
- Taking dangerous risks such as driving extremely fast
- Displaying extreme mood swingsEating or sleeping more or less
- Using drugs or alcohol more often

If some of these warning signs apply to you or someone you know, especially if the behavior is new or has increased recently, please seek help as soon as possible. To speak with a trained crisis counselor, call the Crisis Support Services of Alameda County at 800.309.2131, or the National Suicide Prevention Lifeline at 800.273.TALK (800.273.8255). Another option is to text "HELLO" to the Crisis Text Line at 741741. However, if you fear you or someone you know is about to engage in self-harm, call 911 immediately.

Teen-led backpack drive helps students get back to school

In total, they managed to collect and pack 547 backpacks filled with supplies for students in grades K-6, with over half of these delivered directly to elementary schools across Fremont, Newark and Hayward. They also donated backpacks to the City of Fremont's Family Resource Center and Davis Street's annual backpack program, which benefits residents in San Leandro, San Lorenzo and Castro Valley.

Among the recipients were students of 5th-grade teacher and Fremont native Denise Kuo, who is teaching in person for the first time. "Because of Covid, every student has experienced at least one trauma in their lives," Kuo says. "So, anything we can provide, whether it's free lunch, school supplies or backpacks to support their well-being is crucial to helping them adjust back to learning in person." Now, as the team members join their peers heading back to school, they are hopeful that despite the shared challenges of an uncertain year ahead, they have enriched their communities to make the best of it.

"We hope the backpacks are useful," says Cheng, "and that [their] impact will last throughout the school year."

History Matters

The greatest show

P.T. Barnum made a fortune selling fantasies under his eponymous Grand Scientific & Musical Theater, American Museum, and the circus, which was reputed to be "The Greatest Show on Earth." Often entrepreneurial, he also invented the "Big Top" and filled it with side shows that featured dwarfs, conjoined twins, and other imagination-stretching anomalies.

Once, while he was touring Europe with the not-quite three-foot tall Tom Thumb, Barnum encountered Miss Jenny Lind, the celebrated "Swedish Nightingale." She was an operatic singer with a great following on the continent. Barnum quickly signed her for a national tour of America, and on September 1, 1850, he showed the world just how far his tastes reached. The trip was a triumph. As someone once said of him, P.T. Barnum was "Disney before Disney."

For more information the Grateful American Book Prize recommends "The Life of P.T. Barnum" by Phineas T. Barnum, himself.

It's all in a name

Allegedly, Peter Minuit purchased New York City from the Algonquin Indians for a few baubles in 1626, and then renamed it New Amsterdam to honor its newly acquired Dutch heritage.

Then, 38 years later – on September 8, 1664 -- Peter Stuyvesant, Governor of New Netherlands, surrendered the territory to an English naval squadron, and changed the name to venerate the Duke of York. According to History.com, "in 1686 it became the first city in the colonies to receive a royal charter. After the American Revolution, it became the first capital of the United States."

The Grateful American Book Prize recommends "The Island at the Center of the World," by Russell Shorto.

War and victory

In 1845 the U.S. government annexed Texas, which set a feud in motion with Mexico. President James K. Polk ordered General Zachary Taylor to occupy the disputed territory along the Rio Grande River; meanwhile, the Mexican army attacked Taylor's troops, and America declared war.

Eventually, General Winfield Scott invaded Mexico with an army of 10,000 -- including 400 Marines -- and won the day. He landed near Vera Cruz on the Gulf of Mexico and defeated their forces. Then, he moved on to Mexico City, and won his final victory at a fortified military academy known as the Halls of Montezuma; there, he raised the American flag on September 14, 1847, and declared victory.

The Grateful American Book Prize recommends "The Mexican War, 1846-1848" by K. Jack Bauer.

RASH TALK

By The Pickup Artist

This is the eighth edition of Trash Talk, a column devoted to cleaning up our neighborhoods. This week's column focuses on my "trashing inventions."

The bag ease

One of the fun things about a new project for me is to find a way to do it better, be resourceful, and create a new method or tool. When starting to gather trash, it became obvious that the bag itself was an issue. You have one hand holding the bag and the other using the grabber. It was annoying to try to keep the bag open, especially if it was even a little bit windy. I needed something that was light, yet strong enough to carry a bag and hold it open. One solution was the Bag-Ease (thanks to my wife for the clever name). It is simply a 5-gallon plastic bucket with the bottom cut out. Pull the bag up through the opening, fold it over the sides of the bucket, and hold in place with bungee cords. Now, not only does the bucket hold the bag open, but also provides a handle.

The trash stasher

The inventor in me was motivated. I wanted something more, so I also created the Trash Stasher. The frame is made with PVC pipe and has three sections: one for trash (large orange trash bag), one for recyclable cans and bottles (smaller green bag), and a third for extra trash bags and a place to put items worthy of keeping or donating (smaller black bag). Since I'm going all out, I also put in a sleeve to hold my water bottle. The long handle on top provides some leveling for balance if either end gets too heavy. A few spring-loaded clamps make for ease of changing bags.

Feel free to share your ideas, and I will consider them for printing in a future edition of Trash Talk.

"Garbologists." Thanks to all who participated. The quote for today:

Answer to the last Trash Talk Question:

Why do dog-owners pick up poop, bag it, and put it back on the ground? My sincere thanks to one reader who asked a dog owner, and got this

1) "Some bags are biodegradable." (Faster than the organic matter?)

2) The culprit had every intention of collecting the bag on the return trip.

The Trash Talk Question for today: Have you found money on any of your pick-up routes? Answer in the next edition.

Support Jocal Restaurants

SUBMITTED BY CINDY BONIOR

Show your support and get rewarded for dining at Fremont restaurants this month!

The Fremont Chamber of Commerce and City of Fremont are launching the first Dine Out in Fremont program for the entire month of September. This new program encourages the community to support local restaurants by rewarding customers with a chance to win gift cards and a grand prize for dining at participating restaurants. The program offers a win-win model for both restaurants and customers.

Entering in the drawing is simple: After customers dine at a participating restaurant, email receipts to DineOut@FremontBusiness.com or drop receipts off at Fremont Chamber of Commerce office (39488 Stevenson Place, Suite 100, Fremont CA, 94539). Every $25 in receipts earns an automatic entry into a daily drawing for prizes, including a chance to win the grand prize at the end of the month. Check out the most up-to-date list of participating restaurants at www.fremontbusiness.com/dine-fremont.html.

Select restaurants will also offer exclusive promotions and meals. The program is a fantastic opportunity to support your favorite local restaurants or try delicious new cuisine. Customers are encouraged to share their meals, restaurant adventures, and dining fun on social media. Simply snap a photo, share your compliments, tag the restaurant (if applicable), and use the hashtag: #DineFremont.

As these businesses continue to overcome pandemic-related challenges, the Dine Out in Fremont program acts as a fun way to support our City's local restaurants (one that we hope becomes an annual City-favorite event for years to come!).

For questions about Dine Out in Fremont and to learn more about the program, visit the Dine Out in Fremont webpage at www.fremontbusiness.com/dine-fremont.html for complete details.

Zoom Oocial write-in

SUBMITTED BY TISH DAVIDSON

Why did you move to California? What is your favorite food? Tell us about a teacher that changed your life.

These are some examples of the writing prompts you might get if you join the Fremont Area Writers Zoom social write-in on Saturday, September 11. The social write-in allows you to explore your creativity in a fun, non-judgmental environment. This free event is open to all. Past write-ins have attracted everyone from high schoolers to a 91-year-young senior citizen. This is not a writing critique session. Your writing will not be judged, just enjoyed by your fellow writers. The idea is to explore your creativity and meet some new people in the Fremont-Newark-Union City area.

How the Write-In works:

After you sign in, the computer will randomly assign you to a virtual room with several other writers. Once everyone is gathered, you will get three writing prompts. Choose one prompt and free write for eight minutes. You can write memoir, fiction, or poetry, but the writing prompts have been chosen to encourage you to write about yourself so that participants can get to know each other.

After you write, there is time for everyone in the room to read their response to the prompt and exchange ideas and experiences in a relaxed, supportive atmosphere. Then everyone will be reassigned to a different room, the prompts will change, and the process will

In Support of Afghan Students

California State University, East Bay, proudly serves the largest Afghan community in the United States, which is based in Hayward, Fremont, Union City, and Newark. As a humanitarian crisis unfolds in Afghanistan, our hearts go out to our students, faculty, staff, alumni, and other community members with ties to Afghanistan. The withdrawal of U. S. and allied forces from Afghanistan, and subsequent takeover by the Taliban, has caused great pain to the people of Afghanistan, Afghan immigrants, Afghan Americans, veterans, and those with loved ones remaining in Afghanistan.

We acknowledge your suffering and we care. At this time, many Afghans and Americans are in great danger, unable to get safely to the airport in Kabul. Many Afghans are unable to get their Special Immigrant Visas (SIVs) processed. These include Afghan journalists, interpreters and others who worked with U.S. and NATO forces, and women who have been active in government, business, and civil society.

The immediate crisis calls for the U.S. to honor its promises to Afghan allies by expediting Special Immigrant Visa processing, increasing quotas for Afghan refugees, and using other methods to facilitate Afghan immigration to the U.S. Providing safe haven in the U.S. for Afghan Special Immigrant Visa holders and refugees will require swiftly making changes to our current anti-refugee, Islamophobic immigration policy and standing up to xenophobic reactions to new arrivals. We pledge to partner with organizations supporting refugee academics and students.

An estimated 6 million people have been displaced due to the war in Afghanistan. Over 47,000 civilians have died. Tragically, nearly one third of the civilian casualties in Afghanistan have been children.

We unequivocally support the human rights of the people of Afghanistan to have access to clean water, food, shelter, and health care. We support the right for all children to be educated, and for all girls and women to be educated and to contribute to society through engaging in meaningful work and careers. All people should be able to live free of gender-, religion-, ethnic-, and war-based violence. We support people from Afghanistan who seek a better life by migrating to other nations, and we welcome with open arms those who come to the United States.

News and Notes FROM AROUND THE WORLD

SUBMITTED BY THE ASSOCIATION OF MATURE AMERICAN CITIZENS

A story you can milk

Bernie was on his way home from the fair near Marshfield, Wisconson recently and felt a bit peckish. So, he stopped off at a McDonald's for a burger on his way home. After all, you can work up quite an appetite shopping for livestock, says the Association of Mature American Citizens [AMAC], especially if you have to pack the three calves you just purchased in the backseat of your sedan.

Another patron in the drive-through line, Jessica Nelson, spotted what she thought was a decal of a cow's face staring at her from the rear window of Bernie's car and quickly realized that it was the real thing when she saw it "moo-ving." She quickly reached for her cell phone and captured a video of the not-so-little critter. She found out later that two of the calves were lying down while the third calf was pressing its face against the window doing a little sightseeing.

Weird but true

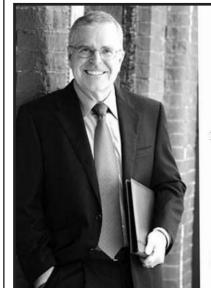

There's a town near Tampa, Florida with the official motto: "Keep Gulfport Weird." How weird? AMAC says weird enough to have a house that was built around a very big, very old and very mighty oak tree. The tree is centuries old. Its roots are beneath the kitchen; its hefty trunk grows through the kitchen floor and up through its roof. Realtor

Stacey Purcell didn't give up when she tried to sell the property recently. Prospective buyers would walk in and walk out, according to Stacey. But, as she put it, "We have a lot of tree-huggers here." And, sure enough, one of those tree-huggers made a bid on the property. Sold!

