Early Detection Saves Lives—3D Mammography at the Washington Women’s Center

Additional equipment and hours simplifies scheduling mammograms

How long has it been since you’ve had a mammogram?

No one claims that getting a mammogram will be the most fun part of a day. But the Women’s Center at Washington Hospital makes the experience as quick and pleasant as possible. “We’ve tried to create a serene atmosphere. We provide our patients with comfortable robes, a pleasant seating area with tea and other beverages and, most important, our technologists are respectful of patients’ time, and modesty,” says Nurse Navigator, Christine Mikkelsen. From registration to departure, most patients are in and out within an hour.

In recent years, patients have delayed seeking health screenings notes Medical Director of Medical Imaging, Sunil Upender, MD. He says, “Early diagnosis for breast cancer or any abnormalities in the breast tissue is critical for the best outcomes. During the pandemic people were hesitant to go to medical appointments for fear of exposure. But COVID cases have decreased and we have maintained our high standards of infection prevention, mitigating any risk.”

Since 2020, Washington Hospital has been using 3D mammography, which is also known as digital breast tomography (DBT). This advanced technology has heightened the accuracy of mammograms. Dr. Upender notes, “3D imaging is better at discerning overlapping structures than 2D imaging. This is particularly beneficial in patients with dense breast parenchyma. 3D imaging can differentiate overlapping densities, decreasing the number of follow-up calls. Additionally, 3D can be more sensitive to true abnormalities.”

Radiologists at Washington Hospital have found cancers with 3D mammography that would not have been detected on 2D. This 3D system offers the most advanced technology available, as it provides both 3D and 2D images from just one scan. This is important because it provides an additional flat image that better shows calcifications and allows the radiologist to readily compare the patient’s 2D scans from previous years to identify changes, if any.

Multiple studies reviewed by Dr. Upender continue to show mammography screening is the best way to identify cancers at an early, treatable stage. A 2019 study led by world-renowned breast cancer expert Laszlo Tabar, showed that women who underwent routine mammography screening demonstrated a 60% lower risk of dying from breast cancer within a decade of diagnosis than women who were not screened.

With physician referral, mammogram appointments are available Monday – Friday, 7:15 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Saturdays, 7:45 to noon.

Recommendations for routine mammographic screening may vary, but all organizations agree that annual mammograms beginning at age 40 save the most lives.

Washington Hospital has worked to improve access for patients by increasing the hours of operation, including Saturdays from 7:45 a.m. to noon, and adding a second 3D mammography unit, expanding available appointment times.

However long it has been, now is the time to schedule a mammogram. Once a patient has an order from their primary care physician, they can call 510.818.7410 to schedule their mammogram. Mikkelsen encourages, “We’re here for you. Talk to your physician today.”

“Early diagnosis for breast cancer or any abnormalities in the breast tissue, is critical for the best outcomes.”

36th Annual Golf Tournament – Back on the Links! A Huge Success!

In Memory of Gene Angelo Pessagno

Benefitting Surgical Services at Washington Hospital

On Thursday, May 4, Washington Hospital Healthcare Foundation welcomed golfers and, for the first time, bocce players, to the 36th Annual Golf Tournament at The Club at Castlewood in Pleasanton. The tournament brought together friends and community members to raise money for surgical services at Washington Hospital. Funds raised will help meet the rising patient demand for critical and lifesaving surgical procedures by funding state-of-the-art surgical equipment and technology for Washington Hospital's operating rooms.

For 35 years, the golf tournament has raised money for Washington Hospital.

The Foundation is thrilled to announce it was yet another successful year, with proceeds totaling more than $120,000!

The day featured an 18-hole golf tournament, bocce ball competition, putting contest, barbecue lunch, opportunities to win prizes on the golf course, silent auction, a cocktail reception with an award ceremony and much more! This year, the tournament was held on the Hill Course with 124 golfers enjoying a spectacular day among friends and colleagues, while 16 bocce ball players, battled it out on the bocce courts.

Space-Based Solar Power: The Solution to Our Energy Woes or a Pipe Dream?

KAILASH KALIDOSS, AEROSPACE ENTHUSIAST

In a world where our energy needs are growing faster than ever, it's high time we start looking beyond conventional sources of energy. And what better place to look than up above, where the sun shines bright and free from the shackles of our polluted atmosphere? Yes, we're talking about Space-Based Solar Power (SBSP)!

SBSP is not only technically feasible, but also has the potential to provide a clean, reliable, and almost limitless source of energy. Since clouds, atmosphere, and nighttime are non-existent in space, satellite-based solar panels would be able to capture and transmit substantially more energy than terrestrial solar panels. The basic idea of SBSP is to place solar panels in orbit around the Earth, where they can collect solar energy 24/7, without being affected by weather conditions or day-night cycles.

Solar panel-equipped, energy-transmitting satellites collect high-intensity, uninterrupted solar radiation by using giant mirrors to reflect huge amounts of solar rays onto smaller solar collectors. This energy can then be converted into microwaves or lasers, which can be beamed down to receiving stations on the ground and converted back into electricity.

Of course, some major challenges need to be overcome before we can start beaming down energy from space. For starters, we need to figure out how to launch and assemble large solar panels in space and choose the underlying transmission technology – microwaves or lasers.

Laser Solar Satellites are deployed at a lower altitude of 400 km from the Earth's surface and hence have low start-up costs in the range of half a million dollars and one billion dollars. However, the tradeoffs are low intensity and power. Each laser solar satellite only produces one to 10 MW per satellite. Therefore, one would require several satellites to make a substantial impact. The efficiency further deteriorates in overcast conditions. There are also safety concerns about the weaponization of the technology. Remember the James Bond movie "Die Another Day"?

Microwave Solar Satellites overcome most of the laser satellite shortcomings and are capable of providing upwards of 1 GW of energy to a terrestrial receiver, enough to power a large city. However, infrastructure and production costs may be in the tens of billions of dollars range, given the size and complexity of the terrestrial receiver. Since microwave satellites are placed in geostationary orbit – at a much higher altitude of 35,000 km – it takes several launches to complete the installation, and subsequent repairs and maintenance onsite are complex.

So, is SBSP the solution to our energy woes or a pipe dream? The truth is that we are probably zoning in toward the solution, despite decades of slack. Cheaper space access promised by vehicles like SpaceX's Starship changed the economics of such a system. A workshop by the European Space Agency conducted in December 2021 is looking at Space-based Solar Power for Net Zero by the year 2050. NASA is starting a study to reexamine the viability of space-based solar power after two decades. Maybe soon, we'll all be beaming up energy from space like it's no big deal.

THE ROBOT REPORT

This robot hand can manipulate objects without seeing them

Credit: Columbia Engineering

BY BRIANNA WESSLING

Researchers from Columbia Engineering have designed a robotic hand that joins an advanced sense of touch with motor-learning algorithms, resulting in a robotic hand that doesn't rely on vision to manipulate objects. The robotic hand, equipped with five fingers and 15 independently actuated joints, is able to execute an arbitrarily large rotation of an unevenly shaped grasped object in hand while also maintaining the object in a stable, secure hold without any visual feedback whatsoever. This is a difficult manipulation task for robots because it requires constant repositioning of a subset of fingers, while other fingers must keep the object stable.

“While our demonstration was on a proof-of-concept task, meant to illustrate the capabilities of the hand, we believe that this level of dexterity will open up entirely new applications for robotic manipulation in the real world,” Matei Ciocarlie, associate professor in the Departments of Mechanical Engineering and Computer Science, said. “Some of the more immediate uses might be in logistics and material handling, helping ease up supply chain problems like the ones that have plagued our economy in recent years, and in advanced manufacturing and assembly in factories.”

While robots out in the world are performing more and more complex manipulation tasks, the vast majority, if not all of them, need vision capabilities to do so. Columbia University’s robot hand is immune to lighting issues, occlusion, or other similar issues that could prevent a robot that does rely on vision capabilities from working properly. For this research, Ciocarlie’s team built off of previous work they did with Ioannis Kyriassis, a professor of electrical engineering, where they built a new generation of optics-based tactile robot fingers. These robotic fingers were able to achieve contact localization with sub-millimeter precision while also providing complete coverage of a complex, multi-curved surface. Each finger on this new robotic hand is equipped with the team’s touch-sensing technology.