Another way to say thanks

The struggling employees of an eatery in Gainesville, Florida that was hard hit by the coronavirus epidemic got a lift recently when a patron paid his $144.66 dinner tab, adding a $10,000 tip, according to AMAC. When the unnamed philanthropist, his wife and son finished their meals he asked the owner of the Wahoo Seafood Grill if he would gather his staff so he could have a word with them. The diner thanked the restaurant's 10 employees, informing them of the big tip each of them had earned -- $1,000 each. Shawn Shepherd, who owns the Wahoo Grill, took to Instagram to express his thanks, writing: "I'm not usually an emotional guy, but this really got me. I'm blown away. We're all blown away by his generosity. The last year and a half hasn't been easy on this industry. We're hurting and we're exhausted, but this incredible act of kindness has restored our faith in humanity."

Our 2021 Virtual Evening of Empowerment Gala is scheduled for Saturday, September 18, from 6 p.m. to 7 p.m. We were looking forward to meeting you and thanking you in person. However, your safety is our paramount concern, we hope you are staying safe and healthy.

Last year, due to the global pandemic, we had to cancel what would have been the 5th year as SAVE's signature fundraiser event. However, in the past, the event was such a huge success that we decided to host it again.

Our 2019 event raised close to $200,000! During the pandemic, the funds we raised in the past helped to provide survivor-centered care to more than 1,900 clients and their dependents, answer 1,709 calls to our 24/7 crisis line, safely house 7206 bed nights in our safe house and motels, and provide 1,017 counseling sessions to individuals, family, and support group.

We couldn't have done it without the help of our support community. Your generosity means the world to us, and we cannot wait to see you — and thank you virtually.

Our 2021 sponsors include: The Beck Family Foundation, Fremont Bank, Washington Hospital, Safety National, Senator Bob Wieckowski, Robson Homes, Haller's Pharmacy, and Sisters of the Holy Family.

SHAPE OUR FREMONT

Here Come More Housing Proposals

After a year and a half with very little new development activity, the floodgates have opened and a batch of new housing proposals have been submitted to city staff for a Preliminary Review Procedure (PRP). Although a PRP is not required, it provides comments and issues the city has regarding the preliminary plans. Developers pay a substantial fee to the city for this service. This information can help developers determine whether to go forward with the process and how to shape the Development Application if they decide to proceed. Here are some of the most recent PRPs:

Union Street Apartments

The developer has submitted plans for 8 apartments in a pair of two-story buildings at 3277 Union Street. This property is within the Irvington BART Transit Oriented Development (TOD) Overlay, which encourages multi-family housing. Staff had several comments, but their primary concern was that part of the property is within the Hayward Earthquake Fault Zone, which means that habitable structures must be no closer than 50 feet from the fault. This would restrict the size and location of the proposed buildings and may also affect many other aspects of the development. Residents may send their comments to City Staff Team Lead Mark Hungerford at mhungerford@fremont.gov

Irvington Arches

The project proposes building 16 three-story townhouses in the parking lot of the former YMCA recreation center at 41811 Blacow Road, opposite Irvington High School. The existing building, which currently houses a child day-care center and tutoring center, would remain. Fremont staff noted this property is within a designated seismic hazard area and would require an outside consultant review. Other staff comments include issues with parking, traffic, and surface water runoff. Residents may send their comments to City Staff Team Lead Mark Hungerford at mhungerford@fremont.gov

Mission Homes

The proposed plans are for 7 detached three-story townhouses at 38765 Mission Boulevard near Pickering Avenue. The existing structures would be demolished. Some of the initial comments from staff were the need for studies of possible earthquake-induced ground liquefaction on the site, as well as noise and vibration caused by passing trains on the adjacent rail line. The PRP continues to be reviewed. Residents may send their comments to City Staff Team Lead Mark Hungerford at mhungerford@fremont.gov

Maple Village

The developer wants to build a five-story building at 37220 Maple Street with 24 housing units above commercial space on the ground floor. The existing Montessori school would be demolished. The property is within the Centerville Town Center and the Centerville TOD. Initial comments from staff concern the type of units being proposed, parking, and other issues. Residents may send their comments to City Staff Team Lead James Willis at jwillis@fremont.gov

Osgood Apartments South

Maracor Development has just submitted a PRP for 100 affordable housing apartments in a six-story building at 41911 Osgood Road in the Irvington BART TOD. All existing structures would be demolished. This development would be directly adjacent to Maracor's Osgood Apartments affordable housing project, which was approved in June. This PRP has been tentatively assigned to City Staff Team Leader Courtney Pal at cpal@fremont.gov

Residents' comments, questions, and concerns about these proposals are an important part of the PRP process and can potentially help avoid problems and improve the final development. To follow up on these and other proposals, visit

Gifted Assistant Conductor Joins Mission Peak Chamber Singers

SUBMITTED BY SHIRLEY GILBERT

Dr. Corie Brown, Assistant Professor of Choral Music Education at San Jose State University (SJSU) will join the artistic team of Tri-City's Mission Peak Chamber Singers (MPCS) and sister ensemble East Bay People's Choir (EBPC) as Assistant Conductor according to Ofer dal Lal, the choral groups' Artistic Director.

While Dr. Brown will work predominantly with MPCS, she will also be available to offer assistance to Sid Quinsaat, conductor of EBPC.

"I'm excited for the opportunity to work with Dr. Brown," said dal Lal. "While we hold similar views on the importance of choir in the community and have similar values on making music relevant, Dr. Brown brings new ideas and teaching methods to our artistic team. She is a charismatic and engaging leader."

Currently Dr. Brown leads the SJSU Concert and Treble Choirs and teaches music education courses at the university. She has extensive conducting experience in both community and academic environments and has taught music to students in Michigan, the south side of Chicago and Bogota, Colombia.

Dr. Brown has a passion for integrating social justice and music education. She believes in the power of choral music to connect people, to help us heal and to help begin larger conversations around justice and equality. "What's exciting to me," said Dr. Brown, "is that social justice is written into the mission statements of both choirs. They have inspired the community with transformational music and I want to be a part of that."

As contralto, she has sung with the University of Colorado Boulder University Singers, the University of Oregon Chamber Choir and award-winning Chicago Chorale. "I love to sing," she said, "and am comfortable both on the podium as a conductor and off the podium as a performer."

She holds degrees from Alma College, University of Oregon (she has sung at the prestigious Oregon Bach Festival), and a Doctor of Musical Arts in Choral Conducting and Literature from the University of Colorado Boulder.

Dr. Brown was grateful for the ability to zoom during the Pandemic to keep choirs singing and engaged, but is happy that choral groups are now beginning to meet in person with strict compliance to CDC safety precautions. Both Mission Peak Chamber Singers and East Bay People's Choir are planning to open up to in-person singing very soon.

"Zoom rehearsals allowed choir members to stay connected," said Dr. Brown, "but there are so many limitations. We couldn't listen to each other, breathe together, or glean energy from those beside, behind and in front of us. I'm so delighted that we are beginning to meet in person and will sing masked, but in a true group setting once more. Singing together brings such joy and a sense of interconnectivity that you just simply can't recreate. I can't wait to get the chance to make music with the voices of the MPCS."

Write On! 🐗 Safety Tips

What are three safety tips for kids to remember?

9/11: As the decades pass, the act of remembering evolves

the day that changed everything. Yet at the memorial's overlook, near the patch where the plane hit, remembering is the whole point.

Remembering is not merely a state of mind. As those who beseech us to never forget the Holocaust have long insisted, it is an act. And when loss and trauma are visited upon human beings, the act of remembering takes many forms.

Remembering is political. Those who disagree about the fate of Confederate statues across the American South demonstrate that, as do those who dispute how much the war on terror and its toll should be part of discussions about 9/11 memories.

Remembering arrives in ground zero ceremonies and moments of silence and prayers upon prayers, both public and private. It shows itself in folk memorials like those erected at the sides of lonely roads to mark the sites of traffic deaths. It is embedded in the names of places, like the road that leads to the Flight 93 memorial – the Lincoln Highway. It surfaces in the retrieval of "flashbulb memories" – those where-were-you-when-this-happened moments that stick with us, sometimes accurately, sometimes not.

There are personal memories and cultural memories and political memories, and the lines often blur.

And for generations, remembering has been presented to us in monuments and memorials like Shanksville's, fine-tuned to evoke memories and emotions in certain ways.

Yet while monuments stand, remembering itself evolves. How 9/11 is remembered depends on when 9/11 is remembered. What, then, does remembering come to mean on a 20th anniversary of an event like 9/11, even as its echoes are still shaking the foundations of everything?

"Our present influences how we remember the past – sometimes in ways that are known and sometimes in ways that we don't realize," says Jennifer Talarico, a psychology professor at Lafayette College in Pennsylvania who studies how people form personal memories of public events.

Evidence of that is obvious in the past five weeks in Afghanistan, where a 20-year war waged in direct response to 9/11 ended pretty much where it began: with the repressive and violent Taliban in charge once more.

But even within more static forms of memory, such as the Flight 93 National Memorial, the question of how remembering evolves hangs over so much.

In the visitors' center, visceral, painful artifacts of the moment still bring back the past with astonishing efficiency; twisted, scarred cutlery from in-flight meals is particularly breathtaking. But the variety of remembering that is presented yards away at the quiet overlook and its thoughtful memorial feels more permanent, more eternal.

Paul Murdoch of Los Angeles, the lead architect on the memorial, says it was carefully calibrated to resonate across multiple stages of memory about the event and its implications.

"You can imagine a memorial approach that sort of freezes anger in time, or freezes fear. And that can be a very expressionistic piece of art. But I feel like for something to endure over a long period of time, I think it has to operate a different way," says Murdoch, who co-designed the memorial with his wife, Milena.

"Now we have a generation of people who weren't even alive on 9/11," Murdoch says. "So how do you talk to people of this new generation – or of future generations?"

That question is particularly potent on this anniversary. Society tends to mark generations in two-decade packages, so there's an entire one that has been born and come of age since the attacks. That hardly means they haven't been paying attention, though: They "remember," too.

Krystine Batcho, a psychology professor at Le Moyne College in Syracuse, New York, studies how nostalgia works. She found something interesting a couple years ago when she was researching how young people encountered stories that resonated with them – both personally and through the news.

Even those who lacked living memories of 9/11, Batcho says, responded with stories about the event. It was remembering as shared experience.

So many first encounters with 9/11 were, in the tradition of an information age, both separate and communal. People in different parts of the country and world, under vastly different circumstances, watched the same live camera angles on the same few feeds and saw the same, now-indelible views of the destruction in the same way. They experienced it apart, but together.

That formed a communal memory of sorts, even if sometimes people who saw the same things didn't remember them the same way – a specific camera angle or vantage point, a key figure's comments, the exact sequence of events. Remembering can be like that, experts say.

"You would think that the memories would be more cohesive and homogeneous," Batcho says. "It turns out that it's much more complicated than that."

The fundamental tension of this kind of remembering – it feels like yesterday but is also becoming part of history – confronts us in the coming days. Memory becomes history. And history – shared history – is held onto tightly, sometimes rabidly. It's why so many people grasp tightly to comforting, nostalgic historical narratives – even when they're shown to have been destructive.

When memory does become history, it can become more remote, like a Revolutionary War memorial for people whose passions and sacrifices have been sanded down by time. With distance, it can calcify.

That's not going to happen with 9/11 for a long time, of course. Its politics are still roiling. The arguments that it produced – and the ways they sent society hurtling in a different direction – are just as intense as in those early days.

And when a nation pauses to remember the morning 20 years ago when it was attacked, it is not only looking over its shoulder. It is also looking around and wondering: What does this mean to us now?

Alameda County honors 20th anniversary of 9/11

SUBMITTED BY SAYEH AHMARI

The Office of Alameda County District 1 Supervisor, David Haubert will host a 9/11 20th Anniversary Memorial Ceremony on Saturday, September 11 at the Alameda County Fairgrounds in Pleasanton. There will be speakers and performers including Chief of Alameda County Fire, Sheriff of Alameda County, 395th Ar741y Band, and more.

Deborah Llyod, one of our speakers, is a Dublin resident and will share a story from that tragic day.

"Twenty years ago, Amy King, a United Airlines flight attendant, left her home in the early morning hours to start her workweek. Her story, her life, is just one of the thousands creating a ripple effect of impact on family, friends, and the world. Yet, telling her individual story reminds us of how precious life is. Amy was 29 years old, and she was my sister."

Jim McGuirk, our last speaker, was born and raised here in Pleasanton.

Jim grew up in Pleasanton, CA, where he attended Lydiksen Elementary, Pleasanton Middle School, and Foothill High School. After graduating in June 2001, McGuirk left for the Army on September 5th, 2001. He had just begun basic training when 9/11 happened. McGuirk will speak about his deployment in Iraq and Baghdad, as well as his continuing education and career after returning to the States in 2007. As a student at Las Positas Community College, he saw an immediate need for retaining Veterans in education, and began working to help build their Veterans First Program with the administration and staff.

Anything Goes

SUBMITTED BY SUN GALLERY

The Sun Gallery has risen from the ashes like a Phoenix with a stupendous amount of art for its next showing at the Sun Gallery. With over 35 exhibiting artists, the Annual Members show "Anything Goes" is packed to the gills with everything from woven baskets by member Laura Mattos to large sculptures created by Tom Hird. It includes canvas paintings produced with a variety of mixed media, oils and acrylic, along with photography, ink and pencil drawings. A large whimsical sculpted giraffe by artist Suzanne Pershing resides alongside spectacular environmental pieces by Alameda resident Jon Kerpel. Kerpel, a longtime Sun gallery member and artist, will soon have his sculptures displayed at the Taipei Embassy in Taiwan. Sculptures by local artists Peter and Maureen Langenbach add their usual eclectic flair and whimsy.

This is the third exhibition at Sun Gallery since its doors reopened in April 2021, and not only is membership growing, but also the amount of work coming in has been uplifting for Gallery staff. Fighting through the pandemic to survive has been difficult with substantial funding cuts to grants and almost no income for the last year and a half. Director Dorsi Diaz says, "I am so excited to see so many artists come out and show up, including new ones, coming in with work that they have been creating over the last year, despite the tough times we have all endured. It just goes to show all of us that the creative spirit is strong, and can never be taken away, beaten or silenced. If anything, out of tragedy can arise greatness, both in creativity and in spirit."

Because of grant cuts, Diaz's work hours have been reduced by half, and Board Member Nina Starr and her husband Lawrence Cotham have stepped forward to volunteer and fill the gaps by curating shows. Volunteers have been difficult to find during the pandemic, but Diaz has come up with work arounds, by asking volunteers to do some gallery tasks from home if possible.

Despite the exciting turn of events for the gallery, staff are aware that the Delta variant is still running rampant, so visitors have been asked to wear masks inside and continue to social distance. Receptions have been held outside, and snacks for receptions are prepackaged for safety.

The 'Anything Goes' exhibit opens Friday,
September 10 and will run through Saturday, October 16.
An Artists Reception will be held outdoors in the Gallery's courtyard on Saturday, September 18 from 1 p.m. – 4 p.m. The public is invited, and admission is free. All Statewide and Alameda County health and safety regulations will be in place, along with hand

The Sun Gallery Call for Art for its next show "Day of the Dead – Dia de los Muertos" will be going out soon. To submit your work early, email to Curator Nina Starr at sungallerycurator@gmail.com. The Day of the Dead Show runs from October 22 – November 13.

Saving significant sums of water in the garden

ARTICLE AND PHOTOS BY DANIEL O'DONNELL

The Spanish philosopher George Santayana wrote, "Those who cannot remember the past are condemned to repeat it." He might not have been inspired by the repeated droughts in California, but the saying can be applied to people living in the

Stopping obvious water waste is an action that can be taken immediately. Irrigation systems should be checked regularly for leaks and to make sure their run times are correct. Gardeners that rely on hand watering should check the hose connection to the faucet and nozzle and change the washer if there is a leak. If there is no hose nozzle, purchasing one golden state. There have been multiple droughts in California over the past 1,000 years, with some lasting 2 to 5 years, others 10 to 20 years, and mega-droughts that have ranged from 180 years to 240 years, as seen from studying tree rings. It is almost certain that there will be many more dry years to come. Measures can be taken to minimize the detrimental effects of the current drought on Bay Area gardens as well as the complications associated with future droughts.

A person must eat right, get plenty of sleep, and exercise to be healthy. Using less water in the garden has the same multipronged approach. There are actions that can be taken that are stronger working together to save water than one working alone. Some measures can be applied to existing gardens and some will require modifications.

will save water by making watering more efficient. Upgrading an older irrigation timer to a weather-based controller and/or replacing pop-up sprinklers with drip irrigation will also conserve water.

Weed control is another action that can be done at once. Pulling unwanted weeds away from plants will reduce the competition for water and make it easier to determine the minimal amount of water a plant will need.

Choosing when to water will also save water immediately. Watering plants in the early morning is ideal. This can easily be done if there is an automated irrigation system. The earlier the better, but if hand watering, even up until 10:00 am will reduce the water lost to evaporation. Watering at night can increase fungal diseases and root rot, especially in drought-tolerant

The type of material the container is made of is just as important as the timing of watering. Terracotta and coconut coir planters are porous. They dry out much more quickly than glazed ceramic or stone pots. Darker colored pots, especially plastic ones, heat up faster than brighter colored pots making soil moisture evaporate faster.

Enriching the soil around plants with compost can increase water retention in the soil by 30% or more. Spreading a 2-inch layer of wood mulch on top of the soil can significantly slow the moisture in the compost from evaporating. The fibrous wood debris absorbs and retains water that is slowly released into the soil. Rock or gravel mulches can help reduce evaporation, but do so less effectively.

The later an irrigation system can be turned on or a hand-watering schedule begun after the last rainfall, the more tap water that can be saved. Collecting shower water in a bucket to water plants is one way (greywater) into the garden can have a huge impact on garden water usage. Although these systems are not difficult to set up, there are some regulations that need to be followed when using greywater in the garden. The Urban Farmer store (urbanfarmerstore.com) has been supplying and helping people design laundry to landscape systems for years.

Plant choices play a significant role in using less water. Plants native to Mediterranean climate to delay the need for irrigation for potted plants or small beds. Collecting rain water can help defer turning on the irrigation system for larger areas. Williams Brewing (www.williamsbrewing.com) in San Leandro is selling used 56-gallon plastic drums, which are great for storing rainwater for $10 in their online store clearance section.

Installing a laundry to landscape system that diverts washing machine water regions in California, Mexico, Australia, South Africa, New Zealand, and around the Mediterranean Basin have adapted to a watering cycle that provides very little water in the summer months.

Grouping plants in hydro-zones with other plants that have similar water requirements makes watering more efficient. Planting low water use trees which shade the ground and arranging plants in dense groupings will keep the ground cooler and reduce water evaporation as well.

People tend to ease off on water restrictions once a drought is over, only to condemn their garden to suffer during the next drought. Remembering to take as many water saving precautions as possible before, during, and after a drought to spare your garden from the devastating drought

Tri-City Stargazer for week: SEPTEMBER 5, 2021

All Signs: We have excellent chances for a positive week ahead! First, there is a strong emphasis on work and getting better organized. For many, this ambition will lead to a desire to improve their health. Meanwhile, Mercury, Venus and Jupiter will encourage warm, social gatherings or meetings for professional reasons. This is guaranteed because Mercury and Venus are in the social sign of Libra; and Jupiter is in the friendly sign of Aquarius. Both are Air Signs. Enjoy good times and remember to grab every chance for physical activity.

Work hard, party hard. You're still in work mode with a strong desire to get organized and accomplish as much as possible. Many of you are delegating. Nevertheless, Mercury and Venus are opposite your sign, which promotes socializing! Make time to enjoy fun conversations with partners and close friends. You might also be involved in group activities, clubs or classes. It's important to find a happy compromise between being available for others, and maintaining your own independence.

Taurus the Bull (April 20-May 20)

This is a fabulous week for you because both the Sun and Mars are in a playful part of your chart, giving you opportunities to socialize. Enjoy sports events. Accept invitations to party. Grab every chance to express your own creative talents. Fun activities with children will delight. Nevertheless, this lovely dance mentioned in All Signs above between Mercury, Venus and Jupiter will promote wonderful opportunities in your job, along with work-related travel. A work-related romance might blossom!

Gemini the Twins (May 21-June 20)

So much positive energy is happening this week between three planets: Mercury and Venus dancing with Jupiter. Mercury and Venus are in Libra and Jupiter is in Aquarius, two Air Signs. Meanwhile, you are an Air Sign! This means things will flow easily for you.

Despite your focus on home and family, this is a social week with travel opportunities and chances to enjoy fun outings, the arts, sports events and playful times with kids. Increased chaos on the home front will require your attention.

Cancer the Crab (June 21-July 22)

Life is fast-paced now because of your busy schedule. Many of you are reading and studying more than usual. You have appointments, errands and increased time spent with siblings. Short trips are likely. It's an excellent week for important communications because you will be persuasive and articulate. Home and family are blessed this week, which is why it's a great time to entertain at home as well as tackle home repairs and enjoy family discussions.

Leo the Lion (July 23-Aug. 22)

This is a charming week because your communications will be pleasant, informative and profitable. With the Sun and Mars in your Money House, your focus on cash flow and earnings is strong. Not only are you working hard to earn money, you're spending it! However, the lovely play of energy in the Air Signs (see All Signs above) takes place in your House of Communications and your House of Partnerships. This means conversations with others will be smooth, entertaining and mutually beneficial.

Virgo the Virgin

(Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
You continue to be empowered with the Sun and fiery Mars in your sign. Make the most of this, because the Sun is in your sign for only four weeks a year and Mars is in your sign for six weeks every two years. Right now, it's a double whammy! The delightful dance of Mercury and Venus with Jupiter takes place in your Money House and affects your job, your work and your health. These are all areas that will get a lovely boost of positive energy!

Libra the Scales

(Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
You are still in limbo because the Sun and Mars are "hiding" in your chart. Mars will enter your sign on September 14, and the Sun on September 22. When this happens, you will have an amazing boost of energy! Note: Mars will stick with you until the end of October. Meanwhile, this is a wonderful time to talk to children, explore the arts and enjoy schmoozing with others. It's also a great time to be on a vacation or to make vacation plans.