The team, led by Gagan Khandate, Ciocarlie’s doctoral researcher, tested its ability to perform complex manipulation tasks using new methods for motor learning. In particular, the team utilized a method called deep reinforcement learning, and augmented it with new algorithms that they developed for effective exploration of possible motor strategies. These motor learning algorithms used exclusively tactile and proprioceptive data to learn. Using these methods, the robot completed about a year of practice in only hours of real-time. The Columbia Engineering team then transferred the manipulation skills learned in simulation to the real robot hand, which could then achieve a high level of dexterity. “In this study, we’ve shown that robot hands can also be highly dexterous based on touch sensing alone. Once we also add visual feedback into the mix along with touch, we hope to be able to achieve even more dexterity, and one day start approaching the replication of the human hand,” Ciocarlie said.

A Day in the Life of a Jar of Peanut Butter During COVID-19 Lockdown

BY JILL M. BUONO

It's day who knows what of COVID-19 lockdown, and I'm losing my FREAKIN mind. This morning, the grape jelly finally followed through on her threats and moved to the pantry. She claims that she "just needs space", but I suspect that she's never forgiven me for my fling with the marshmallow fluff.

Around lunchtime, the human took the cold cut bin by eminent domain to quarantine newly arrived perishables, leaving its inhabitants homeless. Since then, a tub of yogurt, perched precariously on a half empty can of olives, has complained of a pinched nerve in its neck. A package of ground beef, pushed to the back of the refrigerator, is constantly moaning that it's freezing. The ham and roast beef are locked in a death struggle with a stick of butter.

On my shelf, there's a block of sharp cheddar cheese balanced on my lid. A bottle of Caesar salad dressing, propped on its head, is drip, drip, dripping its dressing dregs into its head. It's muttering incoherently, probably brain damaged.

One shelf down the mustard and ketchup, who used to be BFFs, are having a personal hygiene discussion regarding the black crud around the ketchup's lid. A bottle of who knows what, which lost its label in a scuffle with the soy sauce, has been trying to intervene, but with little success.

Added to the cacophony of complaints, there's been a faint odor of sulfur since a cracked egg was evicted earlier this evening. The eggs can't socially distance in their carton so I'm not surprised that they've turned on one another.

Yup, that's my reality! This also explains why all my recent paintings resemble Dante's first circle of hell... if it were in a refrigerator!

2023 Alameda County District Teachers of the Year

SUBMITTED BY ZOIE CAMPBELL

Alameda County Office of Education (ACOE) is pleased to announce the 2023 Teachers of the Year, as selected by Alameda County school districts and regional occupational programs, in advance of the 34th Annual Teacher of the Year Awards Ceremony on Thursday, October 5, 2023 at the Castro Valley Center for the Arts.

Eighteen honorees have been selected by 16 participating districts and regional occupational programs across the county. The honorees are recognized for their individual dedication and excellence in the classroom, and they collectively represent the more than 12,000 educators doing amazing work in communities across Alameda County.

"I am very excited to recognize this year's Teachers of the Year, and uplift the hard work and dedication of teachers to their students," said Alameda County Superintendent of Schools Alysse Castro. "These honorees have implemented strategies that improve students' learning and cultivate nourishing classroom environments. We look forward to celebrating with them at the annual ceremony in October!"

All district-level honorees have the opportunity to submit an application to be recognized as an Alameda County Teacher of the Year, which will be selected in the coming months by a panel of educational leaders. The County honorees are then submitted for consideration for the California Teacher of the Year program, administered by the California Department of Education.

Tips on Acing Phone Interviews

By Anne Chan, PhD, MFT

With the advent of zoom as well as the return to in-person interviews, you might be thinking that phone interviews are going the way of the dinosaur. It may surprise you that this is far from true -- phone interviews are still heavily used in many industries. In fact, they are often the first critical step toward getting or being rejected for a job. There are even companies that deliberately choose phone interviews over zoom interviews to allow for more equity and less bias in the interview process.

Don't make the mistake of blowing off a phone interview. Since initial phone interviews are generally 15 minutes, some job candidates do not take the time to prepare because they believe they can simply wing it. Or they may believe that they are speaking to someone without the power to make a hiring decision, so they think that a phone interview is just a formality.

Please don't be fooled by the brevity of the initial phone call! Prepare for a phone interview as if it were a real interview. I would say that it IS a real interview. Even if it's a short amount of time, the recruiter or Human Resource representative is most definitely assessing if you have what it takes to do the job. They do have the power to block you from moving on

- to the next round of interviews. If you are unprepared and stumble over answers, you might be passed over for a candidate who took time to prepare. Be mindful that even if the request is for just 15 minutes of your time, the interview might last longer.
- Here is a checklist of things you need to do before, during, and after a phone interview:
1. Clarify details of the call, such as the time and time zone, the job title of the person you are speaking to, and a backup number should a call be dropped.
 2. Research the company and how you are a fit with them.
 3. Prepare and practice your answers to typical phone interview questions (see below). Have some questions prepared for when the interviewer asks, "Do you have any questions for me?"
 4. Prepare your materials for the interview day, including a print out of your resume, a cheat sheet of your answers, a notepad and pen, headphones for optimal sound quality, and a phone charger.
 5. Do a practice run with a friend – note how you respond to small talk and pauses in the conversation, and pay attention to your tone. You want to sound enthusiastic and positive, not robotic and monotonous.
 6. Choose a quiet spot for your interview where you will not be interrupted. I realize that it is hard for many to find a quiet location, but your call won't sound professional if it is interrupted by street noise, construction, kids playing, dogs barking, UPS knocking on your door, and other people's conversations. Check that you have good cell reception in your chosen spot.
 7. Dress the part. Yes, you will not be seen on the phone. However, it will boost your confidence as well as remind you that you are interviewing.

8. Be on time – be ready to pick up on the second ring, with a cheery greeting.
 9. During the interview, take notes of whatever strikes you as significant, interesting or important.
 10. After the interview, write a thank-you email that expresses your interest in the job as well as how you are even more of a fit for this job because of what you learned at the interview.
- Here are ten typical questions asked during a phone interview:
1. Tell me about yourself.
 2. Why are you applying for this job?
 3. Why are you leaving your current job?
 4. What do you know about this role?
 5. What is your relevant experience?
 6. What are your weaknesses?
 7. When can you start?
 8. Are you interviewing with other companies?
 9. What salary do you have in mind?
 10. Do you have any questions at this time?

Phone interviews are an important first step toward getting a job. Being fully prepared could mean the opportunity for a glorious new job. So put your best foot forward for this critical first interview!

Hayward Union High School

By Jack Alcorn

A short drive up City Center Drive from Foothill Boulevard in downtown Hayward you will find a small brick courtyard commemorating Hayward Union High School. Constructed in 1911 the campus filled the entire block bounded by City Center Drive and Foothill Boulevard. The grounds extended across Cull Creek to where the Hayward Senior Center and Japanese Gardens are now located.

High on the hill behind the courtyard site of the former school rests a giant concrete 'H'. This was the symbol of Hayward Union High School. In 1924 Hayward Union High School was rated the third most beautiful school in the nation. The only high school in town, it was an important social, cultural and educational center for half a century. Course offerings covered everything from the most advanced college prep classes to auto shop and botany.

Since the school mascot was a farmer, even agricultural classes were offered, for real "Future Farmers." As the school symbol, the giant H was the center of many spirited rivalries as students from other schools would sneak up the hill and paint it their school colors, only to have Hayward students soon restore it to the school's Black and Gold. The layers of paint are thick. You can hike to the H through Carlos Bee Park on Grove Ave.