Scorpio the Scorpion (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

This continues to be an excellent time to formulate goals. It's also a good time to get feedback on your hopes and dreams. Coordinate your needs with those of others to establish a teamwork. Physical activity with others will appeal. Meanwhile, something going on behind the scenes will benefit home and family. Family plans are ambitious but exciting. And yes, a secret love affair is still percolating in the wings.

Sagittarius the Archer (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

The Sun is still at the top of your chart, making you look fabulous in the eyes of bosses, parents and VIPs. This happens only once a year for four weeks so make the most of it. This is the time to make your pitch or advance your agenda. Fortunately, with Mars at the top of your chart, you have the ambition to act. Interactions with friends, especially younger, creative people will be rewarding. Enjoy gatherings; these might influence your future goals.

Capricorn the Goat (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

In All Signs above, I mention a supportive dance between three planets: Mercury and Venus relating to lucky moneybags Jupiter. For your sign, this is a financial blessing. Discussions with bosses might lead to increased earnings, a promotion, or a better paying job. Bosses, parents and VIPs are impressed with you. Explore anything that looks like a good possibility because you have the advantage this week. Meanwhile, travel continues to appeal along with opportunities in higher education, medicine, the law, publishing and the media.

Aquarius the Water Bearer (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

All this fabulous activity in the Air Signs affects you because both lucky Jupiter and Saturn are in Aquarius! The last time Saturn was in your sign was 1991-1993; the last time Jupiter was in your sign was 2009. This means things tend to go your way. This week in particular, opportunities to travel or expand your world might occur. You might meet people from other cultures, explore higher education, medicine, the law or publishing. This energy will boost your confidence and help you in disputes, especially shared property and inheritances.

Pisces Fish (Feb. 19-March 20)

Discussions with others will benefit you this week and give you a financial advantage or practical support. In disputes about shared property or an inheritance, things will go your way. This is also a passionate week, especially for lovers! Ironically, confrontations with partners might also take place, because both the Sun and Mars are opposite your sign. This means things are blowing hot and cold for you in your closest friendships and partnerships. Tread carefully. Make no important decisions until you know for sure what you want.

loss and grief, and putting them back together represents overcoming that pain.

The art form Kintsugi originated in Japan. "One theory of the origin of this art form is when a shogun (military dictators of Japan) in the 15th century didn't quite like the way one of his bowls was mended using ugly staples, and he asked his own artisans to create a new way of putting it back together." It is also connected with the philosophy of embracing the flawed and imperfect, and finding inspiration in them. Kintsugi highlights the cracks and repairs simply as events in the life of the object rather than reasons to discard it Kotake was introduced to Kintsugi after watching a movie. The more he researched it, the more therapeutic he found it to be. Having lost dear friends, this became his way of dealing with the loss and finding deeper meaning.

"The art is started by taking broken pieces of a pot or a bowl or a similar piece of pottery. Anywhere between five to ten pieces is ideal," shared Kotake. Although any material can be used, Kotake likes to use ceramic bowls over porcelain. "The pieces are then put back together using epoxy [a glue-like resin] mixed with gold mica powder," he added. The next step is to find the arrangement of pieces to re-create the original shape. "I figure out which pieces I put back together first. It's like a puzzle, if you get it wrong you can't put it back together," described Kotake. To join two pieces together, he layers the epoxy mixture on the edges and holds them together for two to three minutes. The process is then repeated for the rest of the pieces, and the bowl is mended.

A landscaper-gardener by profession, Kotake finds connection with Kintsugi in his career as well. "Just like every bowl or piece of pottery, every garden is unique. It is like putting together a beautiful creation from everything that exists in a garden or yard," shared Kotake. Before starting his work in the morning, he spends some time on his Kintsugi projects, and sometimes after dinner before going to bed as well. "It's therapeutic," says Kotake.

Kotake also likes to give bowls to people who can empathize with them. "I found it as a way to channel what we've all gone through in the past year," shared Kotake. He has found that going through the process of repairing and giving a bowl away has been helpful to both him and the recipient. "When I was playing golf the other day, there was this guy whose wife is going through chemo, and [she] was sitting in the golf cart with him, and I sent her a bowl. I know most people can relate to it because they've gone through something similar," Kotake says.

At this point, he is pursuing Kintsugi as a personal passion, but his family has been suggesting to him to start an online business so that his art and message can reach a wider audience. "I don't want to be bound by 'orders', I want to keep it personal at the moment and think about business in the future," says Kotake. Kintsugi has become an integral part of who Kotake is and he hopes to pass this on as his legacy.

We are thankful to Kathy Kimberlin for introducing Tri-City Voice to Kotake, and we would like to encourage our readers to reach out to us with suggestions for stories they would like to see featured. We at Tri-City Voice wish Kotake all the best as he puts the pieces together and helps others mend their lives in the process.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Non-native bullfrogs pose a threat to repopulation effort

Threatened yellow-legged native frogs haven't much of a chance until the state's non-native American bullfrog problem is addressed. California annually imports two million commercially-raised American bullfrogs for human consumption, plus an estimated 300,000 freshwater turtles, all taken from the wild. All are diseased and/or parasitized, though it is illegal to sell such products. These frogs are routinely released into local waters, where they prey upon and displace the native species.

The majority of the market bullfrogs test positive for a chytrid fungus (Batrachochytrium dendrobatidis, or Bd), which has caused the extinctions of some 200 amphibian species worldwide in recent years. The bullfrogs' continued presence in California poses a major threat to the yellow-legged frogs and others.

Despite 3,000+ letters since the mid-1990's, the California Dept. of Fish and Wildlife (DFW) continues to issue import permits for these animals, imperiling our native species and the public health. The permits should cease immediately. The Fish & Game Commission has twice voted unanimously to stop the permits, but were ignored by the Department.

PG&E to remove trees cut down after wildfire

SUBMITTED BY TAMAR SARKISSIAN

In response to customer and community requests, Pacific Gas and Electric Company (PG&E) will soon start dispatching crews to gather wood that was cut down following the SCU Complex Fire in 2020.

After the SCU Complex Fire, PG&E crews and contract vegetation management crews worked to restore power safely and quickly to customers. This included inspecting and cutting down hazardous trees that posed a potential safety risk to work crews or electric equipment. This work was done in coordination with CAL FIRE and other agencies responding to the wildfires.

After completing tree work, crews chipped wood that was less than four inches in diameter and spread the chips on-site, where possible. Because wood is considered the property of the landowner, any wood larger than four inches in diameter was left onsite. There is no legal or regulatory requirement to remove large-diameter wood, since it is the property of the landowner.

In response to customer and community feedback, crews will return to those sites and dispose of the large-diameter wood that PG&E crews cut down for safety following the 2020 wildfires, if safely accessible and approved by the property owner. Cut trees targeted for removal are in Alameda, Contra Costa and Santa Clara Counties.

PG&E has already completed the inventory portion of this work, which included contacting and working directly with customers who have wood that qualifies for the program. PG&E plans to begin removing wood in mid-August, with the goal of completing work this summer.

PG&E contractor crews will be performing this work and will carry identification to provide upon request. Customers who have questions about the Wood Management Program in 2020 wildfire areas should call 1 (877) 295-4949.

BART halves Clipper fares during September

SUBMITTED BY BART

As a welcome back to riders, BART is offering a 50% discount on per fares during September. The discount is stackable with other Clipper discounts, meaning that 50% off will be given on top of already discounted Clipper cards such as Youth, Senior, Regional Transit Connection (RTC), Clipper Start, and Gator Pass.

The reduced fare will be automatically deducted when using Clipper at the fare gates. The BART online Trip Planner and Fare Calculator pages have been updated to show discounted fares during September. Printed fare charts at vending machines in each station will not be changed for the month of September but a large decal will be posted noting there is 50% off the published fares.

BART's ridership continues to grow each week, following the downturn during the COVID-19 pandemic. Current weekday ridership is at 100,000 trips, representing 25% of pre-COVID weekday ridership. Weekends are recovering at a faster rate. Weekend ridership is at 45K-65K trips, representing 40% of pre-COVID weekend ridership.

As of September 1, the various transit agencies that connect with BART will have new schedules in place that offer improved connections between systems. Many agencies are also offering discounts and other special promotions during September. Transit riders can visit www.AllAboardBayArea.com for details on how all twenty-seven Bay Area agencies are collaborating to deliver services that will help jumpstart the region and get people where they need

The discount is only available when using Clipper on BART and is not available on magstripe paper tickets. BART officials report that 98.6% of BART riders use Clipper cards. There is a one-time $3.00 fee to purchase a new Clipper card from BART station vending machines.

Clipper is currently offering free Clipper cards when setting up a new Clipper card using the new Clipper app. The card is also free if users order it online and set up automatic reloading. Proof of eligibility is required for discount Clipper cards and therefore are not available at BART station vending machines. Visit the Clipper website at www.clippercard.com for details.

- Youths 5-18 years old get 50% off BART with a youth Clipper card.
- Seniors 65 and older get 62.5% off BART with a Senior Clipper card.
- Qualifying low-income adult riders get 20% off BART with Clipper START.

Catch Andromeda rising

By David Prosper

If you're thinking of a galaxy, the image in your head is probably the Andromeda Galaxy. Studies of this massive neighboring galaxy, also called M31, have played an incredibly important role in shaping modern astronomy. As a bonus for stargazers, the Andromeda Galaxy is also a beautiful sight.

Have you heard that all the stars you see at night are part of our Milky Way galaxy? While that is mostly true, one star-like object located near the border between the constellations of Andromeda and Cassiopeia appears fuzzy to unaided eyes. That's because it's not a star, but the Andromeda Galaxy, its trillion stars appearing to our eyes as a 3.4 magnitude patch of haze. Why so dim? Distance! It's outside our galaxy, around 2.5 million light years distant - so far away that the light you see left M31's stars when our earliest ancestors figured out stone tools. Binoculars show more detail: M31's bright core stands out, along with a bit of its wispy, saucer-shaped disc. Telescopes bring out greater detail but often can't view the entire galaxy at once. Depending on the quality of your skies and your magnification, you may be able to make out individual globular clusters, structure, and at least two of its orbiting dwarf galaxies: M110 and M32. Light pollution and thin clouds, smoke, or haze will severely hamper observing fainter detail, as they will for any "faint fuzzy." Surprisingly, persistent stargazers can still spot M31's core from areas of moderate light pollution as long as skies are otherwise clear.

Modern astronomy was greatly shaped by studies of the Andromeda Galaxy. A hundred years ago, the idea that there were other galaxies beside our own was not widely accepted, and so M31 was called the "Andromeda Nebula." Increasingly detailed observations of M31 caused astronomers to question its place in our universe - was M31 its own "island universe," and not part of our Milky Way? Harlow Shapley and Heber Curtis engaged in the "Great Debate" of 1920 over its nature. Curtis argued forcefully from his observations of dimmer than expected nova, dust lanes, and other oddities that the "nebula" was in fact an entirely different galaxy from our own. A few years later, Edwin Hubble, building on Henrietta Leavitt's work on Cepheid variable stars as a "standard candle" for distance measurement, concluded that M31 was indeed another galaxy after he observed Cepheids in photos of Andromeda, and estimated M31's distance as far outside our galaxy's boundaries. And so, the Andromeda Nebula became known as the Andromeda Galaxy.

These discoveries inspire astronomers to this day, who continue to observe M31 and many other galaxies for hints about the nature of our universe. One of the Hubble Space Telescope's longest-running observing campaigns was a study of M31: the Panchromatic Hubble Andromeda Treasury (PHAT) (bit.ly/m31phat). Dig into NASA's latest discoveries about the Andromeda Galaxy, and the cosmos at large, at nasa.gov.

Spot the Andromeda Galaxy! M31's more common name comes from its parent constellation, which becomes prominent as autumn arrives in the Northern Hemisphere. Surprising amounts of detail can be observed with unaided eyes from dark sky sites. Hints of it can even be made out from light polluted areas.

Cooperation brings new campground

A new campground near Dumbarton Bridge opened at the end of August, with hiking trails that link Don Edwards Shoreline on the south side of the bridge approach to Coyote Hills on the north side. The new Fremont campground has plenty of parking for cars, and can also accommodate dozens of RVs.

The opening ceremony brought the general manager and board directors of the park district together with the mayor, members of Fremont city council, the city recreation department and DeSilva Gates Construction. The campground is the product of 20 or 30 years of planning and negotiations. The public-private partnership began at a former open-pit quarry, more than 300 ft deep, that excavated more than five million cubic yards of concrete aggregate for local roads and buildings. Dumbarton Quarry Associates (DQA) is still the largest supplier of concrete asphalt in the Bay Area.

Quarry reclamation and the first phase of campground construction both began around 2013, funded by tipping (dumping) fees from nearly 10 million cubic yards of dirt fill and construction debris. But critics on the planning commission were fearful of urban development, and wrung their hands over possible noise, urbanization, light pollution, and petty crime. They would be apoplectic if another possible development scenario had come to pass, considering that the DeSilva Group has built more than 5,000 housing units around Bay Area quarries.

The new campground took nearly a decade of cooperation between city and park district planners and DQA. The campground project demonstrates that cooperation between the city and park district requires vision, funding and leadership, and brings amazing benefits.

This is the kind of cooperation that will be required to resolve the parking conflicts between the city, neighboring residents and the park district at Mission Peak Regional Preserve. Instead of restricting street parking and handing out thousands of parking tickets, the two agencies need to work together to enhance parking inside our parks.

WILLIAM YRAGUI MISSION PEAK CONSERVANCY

(about 3 Moon widths wide), its "galactic halo" is much, much larger – as you can see in the image. In fact, it is suspected that its halo is so huge that it may already mingle with our Milky Way's own halo, which makes sense since our galaxies are expected to merge sometime in the next few billion years. The dots are quasars, objects located behind the halo, which are the very energetic cores of distant galaxies powered by black holes at their center. The Hubble team studied the composition of M31's halo by measuring how the quasars' light was absorbed by the halo's material.

Park It

By NED MACKAY

East Bay Regional Park District is taking a two-pronged approach this year to annual California Coastal Cleanup Day.

The district will host in-person volunteer cleanup efforts on Saturday, September 18 at six regional parklands: Martin Luther King in Oakland, Crown Beach in Alameda, Point Isabel in Richmond, Radke Martinez, Del Valle south of Livermore, and Hayward Regional Shoreline.

These parklands will have starting times at 9 a.m., 10 a.m., 11 a.m. and noon with a maximum of 15 participants per hour. The parks will be open for regular use, but only registered Coastal Cleanup participants will be given cleanup gear.

Pre-registration is required. Information and registration are available at https://www.ebparks.org/about/g etinvolved/volunteer/events.htm.

In addition, the district is encouraging self-guided neighborhood coastal cleanup efforts. Volunteers are encouraged to assemble their own gear and host a cleanup in their neighborhood or local park.

Report your Coastal Cleanup hours and receive a Coastal Cleanup patch and/or sticker. For information, visit ebparks.org/coastalcleanup or call (510) 544-2515.

Hayward's farming and pioneer past will come to life on Saturday, September 11 during the Garin Apple Festival at Garin Regional Park. From noon to 4 p.m., activities will include ice cream making, old-fashioned games, crafts, blacksmithing demonstrations, and tours of Garin's apple orchard, where volunteers tend trees that grow heritage apple varieties no longer available in stores. Masks are required and social distancing between participants must be maintained.

This is a drop-in program; no registration is required. The festival is free of charge, though Garin Regional Park has a parking fee of $5 per vehicle when the kiosk is attended. Garin is located at the end of Garin Avenue off Mission Boulevard in Hayward. For information, call (510) 544-3220.

There are plenty of other activities on schedule the same weekend in the regional parks.

For example, there's a "Fire on the Mountain" hike from 8:30 a.m. to 10:30 a.m. on Saturday, September 11 at Black Diamond Mines Regional Preserve in Antioch.

Meet naturalist Ashley Adams in the parking lot at the south end of Somersville Road for a moderate 1½ - mile hike through the chaparral to see how fire is impacting California. Ashley will describe how wildlife lives with fire, and how the district is working to protect parklands. Bring plenty of water and sun protection.

The program is free, but registration is required. If air quality is bad, the program will be virtual. Black Diamond Mines has a parking fee of $5 per vehicle when the kiosk is attended. For registration and information, call (888) 327-2757, option 2.

And at Big Break Regional Shoreline in Oakley, it's "Trash Talk" time from 10:00 a.m. to 10:30 a.m., 11:00 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. and noon to 12:30 p.m. on Saturday, September 11. Through enjoyable and safe hands-on activities, learn how plastic trash enters the waterways and harms our environment.

The program is geared for children 6 through 13 and their caretakers, though all ages are welcome. Chaperones are required for everyone under 18 years.

All visitors over two years must wear face coverings while participating, and all group members must arrive together. Late arrivals may not be admitted. Plan to come five minutes early. The program repeats at the same time on Sunday, September 12. It's free, but registration is required. Call (888) 327-2757.

Or you can join a naturalist for a walk from 10 a.m. to noon on Saturday, September 11 at Reinhardt Redwood Regional Park in Oakland. It's a three-mile mostly flat stroll though the beautiful redwoods.

Meet at the Wayside staging area, which is reached via the park entrance on Redwood Road, about two miles down the hill from the intersection with Skyline Boulevard in Oakland.

The hike is free of charge and registration is not necessary. Just show up. There's a parking fee of $5 per vehicle when the kiosk is attended.

For information, call (510) 544-3187.

The nectar garden at Coyote Hills Regional Park in Fremont is a great place to find out about native plants and the importance of insects that pollinate them. There's a program at the nectar garden from 11 a.m. to noon on Sunday, September 12. It's dropin, registration is not required, and all ages are welcome. Masks, social distancing, and parental participation are necessary.

Coyote Hills is at the end of Patterson Ranch Road off Paseo Padre Parkway. The program is free; there's a parking fee of $5 per vehicle.

For information, call (510) 544-3220.

These are just a few of the programs scheduled. For a full list, visit the park district website at www.ebparks.org and click on "Activities" at the top of the home page.

Injuries mar Gladiators' season opener

This wasn't the kind of restart the Chabot College football team was looking for.

Coming off a canceled season due to COVID-19, the Gladiators fell 41-7 to visiting Fresno City Saturday afternoon, September 4th, in their long-awaited nonconference opener. It marked Chabot's first game since a loss to Laney on Nov. 16, 2019. While the rust was obvious, it wasn't the first thing that troubled the Gladiators (0-1). That came in the injury department.

In the first play of the game, 6-foot-6 offensive lineman Shively Fua went down with a leg injury. "Lose a Division I tackle right there," Chabot head coach Eric Fanene said. "He's our best guy." On Chabot's next offensive series, another starting offensive lineman, 6-7 Christopher Pole, went down with a leg injury. "Lose our other tackle," Fanene said. "Another top guy." To make matters worse, starting quarterback L.T. Beck departed with a concussion with 11:08 left in the second quarter. "That just changes your game plan," said Fanene.

And while offensive struggles seemed imminent after that trio of injuries, it was still a competitive game in the first half. The Gladiators (ranked 25th in the Junior College Athletic Bureau poll) featured a stingy defense, despite a lopsided final score. Chabot held an explosive Fresno City (1-0) offense to just 154 yards of (104 passing) and a hard-earned 14 points in the first half.

But the cards were ultimately stacked against Chabot.

It was almost fitting that the only score for Chabot came from the defense. With just over four minutes left in the game, Fresno quarterback Isaiah Robles hit wide receiver Tabari Rollins near the left hash mark, but a streaking Jaymin Galios dashed in and punched the ball loose. An alert Kingston Sapoi scooped up the ball at the 22 and raced into the end zone. It was especially gratifying for Sapoi, a newcomer to the program who moved here from Utah two months ago; only a phone call to Fanene led him to the Gladiators.

Electric boats making waves without the noise

By John Marshall Associated Press

The auto industry has raced ahead on an electric wave with more manufacturers joining the race seemingly every day.

The boating industry has sputtered far behind, bogged down by low-horsepower engines and batteries that take up nearly half the boat.

That's in the process of changing.

Bolstered by new technology, the electric boats are now faster, have smaller batteries with longer ranges and are still zero emission.

"Electric boats used to be good for just cruising around," said Alex Mongeon, CEO of Montreal-based Vision Marine Technologies. "Now they have more power and last a long longer."

Vision Marine has helped lead the charge in more powerful electric boats. Other companies riding the electric motor wave include Swedish luxury boat builder X Shore and Arc, started by former SpaceX employees.

An avid boat racer and electrician by trade, Mongeon and Vision Marine began working in 2015 on developing a more powerful yet still efficient electric outboard motor.

They created the E-Motion 180, the first electric boat engine to use lithium batteries.

The electric outboard boasts 180 horsepower and can reach speeds of 60 mph, a first in electric boating. The E-motion 180, which costs about $5,000 more than a standard internal combustion engine, can be used with any boats that use a 180 HP outboard gas engine, typically between 18 to 26 feet.

The engines can fully charge overnight and all that's needed is a 220-volt outlet _ a boating version of plug and play. Maintenance is far less than ICE engines because there are fewer moving parts.

The electric engines are noiseless, odorless and smokeless, so there's no more yelling at each other while onboard or leaving a layer of smoke in your wake.

Sales of the E-Motion 180 started in May with delivery expected later this year.

"It is so cool because nobody has gone to this comparable horsepower," said Randy Trusedale, chief operating officer of SBX Marine, a Florida-based custom boat builder and brokerage company. "You see some of the electric motors, you might get one that says it's, you know, 50 to 70 horsepower equivalent, but nobody's done what we're doing with the new 180."

Electric boating has been embraced by celebrities like Drake, Robert De Niro and Greta Thunberg, according to Vision Marine. Many tour operators have turned to electric boats, and so have cities for rental and water taxis.

Many waters have been designated marine protected areas _ 26% in the United States, according to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration _ which ban motorized boats. Many allow electric boats because they are cleaner and emit no sound.

"The only sound you'll hear is the water hitting the hull and people enjoying themselves," Mongeon said.

And a lot more people have been enjoying themselves on the water during the pandemic.

According to National Marine Manufacturers Association, sales of powerboats were up 12% in 2020 with more than 310,000 new sales, the highest numbers since before the recession of 2008.

Boat rental companies have seen their numbers soar as well, including a 700% growth year-over-year growth for GetMyBoat, the world's largest boat rental company.

"In the rental cycle, it has become hugely popular because of the great activity for people who don't necessarily want to buy a boat," Trusedale said. "You can kind of relate to what's going on with COVID and allowing people to get outside. Boats are kind of like the perfect tool for social distancing."