Every student in the Hayward area went Hayward Union, and it was a school treasured in the hearts of many families. Impressive large block masonry, Greek pillars and inviting landscaping made the school an architectural gem and a favored community destination. And even though it was torn down in the 1960's, thousands of alumni still cherish its memory. Hayward Union High School and its gigantic H – a genuine Hayward historical artifact – played a vital role in Hayward history for half of the 20th century.

Observing Memorial Day

Complete the crossword puzzle. Then circle those words in this article.

Memorial Day was called Decoration Day when it started as a day to honor the nation's Civil War dead by decorating their graves.

After the Civil War, people across America started a tradition of setting one day a year aside to decorate the graves of fallen soldiers.

On May 30, 1868, General James Garfield made a speech at Arlington National Cemetery. After the speech, thousands of people who came to hear him decorated the graves of more than 20,000 Union and Confederate soldiers buried there.

After World War I, Decoration Day was expanded to remember those who had died in all American wars.

In 1971, Congress declared Memorial Day a national holiday to be celebrated the last Monday in May.

Today a flag is placed on each grave at Arlington National Cemetery. The president or the vice president gives a speech and lays a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

San Jose artist Laurie Barna is exhibiting several works including a compelling watercolor painting titled “Slipping Through Our Fingers.” Part of her “Liberty Series” of over 100 artworks, Barna portrays the ease with which American liberties can erode and slip from our national grasp. Barna’s art is both patriotic and thought provoking in a time of political unrest. Another artwork titled “The Journey” takes a more personal view of the artist and her struggle to overcome life’s unexpected turns.

Milpitas artist Mythili Kattupalli is exhibiting a vibrant acrylic painting titled “Hope.” Her artwork depicts both hope and distress as numerous hands reach out for a limited supply of Covid Vaccine. Many of Kattupalli’s recent artworks provide a visual study of the isolation experienced during the pandemic.

Artist Carol Manasse is exhibiting an original ink drawing titled “Unemployment.” It is a portrayal of the extended unemployment experienced in the 2008 recession. The artwork serves as a social commentary told solely by the display of hands in various states of industry and idleness.

In addition to the many artworks’ renditions of hands and feet, the exhibit offers other depictions of life. Artist Adrienne Reed is exhibiting a dynamic painting of activity in a city park titled “408 Park Life.” Reed reflects on the beautiful diversity of the community as she takes her morning stroll.

The public is invited to view this wonderful collection of artworks at the Grand Opening on Sunday, May 21 from 12 noon to 3 p.m. The Gallery will be open every Sunday from 12 noon - 3 p.m. during the exhibit, which runs through July 16.

Great grilling thanks to cedar planks

By DANIEL O'DONNELL

Although there are many people who grill outdoors all year long, most do not fire up the barbeque until the weather gets warmer. Many folks are uncovering their grills and barbecues, cleaning them, and stocking up on lighter fluid and charcoal or filling their propane tanks in anticipation of fast-approaching warm summer nights. Now is also a great time to read articles and watch YouTube videos to refresh barbecuing skills, get new recipes, and learn new techniques. Grilling on wood planks is a must-try method that is still new to a lot of outdoor cooks even though it has been around for thousands of years.

While some make their own wood cooking planks, the majority purchase them. It is important to purchase food-grade planks, which have not been treated with any chemicals or pesticides. Therefore, do not purchase planks in the lumber department at a hardware store. Grilling planks should be made of hardwoods which withstand cooking temperatures better than softwood varieties which burn too quickly. Ideal planks should be at least a half inch and not cover more than a third of the grill surface area.

Western Red Cedar planks are probably the most popular for grilling. They are primarily used for roasting fish.

be substituted for water to add additional flavor when cooking. Soaking the plank helps to prevent it from catching on fire. A propane grill can be turned on, or charcoal briquettes in a barbeque can be lit, after the plank has soaked. One side of the cooking space should have direct heat, and the other indirect heat. The grilling plank will be placed on the indirect heat side. A plank can also be pre-charred by placing it on the direct heat side for a minute or two on both sides before moving it to the indirect heat side and placing the food on it. Pre-charred planks can also be used in the oven.

with a light scrub and rinsed with water to eliminate food particles. Do not use detergent, which the wood can absorb. Used planks will retain some of the oils and flavors of what was cooked on them, so they should be used to cook the same food as before. Used planks can be stored in a labeled plastic bag in the freezer to avoid bacteria growth. Presoaking on second and third uses is not necessary, but a quick spray of water on both sides before placing the plank on the grill will help prevent a flareup.

Plank cooking, or planking, is cooking food directly on hardwood planks that are set on top of a grill. Anything cooked on top of the plank absorbs the natural wood flavors and delicious smoky aroma. As far back as 4,000 B.C., Pacific Northwest Indigenous tribes were cooking salmon and other fish on western red cedar and other hardwood stakes and planks. Salmon cooked using this method began to show up on Pacific Northwest hotel menus in the 1890's. Today, there are restaurants that have entire menus dedicated to plank grilling, internet planking tutorials, and an array of wooden cooking planks for sale.

However, vegetables, cheeses, chicken, shrimp, scallops, and steaks can all benefit from being cooked on a cedar plank. There are other hardwood grilling planks available as well. Hickory, apple, pecan, peach, maple, and oak all offer unique appetizing flavors. Chicken and pork work well with apple and peach planks. Bacon, beef, and some fattier fishes pair well with hickory planks.

Grilling food on a plank begins with submerging the plank in water and weighing it down with something so it stays submerged for at least an hour. Fruit juices, wine, beer, or bourbon can

Food cooks more slowly on wood planks than directly on the grill. If the temperature is too low, food will not get a crispy crust but will still cook and soak up the wonderful wood botanicals and smoky aroma. If the temperature is too high, the plank may catch on fire. Having a water spray bottle is necessary to douse any flareups. The best way to ensure that food is cooked thoroughly is to use an infrared thermometer, especially when learning to grill with wood planks.

Planks can be reused a few times if not too badly charred. They can be cleaned

People who do not know the history of roasting on cedar planks or have never tried any food prepared this way claim planking is just another fad that will eventually fade away. However, it is a delicious way to connect to the past. It is a method of cooking that has been practiced for thousands of years, and after tasting food grilled on a cedar plank, there should be no doubt that plank cooking will be around for another thousand years.

Tri-City Stargazer FOR WEEK: MAY 16, 2023

All Signs: Jupiter is a planet the represents good fortune, abundance, generosity, wealth, expansion and wisdom. It takes 12 years to travel through all the 12 signs, which means Jupiter is in each sign for a year. This week, lucky Jupiter moves into Taurus. The last time it was in Taurus was from June 2011 to June 2012. Think back to remember what was enhanced, increased or improved. If you were born later in your sign, correspondingly, Jupiter's influence will be felt later. Read on to see what this placement of Jupiter means for you.

Aries the Ram (March 21-April 20):

The good news for your sign is that you're going to get richer! You might get an increase to your earnings or a better paying job. The only tricky variable is when you were born. If you were born after April 5, this increased wealth will be coming to you next year. But it is coming! In the meantime, Jupiter will continue to be in your First House this year, bringing you opportunities to gain new experiences, meet important people and enjoy good fortune.

Taurus the Bull (April 21-May 20):

It's fabulous that lucky Jupiter enters Taurus this week. In the next 12 years, you will work to discover who you are as an individual. You will learn and gain new experiences. Specifically, in the next year, your confidence and poise will increase. Important people will be attracted to you, along with fortunate opportunities. Those born after May 5 will have these same blessings but will also focus on their spiritual world and explore inner truths.

Gemini the Twins (May 21-June 20):

Those of you born after June 5 will enjoy increased popularity with friends this year. You'll have opportunities to interact with clubs, groups and professional associations. Your enthusiasm for life is strong, and you'll be bolder about making future goals. However, Geminis born before June 5 will enter a quieter and emotionally richer time. Your interest in your inner world and spiritual values will become stronger. You will also have an opportunity to plan what you want for 2024 when lucky Jupiter enters your sign for the first time since 2012.

Cancer the Crab (June 21-July 21):

You will be more popular this year because this week, Jupiter is entering your House of Friendships. This will boost your desire to interact with others. Not only will you reach out more than usual to friends, you will enjoy increased involvement in clubs, groups and professional associations. However, those of you born after July 5 will continue to be in the limelight, showing off your success. Opportunities for work-related travel will please you. You will receive acknowledgement for your efforts by getting a promotion, an award or accolades.

Leo the Lion (July 22-August 22):

There is good news for Leo because this week lucky Jupiter will sit at the top of your chart for the next year. This means you will appear successful to the public. People see you as affluent and fortunate. This is your year for promotions, awards, scholarships and kudos. However, Leos born after August 5 will have to wait for these kudos and promotions to occur next year in 2024. But they will come! Meanwhile, continue to grab opportunities in publishing, media, medicine, law, and travel.

Virgo the Virgin (August 23-September 22):

This week as Jupiter changes signs, it signals a year ahead of increased travel opportunities. You will also want to explore philosophical and religious questions. Opportunities in publishing, media, medicine, and law will be enriching. Above all, this year will expand your horizons! However, for Virgos who born after September 5, these travel opportunities and chances to expand your world will arrive next year. In the meantime, you will benefit from the wealth of others. You might inherit, or your partner might get a bonus or an increase in income.

Libra the Scales (September 23-October 22):

This week lucky, moneybags Jupiter moves into one of your Money Houses. Your wealth and assets will increase, perhaps through an inheritance or because your partner makes more money. Whatever it is, you will feel enriched! Take note: Those of you born after October 5 are still benefiting from enriched relationships and opportunities to sweeten your interactions with members of the public. This is a fabulous year to get married. (The best time in over 10 years.) Fear not, your increased wealth and benefits through others will come to you in 2024.

Scorpio the Scorpion (October 23-November 21):

This week Jupiter moves opposite your sign for the first time since 2011-12. This will be a marvelous year for partnerships and friendships. In fact, it's the best year to get married in 12 years! Those who begin new relationships (or wed) will likely be with someone older, richer or more established. These same benefits will come in 2024 to those born after November 5. Meanwhile, for the remainder of this year, you later-born Scorpios will continue to have opportunities to improve your health and job. Work-related travel will also be exciting.

Sagittarius the Archer (November 22-December 21):

Lucky moneybags Jupiter is your ruler, so you're optimistic, breezy and keen to travel. You need to expand your world! This week Jupiter moves into your House of Employment, which will bring opportunities to improve your existing job or get a better one. Likewise, you can improve your health. However, Sagittarians born after December 5 are still partying and on vacation! They're enjoying romance and the arts. They can look forward to better health and a better job next year in 2024.

Capricorn the Goat (December 22-January 19):

Lucky you! This week Jupiter will enter one of the most fun parts of your chart, and you will have opportunities this year for vacations, love affairs, romance, playful times with children, and chances to explore the arts, theatre and entertainment world. However, all this fun stuff will come about next year for those of you born after January 5. Until then, you will enjoy opportunities to expand your home or move to a better one. You might also expand your family through birth, adoption or marriage.

Aquarius the Water Bearer (January 20-February 18):

As Jupiter changes signs this week, it ushers in opportunities to improve where you live or enrich your world through real-estate transactions. You might expand your home through renovations or redecorating projects. You might also expand your family through marriage, birth or adoption. Family life will be richer and family members will be more generous. However, those born after February 5, will enjoy these home and family opportunities next year in 2024. This year, your busy pace will continue with optimism, eagerness, and opportunities to learn.

Pisces the Fish (February 19-March 20):

As Jupiter changes signs this week, it will travel through your House of Communications, increasing your contacts and giving you more opportunities for short trips, or chances to study. This year will be fast-paced and optimistic. Your ability to communicate will be more successful. For those born after March 5, these opportunities await you in 2024. Until then, continue to explore opportunities to boost your income! Look for a better-paying job or ways to make money on the side. Wealth or assets will also come to you.

SUBMITTED BY MISSION PEAK VILLAGE

Fremont Planning Commission voted unanimously on May 11 to approve plans for Mission Peak Village, a 32-unit owner-driven development of private condominiums opening onto 10,000 square-foot of outdoor common open space area with a play area, community garden, picnic tables, and landscaped central courtyard. Also in the plan is approximately 5,000 square feet of indoor community space with a great room, living room, exercise studio, work hub, offices, multipurpose spaces, and a roof deck. Located on High Street in the Irvington district of Fremont, Mission Peak Village will be the first cohousing community in Southern Alameda County.

Commissioner Benjamin Yee prepared for the decision by seeking out residents at longstanding cohousing communities in Sacramento and Colorado to see how the concept holds up two or three decades later. “It’s a great way to be one big family,” he concluded.

Commissioner Shobana Ramamurthi was particularly interested in the three condominiums in the project that will be made available for sale to families with incomes at or below 50% of Area Median Income. Upon assurance that the units would be no different from others in the development, she said, “This is what we want to see in our city. It is an honor to be voting for it.”

A housing model first popularized in Denmark, cohousing communities already exist in an estimated 200 locations across the United States, with more than 20 established or forming in the Bay Area.

“The distinctive aspect of cohousing,” founding Mission Peak member Jane Mueller told commissioners, “is that these developments are funded and driven by the people who will live in them. That means that we, the future owners of these homes, are putting up the money for pre-development and playing an active role in design.”

Fremont planning staff pointed out that the proposal complies with key residential development standards:

- Development of an infill site in close proximity to schools, the Irvington Farmers Market, commercial services, and transit.
- Proximity to existing public facilities including streets, sewer and water. As an infill project with compatible surrounding uses, there would be minimal impact on public services, adjacent properties and the natural environment.

- Placement of a new multi-family residential development in close proximity to goods, services, and both existing and planned transit, thereby promoting walking and reducing personal vehicle trips.

“We intend to choose one of the three-bedroom, two-bath flats,” says Evelyn LaTorre, who joined Mission Peak Village early in its formation. “We love the idea of living in a new single-level home with reduced maintenance demands while staying in the Bay Area near our friends. I like that we can step just outside and meet up with someone for a stroll to get groceries or a brisk walk around Lake Elizabeth.”

“My wife and I look forward to living in a place where we will already know the neighbors on day one,” points out Dick Pantages. “It removes some of the uncertainty for an introvert like me. We will continue working together on our plans till move-in day, and our new neighbors will already be friends.”

About Mission Peak Village

Initially formed in 2014, Mission Peak Village is a group of people interested in buying homes in the development upon its completion. They organized specifically to purchase a site and create a cohousing community in Fremont. Many members have lived there for decades and have been employed by and volunteered in local organizations. Members are a diverse group who range in age from elementary school students to active retirees. Several are former Peace Corps volunteers. Most have had leadership roles in non-profits such as Abode Services, League of Women Voters, AAUW, Rotary Club, and Tri-City Ecology Center.

There are at least 22 established or forming cohousing communities in the Bay Area. Environmental sustainability is a core value in these neighborhoods with smaller homes, green building attributes and renewable energy systems made possible by combined efforts and shared resources. On-site activities and companionship enable residents to socialize close to home. Mission Peak Village will be located within an existing neighborhood near public transportation and the future Irvington BART station, helping to decrease dependence on cars.

Mission Peak Village has allied itself with people who have extensive cohousing experience:

- Kathryn McCamant, Mission Peak Village’s cohousing advisor, was half of the partnership that introduced the cohousing concept to North America from Denmark 30+ years ago. Her firm, CoHousing Solutions, is essential in transforming the project from aspiration to reality.
- Gunkel Architecture created a design that reflects the standards of the future buyers. Brad Gunkel, heading the team, has years of experience not only in designing cohousing but living in it.
- Urban Development + Partners is an experienced cohousing developer and Mission Peak Village’s partner through each aspect of the development process, including finance, construction, and project management.

The group actively seeks and welcomes diversity in its membership, including all ages. Additional memberships are still available. More information is available at the Mission Peak Village website: missionpeakcohousing.org.