The new era of electric boats, with the added power and limited environmental impact, are making it even more enjoyable.

Ohlone Volleyball beats pandemic on and off the court

SUBMITTED BY OHLONE COLLEGE

Ohlone College's Volleyball team is among 1,281 collegiate and high school teams that have earned the United States Marine Corps and American Volleyball Coaches Association Team Academic Award for the 2020-2021 season. The award honors volleyball teams that maintain a year-long grade-point average of 3.30 on a 4.0 scale.

"I'm amazed and incredibly proud of our athletes and team for this achievement, especially in such a tough environment that the pandemic presents," said Head Volleyball Coach Jeremy Penaflor.

For years, the ladies of Ohlone College Volleyball have achieved high marks in the classroom, regularly transferring student-athletes of the program to the university of their choice. In fact, each year at least one graduating sophomore graduates with highest honors. That record was put to the test this past 2020-21 academic year.

With question marks looming during a year of a pandemic learning, student-athletes all over the state and nation were put to the test to try and learn in ways they likely had never done before. But the Renegades Volleyball student-athletes took on those challenges and thrived together as a team.

"I know each of the girls had many other difficulties to deal with aside from what I knew about," adds Coach Penaflor, "and, despite all the stuff going on around them they were still able to kill it in the classroom while developing their game on the court."

The Renegades achieved a program high 3.747 grade point average for the spring semester and cumulative GPA of 3.621 for the 2020-21 academic year. With 5 of the 10 athletes achieving a 4.000 GPA this past spring it's no wonder the team achieved such high marks.

Recall election comment

In July 1993, I faced a Republican-led attempt to recall me from my seat on the City Council of the City of Union City. I beat the recall by ONE vote. The cause of the recall was Governor Pete Wilson's inability to balance the 1992 state budget, until he stripped billions of dollars from cities, counties, and special districts, right after all of us had adopted our own balanced budgets.

This cost my city $1.2 million, which we tried to backfill by raising our Landscape and Lighting District's annual fee by $32. Our alternative was to turn off our streetlights, close all our parks, and layoff police and other city employees.

Every Republican California governor since Wilson has failed to adequately fund our schools, road maintenance, and so many other vital governmental responsibilities. Remember that Arnold was going to "blow up the boxes" in order to shrink our government. I think that the only boxes that he blew up were the ones his cigars came in. He left a huge deficit, even after borrowing $5B one year.

Please VOTE NO on the republican run recall.

WILLIAM MARSHAK

Over the course of our lives, there are moments indelibly etched within us. Details of where, when and what happened are permanently seared in our psyche without diminishing, even as time works its will on other aspects of existence. Each person's particular life cycle and context of awareness determines the importance and lasting image of a memorable event. For some, historical perspective is personal... they lived through and experienced elation, trauma or attendant emotions first-hand. For others who either were too young or not born yet, the impact is felt as related by others - visual, oral and/or written.

September 11, 2001 is one of those moments when memories flood in for those who experienced the horror, disbelief and realization of a major external, lethal attack on the United States of America. At the time, such major invasive events were few and far between, bolstering confidence that the insulation of oceans and distance was enough to minimize such things. Although terrible internal and external conflicts existed, the belief that our nation could and would survive relatively intact - warts and all - was widely believed.

In modern history, internal strife over civil rights, foreign wars, sporadic bomb threats, air hijackings, the cold war, even assassinations and more, were unnerving, unsettling and divisive, but a full and successful frontal attack by a foreign adversary on American soil was largely unknown except for a dwindling senior population that experienced the assault on Pearl Harbor in 1941. It happened again... and those who experienced the shock and horror of that day will never forget it!

Unfortunately, such personal memories only last for a generation. With an average U.S. lifespan of approximately 79 years, political influence and institutional memory is limited through choice or age. As a consequence, many similar patterns, often pockmarked with grievous mistakes, are repeated with disastrous results. Those who live through these recurrent cycles recognize their emergence and consequences, but transferring the information is difficult when personal experience of others is lacking.

The haunting melody of "Memory" from Andrew Lloyd Webber (lyrics by Trevor Nunn) in the 1981 hit musical production of Cats captures a sense of a lost past that asks for validation and remembrance. The play, based on the poems of T.S. Eliot (1888-1965) in Old Possum's Book of Practical Cats (1939), written though his alter ego of "Old Possum", creates the cat, Grizabella, who recalls a glorious past during a night of remembrance and request for acceptance even as the present and future slide away to become the past. Grizabella sings yearns to "Let the memory live again" but understands that:

When the dawn comes Tonight will be a memory too And a new day will begin

GM, Ford halt some production as chip shortage worsens

By Tom Krisher ASSOCIATED PRESS

The global shortage of computer chips is getting worse, forcing automakers to temporarily close factories including those that build popular pickup trucks.

General Motors announced Thursday that it would pause production at eight North American plants during the next two weeks, including two that make the company's top-selling Chevrolet Silverado pickup.

Ford will stop making pickups at its Kansas City Assembly Plant for the next two weeks. Shifts will be cut at two more truck plants in Dearborn, Michigan, and Louisville,

The cuts will compound an already short supply of cars, trucks and SUVs on dealer lots nationwide that have pushed prices to record levels. Automakers reported that U.S. dealers had just under a million new vehicles on their lots in August, 72% lower than the 3.58 million in August of 2019.

"It now appears to be accelerating in the wrong direction," said Jeff Schuster, president of global vehicle forecasting for LMC Automotive, a consulting firm.

Industry analysts say the delta variant of the novel coronavirus has hit employees at chip factories in southeast Asia hard, forcing some plants to close. That's worsened a chip shortage that was starting to improve earlier in the summer.

household items, and more.

"Now the prospects for new sales for the rest of the year continue to dim with the reality that tight inventory will last well into 2022," said Kevin Roberts, director of industry insights for Cargurus.com.

Demand for trucks, SUVs and other autos is strong, but buyers are growing frustrated due to lack of inventory and high prices. U.S. light vehicle sales fell nearly 18% in August compared with a year ago, while the average vehicle sale price hit over $41,000, a record, according to J.D. Power.

Sales of Ford's F-Series trucks fell nearly 23% for the month.

The August sales dip and inventory shortages prompted Schuster to cut his U.S. sales forecast for the year to 15.7 million. Until the pandemic hit, sales had been running around 17 million per year.

Consumers who need a new vehicle don't have many choices with dealer supplies so short, Schuster said. Some have left the market because they can't find anything that meets their needs. For others, "pricing is through the roof, so they can't afford it and aren't willing to spend what it's going to cost to get that vehicle."

GM is shutting down pickup truck plants in Fort Wayne, Indiana, and Silao, Mexico, for a week starting Monday. A plant in Wentzville, Missouri, that builds midsize pickups and big vans will close for two weeks. Other plants that make small and midsize SUVs will be idled for two weeks or longer.

"These recent scheduling adjustments are being driven by the continued parts shortages caused by semiconductor supply constraints from international markets experiencing COVID-19-related restrictions," GM said in a statement.

The GM and Ford cuts come on top of temporary plant closures announced previously by Toyota, Nissan and Stellantis, formerly Fiat Chrysler.

Stellantis shut down its Ram truck assembly plant in Sterling Heights, Michigan this week due to the chip shortage. The company's Belvidere, Illinois, small-SUV plant and a minivan plant in Windsor, Ontario are down for two weeks.

Toyota said it would slash production by at least 40% in Japan and North America for the next two months, cutting production by 360,000 vehicles worldwide in September

Nissan, which announced in mid-August that chip shortages would force it to close its huge factory in Smyrna, Tennessee, for two weeks until Aug. 30, now says the closure will last four weeks, until Sept. 13.

There is a little good news. Ford said its overall production rose 76% from July to August, although it's not clear how long that would last.

California moves slowly on water projects amid drought

By Adam Beam Associated Press

In 2014, in the middle of a severe drought that would test California's complex water storage system like never before, voters told the state to borrow $7.5 billion and use part of it to build projects to stockpile more water.

Seven years later, that drought has come and gone, replaced by an even hotter and drier one that is draining the state's reservoirs at an alarming rate. But none of the more than half-dozen water storage projects scheduled to receive that money have been built.

The largest project by far is a proposed lake in Northern California, which would be the state's first new reservoir of significant size in more than 40 years. People have talked about building the Sites Reservoir since the 1950s. But the cost, plus shifting political priorities, stopped it from happening.

Now, a major drought gripping the western United States has put the project back in the spotlight. It's slated to get $836 million in taxpayer money to help cover it's $3.9 billion price tag if project officials can meet a deadline by year's end. The Biden administration recently committed $80 million to the reservoir; the largest appropriation of any water storage scheduled to receive funding next year. And the project could get some of the $1.15 billion included in an infrastructure bill that has passed the U.S. Senate.

Still, the delay has frustrated some lawmakers, who view it as a wasted opportunity now that the state is preparing to cut of water to thousands of farmers in the Central Valley because of a shortage. "The longer you don't build, the more expensive it gets," said Republican state Sen. Brian Dahle, whose rural Northern California district includes farmers.

Storage was once the centerpiece of California's water management strategy, highlighted by a building bonanza in the mid-20th century of a number of dams and reservoirs. But in the more than 40 years since California last opened a major new reservoir, the politics and policy have shifted toward a more environmental focus that has caused tension between urban and rural legislators and the communities they represent.

The voter-approved bond in 2014 was supposed to jump-start a number of long-delayed storage projects. But some experts say the delays aren't surprising, given the complexities and environmental hazards that come with building new water projects.

"We have about 1,500 reservoirs in California. If you assume people are smart -- which they kind of are most of the time -- they will have built reservoirs at the 1,500 best reservoir sites already," said Jay Lund, co-director of the Center for Watershed Sciences at the University of California-Davis. "What you have left over is more expensive sites that give you less water."

California's Mediterranean climate means it gets most of its rain and snow in the winter and spring, followed by hot, dry summers and falls that see rivers and streams dry up. The largest of California's reservoirs are operated by the state and federal governments, although neither has built a new one since the 1979 New Melones Lake near Sonora, about 50 miles northwest of Yosemite National Park.

That could change with the Sites Reservoir project, which would flood what's left of the town of Sites, located in a valley amid California's coast range mountains. The town's roots go back to the 1850s, when John Sites, a German immigrant, settled there. At its peak in the late 1800s and early 1900s, it was known for a sandstone quarry that provided building materials throughout the state, including the iconic Ferry Building in San Francisco.

But when the quarry closed shortly after World War I, the town slowly dwindled. Fire destroyed many of the buildings, leaving behind about 10 houses on unirrigated land that can only be used for agriculture during the rainy season. Officials would have to eventually buy those properties from residents to build the reservoir. With only two ways in and out of the valley, it's an ideal spot to flood and turn into a massive lake to store water.

But unlike most California reservoirs, Sites would not be connected to a river or stream. Instead, operators would have to pump water from the Sacramento River whenever it has extra to give. The idea is to take advantage of wet years like 2018, when California got so much rain and snow in the Sierra Nevada mountains that reservoirs were filled beyond capacity.

"We're really redefining how water is developed in California," said Jerry Brown, executive director of the Sites Project Authority, who has no relation to the former governor of the same name.

Pumping the water is expensive, which, along with concern from environmental groups, is one reason the reservoir has been talked about for more than 60 years but never built. Many environmental groups argue the reservoir would do more harm than good because they say operators would have to pull way more water than is environmentally safe from the Sacramento River to make the project feasible.