A HOME ON THE HILL

The Origins of the Masonic Home at Union City: Part Three

This summer, the Masonic Homes of California celebrates its 125th anniversary in Union City. In recognition of that milestone, we're exploring organization's long and notable history. Here, Part III:

THE MASONIC HOME at Union City, on Mission Boulevard near Dry Creek Regional Park, has been part of the Tri-City community for more than a century. In line with the Masonic principles it was founded on, the Home has provided shelter and compassionate care for those in the greatest need since its earliest days. Today, that spirit of generosity extends to the surrounding community, as residents and staff of the Masonic Homes support public education and other charitable causes throughout the Tri-City region.

In the first and second parts of this series, we explored the history of the Masonic Homes in Union City, from its birth in 1850 through World War I.

A TRANSFORMING COMMUNITY

In 1915, Bay Area residents were thrilled to invite the Panama-Pacific International Exposition to San Francisco as part of a celebration for the completion of the Panama Canal. The festivities lasted nine months, covered more than 600 acres, and drew more than 18 million people—including Masonic Homes residents, who were amazed and delighted by the exhibits and spectacle. The fair included a number of scientific and education presentations, a highlight of which was the first demonstration of a transcontinental phone call. San Francisco's Marina Green and Chrissy Field, two of today's most popular recreation areas, are actually filled-in waterfront marshland that was developed as part of the fair grounds.

A STATUE REPLICA OF WILLIAM WETMORE STORY'S 'THE ANGEL OF GRIEF WEeping OVER THE DISMANTLED ALTAR OF LIFE,' WAS DONATED TO THE MASONIC HOMES IN 1920. TODAY IT CAN BE SEEN AT CHAPEL OF THE CHIMES CEMETERY IN HAYWARD.

As the dark days of World War I took effect, Masonic Homes residents once again joined with their community – this time taking part in relief efforts. Residents were actively supporting troops as much as possible. Many sewed and knit garments to be mailed overseas to soldiers in the trenches, and a number of soldiers were “adopted” by residents, who provided care packages, inspirational letters, and other support to boost morale.

In 1920, to commemorate the conclusion of the war, local Mason Max Hornlein dedicated a statue, “Angel of Grief,” to grace the Home's cemetery on Mission Road. Created in Italy, the statue is a replica of William Wetmore Story's 1894 sculpture, “The Angel of Grief Weeping Over the Dismantled Altar of Life,” located in Rome. It was commissioned by Jane Stanford (wife of Leland Stanford the famed railroad baron, Mason, and founder of Stanford University) in honor of her late brother, Henry Clay Lathrop. Hornlein acquired this statue from Stanford University following the 1906 earthquake in which it was damaged. The Stanfords chose to replace the statue, but Hornlein was moved by its beauty despite the flaws.

Less than 20 years later, as the United States entered World War II, the Masonic Homes made a lasting contribution and sacrifice. Nearly 170 former child residents served in the Armed Forces. The boys ranged in rank from private to colonel, and 10 girls served as nurses. Sadly, 12 became casualties of the war. Following the war, some Masons who had been captured as prisoners of war recuperated at the Masonic Homes. ♦

News and Notes FROM AROUND THE WORLD

SUBMITTED BY THE ASSOCIATION OF MATURE AMERICAN CITIZENS

She stands alone

Talk about the oddities of life. Thirty-two-year-old Kelsey Grubb of Albuquerque, New Mexico can stand proud with one foot turned forward and her other foot turned backward to an angle of 171.4 degrees. In fact, Kelsey's "feat" got her into the Guinness Book of World Records. As she put it, "most people are grossed out and fascinated at the same time. The most common phrase I've heard about it is not that the movement itself is gross, just the ease at which I turn it." You can see her record setting stance at youtube.com/watch?v=ZhppCewICMs

What they left behind

It's not unusual for taxi drivers to find a phone, purse, or bag left behind by passengers. The 2023 Uber Lost & Found Index was recently made public and it contains a long list of not-so-common items that forgetful riders left behind in their cabs. Over the past year drivers turned in a variety of abandoned items found in the back seats of their cars such as an ankle monitor, fake blood, a fog machine, a Danny DeVito Christmas ornament and, oddly enough, six cheese cakes. See the full story: youtube.com/watch?v=zUEzSHQQ1ds

'Bee-lieve it or not'

A Delta Airlines flight could not take off recently at the Houston-Bush airport "after a friendly group of bees evidently wanted to talk shop with the winglet of our airplanes, no doubt to share the latest about flying conditions at the airport," according to the airline. Thousands of the pesky insects had settled on a wing of the aircraft to rest their wings, preventing a takeoff. No efforts, such as hosing down the plane, were allowed. But three hours later the pilot revved his engines scaring the swarm to take flight themselves, allowing the plane to take flight as well. See the story on YouTube: youtube.com/watch?v=cQncFknzgtA

Summer is coming soon and many including city councilmembers and elected officials are looking forward to vacations and recess, so it is an appropriate time for them to reflect on and renew commitments made to constituents. This time, however, is not without action for although council meetings may not be in session, administrative staff has no such hiatus. It is important to pay attention to all governmental movement, even if elected officials are not meeting. As "seasons" change, none are without activity.

In a popular folk song of the late 1950s, Pete Seeger quoted the Book of Ecclesiastes almost verbatim in "Turn! Turn! Turn!" Rearranged and adapted by a myriad of musicians, styles range from the Limelighters, Judy Collins, The Byrds, Bruce Springsteen, Dolly Parton and even international celebrities including Marlene Dietrich singing a German translation. The song and its origin reminds us that although there may be ebb and flow in our lives, rhythms, actions and consequences are continuous.

The King James version of the Bible spoke of a nonstop life cycle that moves like a pendulum, back and forth. Everything has a place and purpose.

"To every thing there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven."

As seasons change, a pattern emerges that appears to hold true throughout time. Behaviors that capture headlines and attention on a global and national scale can also be seen at the local level as well although not as well publicized. The Biblical text speaks of our own community relationships and issues whether gathering or casting stones, laughing, crying or reaping what is sown.

In its wisdom, Biblical verses advise of times to keep silent and times to speak. Some of our politicians would be wise to read and reread these words as a lesson in winning friends and influencing people. Dale Carnegie wrote a book using that thought as a title. His techniques, communicating with others with empathy rather than preaching at them, are not only an effective interpersonal tool for small gatherings but can expand to larger groups as well.

It seems that elected officials often forget simple dictums in favor of their own voice, focused on becoming the first among equals. Some don't seem to mind if they have exhausted the patience and sympathy of their audience. Is local politics the breeding ground of endless rhetoric that appeals to few and entices none? If this is the rule of politics on a state and national level, it may be that we can at least attempt to restrain the exercise of such nonsense from local politicians.

The text, whether Ecclesiastes, Seeger or The Byrds, is a universal guide to behavior and decorum in a global sense. All forms and levels of governance can gain from adherence to these phrases, one of the oldest codes in time. If local politicians take time to reflect on the meaning of the Biblical passage during their hiatus and, if state/federal representatives gather their thoughts during time away from squabbles in Sacramento or Washington, D.C. to listen to their constituents, returning to sessions with an invigorated sense of purpose, a positive flow of text can dominate.

A time to be born, and a time to die; a time to plant, a time to reap that which is planted;

A time to kill, and a time to heal; a time to break down, and a time to build up;

A time to weep, and a time to laugh; a time to mourn, and a time to dance;

From the seasons of life, let's focus on reap, build, laugh and dance.

Cal State East Bay Women's Golf Advances to NCAA Championships

By CSUEB ATHLETIC COMMUNICATIONS

The 2023 NCAA Division II Women's Golf West Regional had its playing format adjusted in anticipation of inclement weather on Wednesday, May 3. As a result, the second and third rounds of the tournament were played on Tuesday, May 2 and the West Regional was completed on the same day at Golf Club of Dallas. Placing fourth in the NCAA West Regional was Cal State East Bay women's golf. And as the fourth-place finishing team, the Pioneers advanced to next week's NCAA Division II Championships.

Entering Tuesday, the Pioneers held the fourth-place spot. Although positions on the leaderboard changed, the Pioneers took the final available spot to advance with a team score of 873, 14 strokes lower than Point Loma, who placed fifth in team scoring.

Two golfers from Cal State East Bay finished in a ninth place tie on the leaderboard, including Julika Grosspietsch and Drishti Karumbaya. Each finished at 4-over-par 214.

With nine birdies each throughout the tournament were Karumbaya and Jasmin Krishna. Grosspietsch had seven birdies over the 54 holes played.

In team scoring, Dallas Baptist (DBU) and West Texas A&M were tied through 54 holes, and DBU won the NCAA West Regional in a one-hole playoff. The Patriots, Lady Buffs, Cal State San Marcos and Pioneers were the four teams in the NCAA West Regional to advance to the NCAA Championships.

The Pioneers have advanced to the 2023 NCAA Division II Women's Golf Championships. The tournament takes place from May 16-20 from Fox Run Golf Club in Eureka, Missouri.

Gail Kerns Davis

Burney, California

January 27, 1946 – March 13 2023

Gail Kerns

Loving wife of Richard Davis(deceased), daughter of Dick and Virginia Medley Kerns (deceased). Loving mother to daughters Chelsea, Nikki, Son John, eight Grandchildren and six Great- Great Grandchildren. Loving sister to Walter Kerns of Henderson Nevada.

In her Freshman year, Gail attended James Logan High School in Union City where she met her future husband from Niles, Senior student Richard Davis, Class of 1960. After his graduation, Richard enlisted in the California National Guard. Gail attended Washington Union High School in Fremont during her Sophomore and Junior years, eventually transitioning to Irvington High School, for her Senior Year, Graduating Class of 1963. Gail participated in many school events. Her vibrant and enthusiastic personality as an Irvington Varsity Cheerleader immensely contributed to school spirit. She loved competing with her girl-friend teammates and rivals in both the Fremont and Cloverleaf Bowling alley leagues.

After her graduation, Gail and Richard were wed, settling into a modest home the Niles District of Fremont to begin their family. Eventually the Davis Family pulled up stakes leaving the busy Bay Area urban life for the serenity and the inviting small-town culture in Burney California and her family as Richard leaned on his life-long skills in mechanics and metallurgy where they successfully owned and operated several small businesses in the Burney-Shasta County community. The Davis home was always an open-home gathering place for many joyous occasions, celebrating holidays, birthdays, neighborhood get-togethers and parties. Besides a busy family and business life, Gail and Richard also found time to serve their community as Certified EMT’s with Hospital Emergency Services in the Burney area. Providing comfort and solace throughout his long illness, Gail lost her beloved Richard in February of 2020. In the months following Richard’s passing, many friends and families of the surrounding Burney-Shasta County communities offered loyal and loving support to Gail and to her family.

Now it is with heartfelt sadness we grieve the passing of Gail Lynette Kerns Davis. In her honor, in her memory and in her legacy, an uplifting Celebration of Life attended by her loving family and many community members was held on Saturday April 29, 2023 at The World of Life Assembly in Burney California.

Gail and Richard Together again. Rest in Peace.

Viola Muehling

February 2, 1933 — May 9, 2023

Resident of Newark

Viola Muehling, of Newark, passed away on May 9, 2023 at the age of 90. She is survived by David Muehling (son), James Muehling (son), Arcele Thompson (sister), and Allene (Donna) Langenberg (sister). Preceding Viola’s death was her loving husband, Marvin Muehling, who died in 2015.

Viola was a long-time member of Prince of Peace Lutheran Church in Fremont, CA. She attended church almost every Sunday, except towards the end of her life. She enjoyed Bible studies at Prince of Peace and at friends’ homes. Viola loved her flowers and had many varieties in her garden. Viola was mostly a homemaker, and a great one at that! Known for her wonderful cooking talent, Viola loved having company. And the company loved her cooking!

Viola and her husband, Marvin, brought up their sons, David and Jim, in the nurture of God, the Bible, and of Prince of Peace Lutheran Church. Viola was a loving mother and wife who enjoyed the company of her husband and sons and was happy they walked the Christian life. Viola’s favorite Bible verse was: ISAIAH 26:3 Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on Thee: because he trusteth in Thee.

Mom, so many people will miss you! But we know you are now rejoicing in the presence of God and your Savior Jesus Christ!

A Memorial Service for Viola will be held on Saturday, May 20th, 2 pm at Prince of Peace Lutheran Church, 38451 Fremont Blvd., Fremont, CA.

Ernest (“Ernie”) Caldwell Daughtrey, best known to the community as the Vice President of the Daughtrey’s Department Store chain in Northern California, passed away peacefully at his home in Hayward on Saturday morning, April 1, 2023. He was 93 years old.

Born in Santa Maria, CA, on September 3, 1929 to Keller and Juanita Daughtrey, the family moved to Willits, CA in 1936, eventually settling in San Leandro in 1938. Ernie graduated from San Leandro High School in 1948, attended San Jose State, and was in the Naval Reserve for 7 years, receiving an honorable discharge.

Ernie started working in the Daughtrey family’s Castro Valley store in 1951, and became manager of the new Daughtrey’s Pleasanton store in 1959. In the early 1970’s, Ernie moved back to the Castro Valley store, taking over leadership of the entire Daughtrey’s chain around 1975, and managing it until the Daughtrey family sold the business in 1991. In 1993, Ernie and his wife Sharon opened Kids Are People Too, a children’s specialty store, in Pleasanton, with subsequent stores in Piedmont, Niles, and Castro Valley, which they operated until 2018.

Ernie was an avid fisherman and outdoorsman, spending many summers as a youth with his family in Yosemite, roaming the Castro Valley hills, and, in his words, “having a ball”. He greatly enjoyed spending time at his family’s mountain cabin in Arnold, CA, as well as on many fishing trips to his favorite spots in California, Oregon, and British Columbia. “One more cast!” was a favorite exclamation of his as a day of fishing drew to a close.

Perhaps most of all, Ernie had an overwhelmingly positive attitude and outlook on life. His enduring spirit and passion – along with his absolutely amazing memory – burned brightly until the very end. He was well spoken, looked upon nature and the world with childlike wonder and curiosity, and treated others with great respect and humility. He will be greatly missed by his family, as well as the community.

Ernie was preceded in death by his mother Juanita, his father Keller, his sister Joyce, his son Steven, his stepson Stanley, and his granddaughter Jennifer. Ernie is survived by his wife Sharon, his children Randy, Rodney, and Jana, his stepdaughter Sharry, his sisters Sue and Debbie, and many grandchildren and great grandchildren.

A celebration of Ernie’s life will be held at Trinity Christian Fellowship Church of Castro Valley (20307 Marshall Street, Castro Valley, CA, 510-581-2480) on June 3 at 11am. The public is invited to attend. In lieu of flowers, the family would prefer donations to be made in Ernie’s honor, either to Trinity Christian Fellowship Church of Castro Valley or to the organization of your choice.

Newark Memorial High School’s Rocketry Club Prepares to Launch at National Championships

SUBMITTED BY JANICE BISHOP

The Newark Memorial High School (NMHS) Rocketry Club will be competing at the American Rocketry Challenge (TARC) finals Saturday, May 20 at The Plains, Virginia near Washington, D.C. The team is one of the top 100 rocketry teams selected for the national finals out of nearly 800 across the country. “We are excited to be competing at nationals this year and representing the Bay Area,” says club Co-President and Team Captain, Markus Gruendler.

NMHS Rocketry Club teaches teens how to apply physics, math and engineering to launch model rockets to meet specific requirements set each year by TARC. Sebastian Llaguno, a rocketry team member, comments “the biggest difference this year is designing our rocket booster and payload to separate on the way down, each with their own parachute.” The 2023 challenge includes designing, building, and flying a safe and stable model rocket to an altitude of 850 feet, while also achieving a total flight duration of 42 to 45 seconds and carrying one raw egg that returns safely and separate from the rocket booster –undamaged!