"Fundamentally, it is a deadbeat dam, a pretty marginal project, or else it would have been built years ago," said Ron Stork, a senior policy advocate for Friends of the River, an environmental advocacy group.

Gov. Gavin Newsom's administration, which included the Sites Reservoir in its water plan, sees the reservoir as a way to prepare for a future impacted by climate change. California's reservoir system is designed to capture water from melted snow in the mountains. But climate change could mean less snow and more rain, which the state is not as equipped to capture.

"We are going to start swinging to more extremes, (a) dry, deep drought or big flood," said Karla Nemeth, director of the California Department of Water Resources. "I do think there is some value to those kinds of projects."

It will cost $3.9 billion to build the Sites Reservoir, and that's after project leaders made it smaller to shave about $1 billion off the price tag. Most of the money will come from customers who will buy the water, the federal government and bank loans. California taxpayers have pledged about $836 million to the project from a bond voters approved in 2014.

But to use that money, project leaders have to meet a deadline by the end of the year to show the idea is feasible. "I'm absolutely confident," Brown said. "It's going to be close, but it's going to make it."

Senate approves Wieckowski debt collection bill

SUBMITTED BY JEFF BARBOSA

With no opposition, California State Senate approved legislation by Senator Bob Wieckowski (D-Fremont) on September 1 to give consumers more protection when dealing with assigned debt collectors who operate with fewer restrictions than those governing debt that is sold. SB 531, which was approved with bipartisan support earlier in the week in the Assembly, next heads to Governor Gavin Newsom for his consideration.

"SB 531 will raise the standards for collectors working with assigned debt and make them more accountable to consumers, just as we do with collectors working with debt that is sold," said Wieckowski, a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee. "It will eliminate the lax oversight of collectors who do not operate under the Fair Debt Buying Practices Act. Abusive collection tactics must be eliminated and providing consumers with more transparency about their debt will address the complaints about collectors that legal service providers are hearing from their clients."

After numerous complaints of collections against the wrong person, targeting debt that had already been paid and attempts to collect incorrect debt amounts, the Legislature enacted the Fair Debt Buying Practices Act in 2013. The act addressed these issues by requiring debt buyers, who have debt sold to them, to have proof of their ownership and it allowed consumers to request that proof. The law also required disclosure of how much debt is owed, any fees or interests and the date of the last payment.

The Bureau of Consumer Financial Protection found that one of the top nationwide complaints it received from consumers were collectors attempting to collect on debt that was not owed. It was also a top complaint among California consumers.

SB 531 requires collectors who have debt assigned to them to have proof that they have authority to collect the debt. The consumer could request the proof and other basic information about the debt.

"It will allow debtors to better understand the debt collection process," said Leigh Ferrin, director of litigation and pro bono at the Public Law Center. "It is common for hospital and medical debts to be assigned to a third-party collector rather than sold. But unfortunately for consumers, the protections of the Fair Debt Buying Practices Act do not apply and the collector is not required to give them basic information about their debt. SB 531 will change that and give people the information they need to resolve their debt issues more quickly."

The bill is also supported by the California Low-Income Consumer Coalition, Center for Responsible Lending, Neighborhood Legal Services of Los Angeles County and the Western Center on Law and Poverty.

Wieckowski represents the 10th District in the State Senate, which includes southern Alameda County and parts of Santa Clara County. Constituents who need information or assistance on state issues can call the senator's district office at (510) 794-3900 or send an email to https://sd10.senate.ca.gov/contact/email.

Redistricting Public Hearing Meetings

SUBMITTED BY THE CITY OF FREMONT

Every 10 years, local governments use new data from the Census to redraw their district lines to reflect how local populations have changed. State law requires cities and counties to engage communities in the redistricting process by holding public hearings and doing public outreach, including to underrepresented and non-English-speaking communities. The City of Fremont is asking for your help to plan, draw, and redivide new City districts.

The finalized maps that you will help us create and define the seven City of Fremont district borders, and these new districts will impact how you elect your Council Members for the next 10 years.

Our primary goal when developing election districts is to draw lines that respect neighborhoods, history and geographical elements. We want to know: What do you consider the boundaries of your neighborhood? Share your specific thoughts, draw a map, or attend an upcoming workshop to get involved!

Submit written testimony about the process or a specific map to RedistrictFremont2021@fremont.gov.

Go to https://redistrictfremont.org/schedule/ to see the calendar of workshops and public hearings at which you can speak about the process or a specific map.

At the hearings and workshops, we want you to:

- Share your story
- Define your neighborhood or community of interest
- Explain why redistricting is relevant to your community
- Get the tools you need to draw a map of one district or of all seven districts
- Share your opinions of the draft maps
- Talk to your neighbors and local organizations

AC Transit offers free fares on Fridays

SUBMITTED BY ROBERT LYLES

As a thank-you to its riders for their support during the pandemic months, Alameda-Contra Costa Transit District (AC Transit) is offering free fares on Fridays during September.

On September 10, 17, and 24, riders may board any AC Transit local and Transbay route without fare payment from 12:01 a.m. to 11:59 p.m. At boarding, farebox and Clipper card readers will be covered. Additionally, Tempo Line 1T platform ticket vending machines, and mobile fare payment systems will also be deactivated each Friday in September.

Despite the pandemic-induced closures of most schools and many offices over the past 17-months, AC Transit never stopped rolling. AC Transit officials said reliable service was made possible by the development of new and industry-leading enhancements designed to safeguard commutes, including the installation of the highest-level filters for heating, air conditioning, and ventilation systems of every bus; daily antiviral fogging and cleaning; new contactless payment options, and free facemasks and hand sanitizer on every bus.

Riders are responding by steadily returning to transit, according to AC Transit officials. At the close of July, there were just over 70,500 daily weekday riders across the system. As of August 16, average weekday ridership rose to 83,900, a positive 6.5% week-over-week increase.

With more employees returning to offices and schools reopening, AC Transit has boosted bus services to meet increased commuter needs. In early August, it launched a service restoration and expansion plan, which restored supplementary 600-bus lines to schools, Early Bird Express bus lines to support BART, All-Nighter 800-bus lines, and select Transbay bus lines.

AC Transit recently lifted physical distancing requirements and returned to pre-pandemic bus capacity limits, but is continuing to enforce federal mandates, which require public transit riders to wear face coverings at all times. For more information about the agency's health and safety efforts, visit the AC Transit COVID-19 Information Center at www.actransit.org/covid-19.

Behind on energy bills? New PG&E program can help

SUBMITTED BY TAMAR SARKISSIAN, PG&E

As part of ongoing efforts to provide help and assistance for customers to manage their bills, Pacific Gas and Electric Company (PG&E) will auto-enroll eligible customers in new extended payment arrangements by the end of September 2021. The new program coincides with the ending of the service-disconnection moratorium which is part of the COVID-19 emergency customer protections in place since March 2020.

"We are here to help customers during these times of increasing financial hardships. We want as many customers who are eligible to take advantage of these programs. Even as COVID-19 customer protections come to an end, our support won't. The new payment plans were created to assist customers pay down their past-due balance over time and protect them from disconnection of service due to non-payment," said Marlene Santos, PG&E executive vice president and chief customer officer.

Residential and small business customers with a PG&E bill at least 60 days past due will automatically be enrolled over the next few weeks starting with their September bill.

The monthly payment plan amount for residential customers will be their outstanding balance equally divided over 24 months. For example, if a residential customer owes $1,200 the payment arrangement would be $50 a month. Payment installations for small business customers will be calculated based on no more than 10% of their average bill (5% for customers in disadvantaged communities) over the past 24 months.

To view the amount of their payment plan installations customers can sign into their PG&E account online. It will also be on their monthly energy statement under the Account Summary section.

Residential customers who miss more than two payments, and small business customers who miss one payment within a 12-month period, will be removed from the payment plan. As a last resort, gas and/or electric service may be disrupted approximately 45 days later unless payment is received. Disconnection of service is an action that PG&E does not take lightly. Customers having a hard time paying their bills should contact PG&E immediately at (800) 743-5000.

Automatic enrollment in the new payment plan program will not change enrollment in existing financial assistance programs. PG&E encourages customers struggling to pay their bills to learn more about the following programs:

- Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP) offers up to $1,000 to pay eligible household energy costs.
- Relief for Energy Assistance through Community Help (REACH) Program offers one-time financial assistance to qualified customers with past-due bills.
- Arrearage Management Plan (AMP) offers up to $8,000 in unpaid balance forgiveness, if a customer is enrolled in the California Alternate Rates for Energy

SpaceX launches ants, avocados, robot to space station

By Marcia Dunn AP AEROSPACE WRITER

A SpaceX shipment of ants, avocados and a human-sized robotic arm rocketed toward the International Space Station on Sunday, August 29. The delivery – due to arrive Monday, August 30 – is the company's 23rd for NASA in just under a decade.

A recycled Falcon rocket blasted into the predawn sky from NASA's Kennedy Space Center. After hoisting the Dragon capsule, the first-stage booster landed upright on SpaceX's newest ocean platform, named "A Shortfall of Gravitas." SpaceX founder Elon Musk continued his tradition of naming the booster-recovery vessels in tribute to the late science fiction writer Iain Banks and his Culture series.

The Dragon is carrying more than 4,800 pounds (2,170 kilograms) of supplies and experiments, and fresh food including avocados, lemons and even ice cream for the space station's seven astronauts.

The Girl Scouts are sending up ants, brine shrimp and plants as test subjects, while University of Wisconsin-Madison scientists are flying up seeds from mouse-ear cress, a small flowering weed used in genetic research. Samples of concrete, solar cells and other materials also will be subjected to weightlessness.

A Japanese start-up company's experimental robotic arm, meanwhile, will attempt to screw items together in its orbital debut and perform other mundane chores normally done by astronauts. The first tests will be done inside the space station. Future models of Gitai Inc.'s robot will venture out into the vacuum of space to practice satellite and other repair jobs, said chief technology officer Toyotaka Kozuki. As early as 2025, a squad of these arms could help build lunar bases and mine the moon for precious resources, he added.

SpaceX had to leave some experiments behind because of delays resulting from COVID-19. It was the second launch attempt; Saturday's try (August 28) was foiled by stormy weather.

NASA turned to SpaceX and other U.S. companies to deliver cargo and crews to the space station, once the space shuttle program ended in 2011.

Former police sergeant sentenced in embezzlement case

SUBMITTED BY ALAMEDA COUNTY DISTRICT ATTORNEY'S OFFICE AND CITY OF SAN LEANDRO

Robert Frank Sanchez, a former sergeant with San Leandro Police Department, was sentenced September 1 to two years' felony probation and 240 hours of community service for falsely claiming overtime hours in the police department's payroll system.

Officials from the Alameda County District Attorney's Office said Sanchez also has been ordered to pay a maximum of $46,815.88 in restitution stemming from grand theft from the police department.

An investigation done by the DA's office showed that between August 2019 and March 2020, Sanchez had claimed overtime and compensatory time while not working, including while he was on family trips or vacation, and in other instances he erased vacation, sick and compensatory time he had taken. The total loss due to fraud was determined to be $16,702.88.