Students in NMHS Rocketry Club started designing their rockets last summer. It is a long process to design and build the rockets, even before the testing begins. “This year the weather

Masonic Homes appoints New CEO

SUBMITTED BY SOPHIE BOOTH

Just ahead of its 125th anniversary, the Masonic Homes of California announced that it has named Terry Quigley, MSW, as its new President and Chief Executive Officer. She succeeds long-time president and CEO Gary Charland, who is slated to retire. As the number of seniors in California grows to nearly 30 percent of the overall population, the traditional way of accessing senior care is expected to shift from site-based models to a more diffused, community-based model, in which services can be provided close to home.

“In a mission-driven, human services organization that serves clients throughout the state, we need top-notch talent with expertise in community-based programs,” says Larry Adamson, chairman of the board of trustees for the Masonic Homes of California. “Terry is well-positioned to take the Masonic Homes into the future, given her strong commitment to and passion for seniors, and her strategic know-how and proven relationships with community collaborators. She’s the right leader to expand our services throughout the state.”

With more than 20 years of leadership experience in the senior living sector, Quigley brings operational sophistication to Masonic Homes of California. Prior to this appointment, Quigley was Chief Operating Officer for Episcopal Communities and Services in Southern California, where she oversaw one assisted living community, and one affordable housing community, serving roughly 700 residents. A graduate of UC San Diego and San Diego State University, Quigley has spent most of her career in the California senior care industry.

“There are so many things about the organization that I love,” Quigley said of Masonic Homes of California, based in Union City. “I love their commitment to community, their commitment to underserved areas, and the fact that they have really built a culture on being a resource to youth and families. And, being part of an organization that is servant-leadership-based, with a culture of visibility and connection with the team, is very important to me.”

Charland, the current president and CEO, helmed the organization for a decade, ushering in a period of construction and improvements for two senior-living communities. “Modernizing our campuses and expanding our services has been the honor of my career,” Charland said. “And after building a strong foundation on our historic campuses over the past decade, I retire knowing Masonic Homes will be in good hands.”

The Masonic Homes of California serves seniors on two campuses, in Union City and Covina, that collectively house more than 400 residents. It also provides more than 40,000 California Masons and their families with social services and emergency financial relief. In addition, the Masonic Homes also serves an expanding number of children and families through its Masonic Center for Youth and Families, with locations in San Francisco and Covina. The Masonic Homes of California was named by Bay Area News Group as a Top Workplace in 2019 and 2020, and a national Top Workplace in Health Care in 2021. It has been recognized as a Five Star facility by CMS.

‘Welcome Spring!’

SUBMITTED BY PAT DOYNE

On May 20, the public is invited to a Reception for the art exhibit “Welcome Spring!” The Reception will be held at the A.B. Morris Adobe Art Center from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. This is a good chance to meet artists—members of A.R.T., Inc.—and experience one of Castro Valley’s historic sites, a building constructed by hand from adobe bricks in the late 1930s.

The Adobe exhibit will be open to the public on Thursdays, Fridays, and Saturdays from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Open days are May 25, 26, 27; June 1, 2, 3; and June 8, 9, 10.

Two $100 awards will be presented in honor of Maybelle Rasmussen, a local artist who died recently at the age of 104. Award winners will be chosen by Castro Valley Unified School District Superintendent, Parvin Ahmadi.

Adobe Art Center is located at 20395 San Miguel Avenue in Castro Valley. The entrance is adjacent to the skateboard park, and reached by a long driveway. The parking lot next to the building will be open.

“Joining the Rocketry Club at Newark Memorial last year was a fun way to learn more about physics and it was so gratifying when our rockets finally achieved the height and flight-time we worked towards for so many months,” said Hamza Hasan. Markus Gruendler adds “We are looking forward to the next challenge at nationals, where we will have a different height goal, determined by a coin toss the night before the competition.”

During the past year our Rocketry Club picked up garbage, helped with set-up at Newark Days Festival and sold “Space Juice” punch at school events to raise funds. We are seeking additional financial support to cover the cost of travel to D.C. for nationals and cost of supplies, especially rocket motors, which are costly. Contributions to our non-profit club at Newark Memorial High School are much appreciated and tax-deductible (non-profit Tax ID # 94-1717677).

Lincoln Aviator Grand Touring Plug-In Hybrid: Great car just misses tax credit cut-off

By MICHAEL COATES

Since we've just gone through tax time, it seems like a good time to dive into the fine Lincoln Aviator Grand Touring plug-in hybrid, because it presents the opportunity to save on your taxes next year while also cutting your gas bill.

The Aviator is a midsize three-row SUV billed as a performance luxury vehicle that in Grand Touring trim (Lincoln's code for its plug-in hybrid) is also potentially a fuel saver with 21 miles of all-electric range. You could easily drive around town using electrons for most errands and save the less efficient twin-turbo gas engine for longer trips. When the battery is drained, the vehicle's bulk keeps its gas-only fuel economy around 23 mpg.

But there is a catch. Your choice of the Grand Touring model may be limited to the stock on hand at dealers. The rumors are that new orders of the plug-in hybrid have been cut off while Ford starts work on a refresh for the 2024 model, which may include an all-electric version. So, the challenge is to take a look at the "bird in hand" or wait for an as-yet-unannounced successor.

On the table for now is a potential $7,500 tax credit for an Aviator purchase, as long as that purchase is under $80,000. That number can become a bit of a challenge with a model that starts at $70,190 (plus a $1,395 destination fee). For instance, the Black Label model we tested had an $88,230 base price. There may be ways around the price cap if you lease (some of those interpretations of the rules are just being tested) so it's best to check with your dealer first.

Black Label Luxury

The model we tested was a great example of luxury. Black Label is for premium models at Lincoln designed to give owners extra privileges such as remote delivery and service, and other amenities. The car itself drips with premium features, from a black mesh grille to four chrome-tipped exhausts. Inside, it has a panoramic sunroof, two-tone leather and suede as well as chrome accents, a head-up display and a 28-speaker Revel sound system.

The Aviator has a full complement of safety technology out of the Ford parts bin (its parent company) and an overall warranty of four years or 50,000 miles. The powertrain is covered for six years or 70,000 miles while the battery and electric power equipment has even more extensive coverage.

The devil is in the details for a luxury vehicle, especially one that might be suspect since it is based in large part on the Ford Explorer platform. In this case, there are tons of great luxury details—supportive seats up front and in the middle row (the rear seat is designed for under six-foot folk), a sumptuous maroon interview and an American-made cred that backs it all. From a walk-around, the car is beautiful, almost a work of art, with striking details.

Two Different Cars

Out on the road the Aviator PHEV is really two different cars (at least)—its EV mode and non-EV mode. A third personality might be its Sport driving mode, where a bit of the almost 500 horsepower can really be felt. In non-EV model, the car's 2 ½ ton weight wins out, even unloaded, and the twin-turbo V6 struggles to deliver anything close to what might be termed luxury performance. I didn't get to try out the Class IV trailer hitch that came with the test model or engage any of the off-road driving modes, but I doubt many Aviator owners will do so either. The interior and exterior luxury details drive home what this vehicle is all about.

On my test route up in the mountains, the Aviator acquitted itself well in EV mode (until I ran out of juice) or in Sport mode; in normal mode, the engine struggles against the tight turns edging up the hill. My thought is it would prefer a highway cruise to the beach.

The bottom line is this is a fine-looking luxury SUV ready to take the family to appropriately luxurious destinations. The $7,500 tax credit is a spiff not many of its competitors can claim, so it's worth a close look. Also check out the lease options if you can't find a model under the $80,000 MSRP cap for the credit.

Supervisor Lee and Sister County Commission Welcome Ukrainian Open World Delegation

SUBMITTED BY SANTA CLARA COUNTY

Supervisor Otto Lee and the Sister County Commission welcomed the Ukraine Open World Program Delegation with a flag raising and solidarity event at James P. McEntee, Sr. Plaza Tuesday, May 9. Board President Ellenberg and Supervisor Chavez also joined the event, and the County welcomed Ukraine Consul Anna Zaichenko to open the ceremony.

“Today was a moving display of how deeply the residents of Santa Clara County care about Ukraine,” noted Supervisor Lee. “Chair Nancy Madison and the ad-hoc committee really stepped up to bring this delegation to Santa Clara County. We are so thankful for their dedication to make this happen.”

This is the first international delegation that the County of Santa Clara has welcomed since the outbreak of the COVID-19 pandemic. The Open World Program is funded by the Congressional Office for International Leadership, COIL, and has afforded the County of Santa Clara the opportunity to host several delegations through the years. However, after the February 2022 invasion of Ukraine, the Open World Program suspended all Russian delegations and began to work with former Soviet States, including Ukraine, to bring delegations to the United States once the pandemic could make travel safer. COIL reached out to our Sister County Commission to apply to host Ukrainian delegations. In late 2022, the Sister County Commissioners submitted their application, and in early 2023, they were approved for two delegations. The first delegation arrived in Santa Clara County on May 5, 2023, and the second is scheduled for October 2023.

District 3 resident Tania Mandzy Inala performed the State Anthem of Ukraine while the two veterans from the delegation raised the Ukrainian flag during the event.

“Today, we celebrate citizen diplomacy. We welcome our Ukrainian Delegation. We open Santa Clara County to you and hope that your visit is full of learning and joy,” Supervisor Lee stated. “Ukraine is not only fighting for their own homeland, but they are also defending the entirety of Europe, to protect the basic values of freedom, democracy, and human rights. You continue to prove your strength and resolve to the world - We see you, and we support you!”

The delegation will be in Santa Clara County attending various events focused on their theme of think tanks with visits at Santa Clara University, Stanford University, and Hoover Institute. They have a formal dinner on Friday evening before departing back home on May 13. Photo collage of the flag raising included.

At the ceremony Supervisor Lee shared, “I hope that you make many new friends, build relationships, that your visit is full of learning and joy, and that you can share every moment here with your friends, and loved ones back home. We believe your visit will help strengthen your work and your community for many years to come.” He closed with, “We will work with our Congressional leaders to continue providing whatever is necessary to support your brave efforts to accomplish JUST PEACE, so that we may begin with the rebuilding and healing efforts for an even stronger Ukraine tomorrow. Slava Ukraini!”

Homelessness response Strategic Plan Underway

SUBMITTED BY CITY OF FREMONT

On Tuesday, May 2 Fremont City Council approved a service agreement with EdeColigny Consulting, LLC to develop the city's first Homelessness Response Strategic Plan. The Strategic Plan will provide the city with a comprehensive response to homelessness, long-term best-practice recommendations to assist in reducing overall homelessness, be in alignment with the Alameda County Home Together 2026 plan, and develop a framework to respond to the street level community impacts of homelessness. EdgColigny was selected for inclusion of specific elements, including:

- The inclusion of a racial equity lens intended to address the disparate impact of homelessness in the Bay Area.
- A project team of experienced professionals with decades of experience in consulting, non-profit service delivery, and local government.

- The intent to incorporate the perspective and needs of unhoused community members by including project team members with lived expertise to facilitate engagement with unhoused community members input on the plan.
 - A plan to balance the coordination of internal processes for encampment response, while developing a work product that provides a roadmap to reduce inflow into homelessness; reduce suffering of those currently experiencing homelessness, and increase solutions to resolve homelessness.
 - A comprehensive communication and stakeholder outreach plan which includes engaging Fremont's residents and business community through community work sessions and surveys.
- The assembly and implementation of the plan is anticipated to take approximately eight months, beginning with a landscape analysis of existing resources and programs, with a complete plan expected by winter of 2023/24.

However, the land also contains the historic Peterson Ranch Farmhouse, which may not survive development, and Ramirez Farm, which is currently rented by community member Ramón Ramirez for his produce stand. For many, this is a worrisome trend toward high-density housing development, and away from local agriculture and open spaces.

On Wednesday, May 24, there are plans for a rally and march to protest the proposed Quarry Lakes Freeway Connector. James Logan High School students will meet at the corner of Alvarado-Niles Road and Decoto Road at 3 p.m., and march to Ramirez Farm.

Hayward High hosts Bayshore Track & Field Championships

BY ANDREW JOSEPH

The Bayshore Championship for track and field was hosted by Hayward High on Saturday, May 13 including hundreds of athletes representing the 23 participating schools from three different leagues.

The three leagues that competed at the meet included the Mission Valley Athletic League (MVAL), Western Alameda County Conference (WACC), and Tri County Athletic League (TCAL). In the boys' competition Moreau Catholic tied with Bishop O'Dowd for first place with 44 total points each and James Logan earned third place with 32 points. Other notables for the boys include American in ninth place, Hayward in 11th place, and San Leandro who tied for 13th. During the girls' competition Castro Valley placed third with 43 points, James Logan tied with Bishop O'Dowd for fourth with 42 points, and Washington placed sixth.

"It benefits all participants at this meet to see what high level competitors are capable of and how they perform," said Hayward head coach and Bayshore Championship director Kristy Prasad. "It is good exposure for our school to be the host of the Bayshore Championship this year and it showcases our beautiful facility that we take pride in having at Hayward High."

The top six performers in each event's compiled results automatically qualify for the Meet of Champions (MOC) and there are three at-large positions available after the results of three other area meets taking place the same day.

"We've been training really hard the last five weeks for this meet and the competition only gets stiffer the further we advance," said San Leandro sprints coach Windle McNeal. "Our girls 4x100m team ran the same time today as last year's team who went on to qualify for the CIF State meet so the future is promising." That 4x100 meter time for San Leandro was 49.47 earning them fifth place.

Bryce Thomas of Moreau Catholic placed first in the boys' 400m with 48.69. Anderson-Brown earned second in the girls' 100m dash with a personal record (PR) of 12.27 and Michaelah Mendoza of James Logan placed third with a PR of 12.49. "The focus for me today was just making sure I advance to the MOCs," said Washington State football commit Taeshaun Lyons. "It means a lot to perform well today because it's like everything has come full circle to peak at the right time which is right now."

Tri-City Local Hazard Mitigation Plan

HELP YOUR COMMUNITY BE HAZARD-READY!

The Cities of Fremont, Newark, Union City, and the Alameda County Water and Union Sanitary Districts are partnering to develop a new Tri-City Multi-jurisdictional Local Hazard Mitigation Plan (LHMP). Floods, earthquakes, wildfires, and severe weather are just a few of the hazards to which the Tri-City area is vulnerable. While natural hazards such as these cannot be eliminated, we can reduce the risk they pose to our community. An LHMP is a foundational plan to reduce risk associated with natural disasters and allows each participating public agency to apply for certain Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) grants to reduce such risk. The new LHMP will also provide an important framework for each cities' floodplain management program, which may result in lower flood insurance premiums for area residents and businesses under FEMA's National Flood Insurance Program (NFIP), Community Rating System (CRS).

You are invited. We encourage the public to attend and participate in our upcoming meetings. Informational Public Meetings will explain the LHMP development process, the benefits of cities' participation in the CRS program, and how you can become involved. In addition, Planning Committee Meetings among participating agency personnel and other stakeholders – to develop the plan – are open to the public. Please select the time and location that works best for you!

Our Police Service Dogs are trained in many specialties, one of which is to help find missing people. By using a personal item that the person has touched or worn, the dog's nose can focus on that specific person's smell and follow the path where the person traveled. This talent came into practice last month after a six-year-old boy with special needs walked away from his babysitter near a local park.

Officers responded and immediately began their search of the surrounding areas with the assistance of Hayward Area Recreation Department Rangers, East Bay Regional Parks, Hayward Fire Department, a Hayward Police Drone, and our very own Hayward Police Department K-9 "Blaze". Having just completed tracking school in the weeks prior, Blaze led the search teams to the child's location within minutes. The boy was found, uninjured, in a heavily wooded area along the Hayward Plunge Trail and was safely returned to his loved ones.

Thank you to all the agencies who assisted with this search. We are grateful for the positive ending to this scary situation, and for the keen nose on our K-9 partner Blaze.