The case was referred to district attorney's office in April 2020, and the 19-year veteran was placed on administrative leave and later retired from the department. After its investigation, the DA's office charged Sanchez with embezzlement and misappropriation of funds. In June, Sanchez pleaded no contest to felony grand theft in a negotiated disposition. According to the DA's office, Sanchez has repaid $16,702.88 to the city; the remaining restitution amount covers the cost of an independent forensic audit and legal fees incurred by the city's attorney.

In the wake of the investigation, San Leandro officials said the city has instituted new safeguards, including bi-weekly audits of payroll conducted by its Finance Department, to ensure an incident such as this never happens again.

"This was clearly a violation of the public trust," said Mayor Pauline Russo Cutter, "but it is important to remember that it was our own women and men of the San Leandro Police Department that stopped this violation and made possible the justice we see today. I am confident the proper steps have been taken to protect our hard-earned taxpayer dollars from a repeat of what was a painful and sad event."

Las Positas College to Honor and Remember 20th Anniversary of 9/11

SUBMITTED BY LAS POSITAS COLLEGE

Las Positas College (LPC) is hosting its annual 9/11 Remembrance ceremony this year on September 9, 2021 at 11 a.m. The virtual ceremony will begin with the traditional singing of the national anthem as the Reserve Officers' Training Corps (ROTC) Air Force honor guard presents the colors. Keynote speaker Dr. Nicole B. Simpson, a 9/11 World Trade Center survivor, will then share her story of resilience and healing in the years since the terrorist attack, which killed more than 2,970 Americans and injured an estimated 6,000 more. Simpson worked on the 73rd floor of Tower II.

Since then, Simpson has had to walk the long road to recovery and learn how to heal from the horrific events of that day. She now serves as a motivational speaker, author and certified financial planner, who has been featured on CNN Live and BBC World News. This event is co-sponsored by Las Positas College Office of the President.

Students, alumni and the general public are invited to attend the virtual event. The observance is sponsored by the LPC President's Office, the LPC Veterans First Program and the college's Student Veterans Organization. The Veterans First Program provides former service members and their families with resources to help them achieve their educational goals. This past academic year, more than 500 veterans, military members and their family members were enrolled at the college.

Veteran support services at LPC include a team of full-time staff which includes a program supervisor, a Veterans counselor and Veterans Specialist who provide assistance and services, such as priority registration, Veteran's scholarships, a book loan program, a study/drop-in Veterans Resource Center, work-study program and an active Student Veterans Organization. This year the Veterans First Program will be launching a new program Veterans First: Mission READY. For more information, please visit the website at www.laspositascollege.edu/veterans

On September 23, 2021, at or after 7:00 p.m. the Newark City Council will hold a public hearing to consider:
Draft Old Town Newark Specific Plan
The City of Newark is proposing a specific plan for an area of the city known as Old Town Newark. The draft Old Town Specific Plan boundaries are generally identified by Elm Street, Dairy Avenue, Cherry Street and Graham Avenue (see draft plan for actual boundaries). The draft Old Town Newark Specific Plan has an overarching goal to create a vibrant, more walkable and pedestrian-friendly commercial district. The Specific Plan allows for greater residential development in a commercial/mixed-use district format that will allow future residents better walking access to basic goods and services as well as dining and some employment options. The proposed changes would result in a net gain of 29,000 square feet of commercial space and 400 residential units. It also modifies development standards in the residential zoning districts adjacent to the Old Town Commercial Core to provide a better transition between the higher density core and lower density neighborhoods. This will also increase the residential zoning districts adjacent to the Old Town Commercial Tore to provide a better transition between the higher density core and lower density neighborhoods. This will also increase the residential population that can walk to the services and goods provided in the area of the specific plan. As part of this public hearing, the City Council will consider the adoption of the Old Town Specific Plan, a General Plan amendment, a Zoning Mapamendment and a CEQA Addendum to the 2013 General Plan Environmental Impact Report. The Planning Commission reviewed and unanimously (vote 5-0) recommended adoption of the Draft Old Town Newark Specific Plans-master-plans/old-town-newark-specific-plans-master-plans/old-town-newark-specific-plan Plan amendment, Zoning Mapamendment and CEQA Addendum to the 2013 General Plan Environmental Impact Report. Asian American bakeries find bicultural sweet spot

By Terry Tang ASSOCIATED PRESS

For some Asian Americans, the dim sum cookie at Sunday Bakeshop here will taste like childhood. It looks like a typical sugar cookie except with sesame seeds on top. But bite into the creamy, red bean center and it's reminiscent of the fried, filled sesame balls served at a Chinese dim sum restaurant.

The concoction is pastry chef Elaine Lau's nod to her grandmother, who would often make them. The baked goods that Lau's team churns out -- like hojicha chocolate croissants and Chinese White Rabbit candy cookies -- aren't going to be found in any bakery in Asia. There's an intrinsic American sensibility at the nearly three-month-old shop.

"Talking to some of the Asian Americans and other people that have tried some of our pastries, we get a lot of comments where they're just like... 'Oh this took me back several years,' when they were growing up," said Lau, 35, who was born in Oakland. "For us, it's kind of nice we can evoke some positive memories and feelings with our pastries."

From ube cakes to mochi muffins, bakeries that sweetly encapsulate growing up Asian and American have been popping up more in recent years. Their confections are a delectable vehicle for young and intrepid Asian Americans to celebrate their dual identity.

Ingredients they found embarrassing as children are being blended with European or "traditional" American pastries into something new. Some of the bakers welcome the chance to dispel culinary and societal misconceptions, especially given months of anti-Asian hate.

The experience of being an immigrant kid in between two very different cultures is what inspired the name and concept behind Third Culture Bakery, a few miles away from Sunday Bakeshop, in Berkeley. Open since 2018, it's the brainchild of husbands Wenter Shyu, 31, and Sam Butarbutar, 32. Nine months into their courtship, they decided to open a bakery together and expand Butarbutar's mochi muffin business beyond wholesale and pop-ups. The mochi muffin, still a signature item, is influenced by Butarbutar's Indonesian roots and made with California-grown mochiko rice flour.

The operation has blossomed, with two locations in Colorado and a second San Francisco Bay Area store planned. Their menu includes mochi brownies and butter mochi doughnuts with glazes like matcha, ube and black sesame.

Shyu said many non-Asian patrons have never been exposed to some of the ingredients. "It's a lot of educating. Even when you educate and share where it comes from, people are judging it. It's a very mixed bag. It's also very rewarding because then you get to see their reaction trying this new thing they've never had in their life," he said.

Shyu recalls some awkward situations, such as one in May when Third Culture was featured on a Denver TV station as part of Asian American Pacific Islander Heritage Month. The finished segment included "Oriental music" that Shyu, who was born in Taiwan, described as "cringe-y and uncomfortable."

"I told the news station, if you guys did a piece on Black History Month and added tribal African music, there would be an outrage," Shyu said. "Somehow for Asian Americans, that's OK. That's the exact thing we're trying to fight against."

For these bakeries, integrating Asian flavor profiles isn't a gimmick. It's what feels natural and authentic, said Deuki Hong, 31, whose Sunday Family Hospitality Group launched Sunday

Bakeshop, and who loves Lau's outside-the-pastry-box thinking.

'When I was running a Korean barbecue, we were known also for corn cheese, a little melty side dish... She took that and was like, 'I'm gonna make a pastry out of it," said Hong, co-author of "Koreatown: A Cookbook." "Wow, this came from our conversation that was very personal to me and it also tastes really delicious."

Rose Nguyen, a 34-year-old former nurse, switched careers and opened Rose Ave Bakery inside The Block Foodhall in Washington, D.C., in March 2020, just before a pandemic shutdown. Nguyen was peddling Instagrammable morsels like strawberry lychee rose doughnuts, ube cake and matcha chocolate cookies. She won over enough foodies to keep going with online orders until fully reopening this June.

Born in Rhode Island to Vietnamese immigrants, Nguyen said it sometimes hurt when, growing up, her white friends thought her food from home was weird or gross. So, it's gratifying now to showcase Asian flavors unapologetically. "It was never about trends or satisfying other people," Nguyen said. "It's just me, basically. The business goes hand in hand with who I am."

As fixtures in their neighborhoods, these bakery owners all felt compelled to do something when racist attacks against Asians tied to the COVID-19 pandemic started. Third Culture Bakery raised donations at its locations to pay for and distribute 21,000 safety kits for Asian seniors. Sunday Bakeshop and Rose Ave Bakery have donated pastries and profits to anti-Asian hate organizations.

The bakers felt a disconnect between that hatred and the joyful connection that their food can make across cultures. "It's so unfortunate that it's happening, and still happening, because people say they love Asian food and Asian American food," Nguyen said. "Yet, they don't even realize you love the food and don't love the people."

Older, traditional Asian bakeries started out as a means of replicating something immigrants missed back in their home country. The new bakeries' bolder assertion of identity is a natural evolution, said Robert Ji-Song Ku, an Asian American studies professor at Binghamton University and author of "Dubious Gastronomy: The Cultural Politics of Eating Asian in the USA."

Chefs like Roy Choi and David Chang came to fame in the early 2000s embracing their Korean heritage. But the baking world is still "a real frontier," Ku said. "It goes against stereotypes of Asians as math geeks. It's sort of the artistic side of Asian American identity that's often ignored," Ku said. "They're instead really trying to fuse things together -- create this mixture."

These first- and second-generation Asian American bakery owners seem passionate about bringing visibility to the Asian American community, which often feels invisible, Ku added.

They're showing that an ube snickerdoodle or a black sesame muffin is as American as any apple pie. "There's nothing wrong with apple pie," Hong said. "But there's a lot more interesting things being done... there's a lot of Asian creators and entrepreneurs, and gradually they'll be more vocal."

Nobody's Perfekt Dogs

SUBMITTED BY KAREN SILVA

Nobody's Perfekt Dogs was a dream that became reality when executive director and founder, Rick Hollander, created an organization that specializes in finding homes for "imperfect" dogs that can still offer a lifetime of love and devotion. Although the pandemic shut down the rescue center for a year, dogs that were discarded in shelters in the area, and had no other options received a second chance at Nobody's Perfekt Dogs.

After moving into Bayfair Mall in July 2017 and quickly outgrowing the site, Nobody's Perfekt Dogs is celebrating a new storefront at Bayfair Mall near the food court. Triple the size of their previous store, the new location provides a much larger center, a community area, a larger store, that even has Halloween costumes for dogs, cat toys, aquarium features and equipment, and a new section for local cat rescues and adoptions. And, each weekend from noon to 4 p.m., you can stop by and meet our dog celebrities looking for a new home.

This is a "rescue of last resort," not a shelter, and only dogs are pulled from local community shelters. Shelters that call about a dog in need have exhausted all other options, leaving no choice but to consider euthanizing. While many of the dogs are seniors or have special needs, some have been rejected due to neglect. Rick Hollander stated, "Simply taking them out of the shelter and putting them into a stable foster home often makes all the difference in the world."

Nobody's Perfekt Dogs adopts to people and families that are seeking more than just a pet. Adopters are truly interested in saving a dog's life by giving it a forever home. When people adopt from Nobody's Perfekt Dogs, two lives are being saved: the dog being adopted and the next shelter dog on the euthanasia list that we now have room to foster.

Foster homes, future adoptees, and volunteers are being sought. Located in storefront #330 at Bayfair Mall, the organization can be reached at (510) 459-0396, via email, or Facebook.

Imperfection is exchanged for a lifetime of love and devotion. And you never know, you might just find your next "perfekt dog!"
